

KANT AND STOIC ETHICS

Although it is widely recognised that many concepts central to Kant's ethics have a Stoic provenance, there has still been relatively little close scholarly examination of the significance of Stoic ethics for the development of Kant's philosophy over the Critical period and beyond. This volume brings together an intellectually diverse group of scholars from classics and philosophy to advance our understanding of this topic, taking up questions about the transmission of Stoic philosophy in Kant's intellectual context, the quality of Kant's own understanding of Stoicism, his transformation of some of its central ideas, and the topic's significance to what remains vital about Stoic and Kantian ethics today. The volume will interest those working on the history of philosophy, the nature of rationality, the philosophy of action, moral psychology, and virtue theory.

MELISSA MERRITT is currently Associate Professor at the University of New South Wales and held an Australian Research Council Future Fellowship (2019–22). She is the author of Kant on Reflection and Virtue (Cambridge, 2018), which won the 2019 North American Kant Society Book Prize.

Acknowledgements

My chief aim in this project has been to bring together ancient-philosophy specialists and Kant scholars, so that we could share our expertise to advance current understanding of Kant's relation to Stoic ethics. I would like to thank all of the contributors for being part of this project – indeed, for gamely taking up a topic that, given the intense specialisation of professional philosophy, they may not otherwise planned to work on. I would particularly like to thank Brad Inwood for practical advice at various stages, and especially for his great generosity in discussing Stoic philosophy with me over email. I would also like to thank Alix Cohen and David Bronstein for practical advice during the planning stages for the conference and volume, and Hilary Gaskin at Cambridge University Press for her guidance throughout the various editorial stages of the project.

This project has been made possible by funding from the Australian Research Council (FT180100494), for which I am enormously grateful. Philosophy at the University of New South Wales is part of the School of Humanities and Languages, which is itself part of the Faculty of Arts, Design and Architecture; I would like to thank the School and Faculty for additional material, practical, and financial support. I would especially like to thank Taira Malby for her help organizing the workshop held at UNSW in May 2023, where contributors to this volume presented initial drafts of the chapters. Finally, I would like to express my particular gratitude to Will Taylor, for his indispensable and unfailingly excellent editorial assistance, and his help throughout the whole project.

Very special thanks are due, as always, to Markos Valaris: my best friend, my love, and a truly first-rate philosopher.
