

Contents

List of Figures	page ix
Acknowledgements	xii
PART I CONTEXT
Introduction: Hobohemia and the Literary Imperative	3
1 From Tramp to Hobo: The Representation of Postbellum US Transiency	24
PART II THE VAGABOND AND THE TRAMP
2 In Search of Experience: Vagabond Travel Narratives	47
3 Vulnerable Youth and Hobosexuality in the Works of Jack London and A-No.1	79
4 ‘That’s Why the Lady Is a Tramp’: The Hidden Story of Female Transiency	107
PART III THE HOBO TRANSFORMED
5 Between Hobohemia and Academia: Nels Anderson’s Double Voice	139
6 ‘The Laureate of the Logging Camps’: Language, Food and Revolution in the Work of T-Bone Slim	167
7 ‘I’m a Hobo Myself Sometimes’: African-American Transiency in Black Vernacular Music	200

viii

Contents

Conclusion: The End of the Road? Transiency beyond the Hobo 230

Notes 243

Bibliography 315

Index 339