

Slavery in the International Women's Movement, 1832–1914

In this book, Sophie van den Elzen shows how advocates for women's rights, in the absence of their 'own' history, used the antislavery movement as a historical reference point and model. Through a detailed analysis of a wide range of sources produced over the span of almost a century, including novels, journals, speeches, pamphlets, and posters, van den Elzen reveals how the women's movement gradually diverged from a position of solidarity with the enslaved into one of opposition, based on hierarchical assumptions about class and race. This inclusive cultural survey provides a new understanding of the ways in which the cultural memory of Anglo-American antislavery was imported and adapted across Europe and the Atlantic world, and it breaks new ground in studying the 'woman–slave analogy' from a longitudinal and transnational comparative perspective. This title is also available as open access on Cambridge Core.

Sophie van den Elzen is Assistant Professor of Modern and Contemporary Literatures in English at the Department of Languages, Literature and Communication at Utrecht University. She specialises in the interrelationships of social movements, culture, and memory.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment

978-1-009-41196-7 — Slavery in the International Women's Movement, 1832–1914

Sophie van den Elzen

Frontmatter

More Information

‘Deeply researched and compellingly argued, Sophie van den Elzen’s book marks the emergence of a new stage of historical studies of Euro-American women. Bringing new life and significance to the vast international range of historical writings by women activists that featured slavery and abolitionism, its pages illuminate the era as a whole and renew the foundation for future studies of women’s activism generally.’

Kathryn Kish Sklar, author of Women’s Rights Emerges within the Antislavery Movement: A Short History with Documents, 1830–1870

‘Sophie van den Elzen has given us a fascinating study of how abolitionism provided a model for early feminism. Theoretically refined and grounded in detail, this is a tour de force. Highly recommended for everyone interested in the history of feminism or the role of cultural memory in emancipation movements.’

Ann Rigney, author of Remembering Hope: The Cultural Afterlife of Protest

‘Sophie van den Elzen offers readers a thoughtful and carefully researched inquiry into the ongoing significance of the woman–slave analogy and early nineteenth-century American antislavery campaigns as founding moments in the historical memory of the international women’s movement. Her premise is that cultural memory work, by emphasising some aspects of the historical past and blocking out others, may actually shape subsequent action.’

Karen Offen, author of The Woman Question in France, 1400–1870 and Debating the Woman Question in the French Third Republic, 1870–1920

Slaveries Since Emancipation

General Editors

Randall Miller, St. Joseph's University

Zoe Trodd, University of Nottingham

Slaveries since Emancipation publishes scholarship that links slavery's past to its present, consciously scanning history for lessons of relevance to contemporary abolitionism, and that directly engages current issues of interest to activists by contextualizing them historically.

Also in this series:

Justin Roberts, Fragile Empire: Slavery in the Early English Tropics, 1645–1720

Dexter J. Gabriel, Jubilee's Experiment: The British West Indies and American Abolitionism

Andrea Nicholson, Bearing Witness: Contemporary Slave Narratives and the Global Antislavery Movement

Genevieve LeBaron, Jessica R. Pliley, and David W. Blight, eds., Fighting Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking: History and Contemporary Policy

Hannah-Rose Murray, Advocates of Freedom: African American Transatlantic Abolitionism in the British Isles

Catherine Armstrong, American Slavery, American Imperialism: US Perceptions of Global Servitude, 1870–1914

Elizabeth Swanson and James Brewer Stewart, eds., Human Bondage and Abolition: New Histories of Past and Present Slaveries

R. J. M. Blackett, The Captive's Quest for Freedom: Fugitive Slaves, the 1850 Fugitive Slave Law, and the Politics of Slavery

Anna Mae Duane, ed., Child Slavery before and after Emancipation: An Argument for Child-Centered Slavery Studies

Slavery in the International Women's Movement, 1832–1914

Memory Work and the Legacy of Abolitionism

SOPHIE VAN DEN ELZEN

Utrecht University, The Netherlands

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press & Assessment

978-1-009-41196-7 — Slavery in the International Women's Movement, 1832–1914

Sophie van den Elzen

Frontmatter

More Information

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Shaftesbury Road, Cambridge CB2 8EA, United Kingdom

One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA

477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia

314–321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre,
New Delhi – 110025, India

103 Penang Road, #05–06/07, Visioncrest Commercial, Singapore 238467

Cambridge University Press is part of Cambridge University Press & Assessment, a department of the University of Cambridge.

We share the University's mission to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781009411967

DOI: 10.1017/9781009411943

© Sophie van den Elzen 2025

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, with the exception of the Creative Commons version the link for which is provided below, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press & Assessment.

An online version of this work is published at doi.org/10.1017/9781009411943 under a Creative Commons Open Access license CC-BY-NC 4.0 which permits re-use, distribution and reproduction in any medium for non-commercial purposes providing appropriate credit to the original work is given and any changes made are indicated. To view a copy of this license visit https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/4.0

When citing this work, please include a reference to the DOI 10.1017/9781009411943

First published 2025

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

A Cataloging-in-Publication data record for this book is available from the Library of Congress

ISBN 978-1-009-41196-7 Hardback

Cambridge University Press & Assessment has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Contents

List of Figures	page ix
Acknowledgements	xi
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	I
1 From Transnational Movement to Global Memory: Abolitionism and the Culture of Reform	30
2 Fictions, 1832–1852: Sentimental Antislavery and the Sisterhood	62
3 Archives, c. 1848: Parisian Calls for ‘Universal Emancipation’	87
4 Periodicals, 1866–1914: Slavery and the Woman Question	124
5 Histories, 1881–1914: Feminist Internationalists and the Antislavery Origin Myth	179
Concluding Remarks	217
Bibliography	227
Index	281

Figures

1.1	Detail of an antislavery petition facsimile	page 45
2.1	Willy Pogány’s poster design for the IWSA	63
3.1	Portrait of Anne Knight	88
3.2	Label by Anne Knight	101
4.1	Regular header of Belgian-Dutch socialist journal De Vrouw	132
4.2	Théophile Steinlen’s poster design La traite des blanches	170
5.1	Network representation of events and persons in comparative histories of American feminism	181
5.2	American Woman and Her Political Peers	212

Acknowledgements

Much has happened since my dissertation morphed into a book project, and I have many people to thank for their support and willingness to engage with this story. Ann Rigney is first among them. Without her intellectual curiosity, critical eye, and generosity this book would not have seen the light of day. I am also indebted to Berteke Waaldijk for lending this project her time, prudent advice, and keen attentiveness to historical silence.

I owe a debt of gratitude to the series editors of Slaveries since Emancipation, Zoe Trodd and Randall Miller, for their enthusiasm for the topic and their patience in seeing this project through. I've also benefitted immensely from the thoughtful and generative feedback from the anonymous readers of the initial manuscript. The editorial team at Cambridge University Press, Cecelia Cancellaro and Victoria Phillips, have been encouraging and forbearing.

I consider myself lucky to have had the company of some brilliant colleagues at Utrecht University, who have left their marks on this book in different ways. I am especially grateful to Clara Vlessing, Thomas Smits, Daniele Salerno, Tashina Blom, Duygu Erbil, Barnita Bagchi, Christian Wicke, Lida Amiri, Michela Borzaga, Flore Janssen, Frank Brandsma, and Susanne Knittel.

For their interest and judicious feedback on different parts and iterations of my argument, I am grateful to Maria Tamboukou, Astrid Erll, Red Chidgey, Mineke Bosch, Rosemarie Buikema, Maria Grever, Marijke Huisman, Kevin Absillis, Jenny Wüstenberg, Nancy Jouwe, Dineke Stam, Marianne Van Remoortel, and Karen Offen. I also benefitted from the feedback from colleagues in the doctoral programme of the Huizinga Institute, as well as the Mnemonics Network for Memory Studies and the Utrecht Forum for Memory Studies.

I've received sage advice and encouragement at critical junctures from Stefan Berger, Ernestine Hoegen, and Owen Holland. And, closer to home, from Lucy van den Elzen, Didi van Trijp, Anaël Tromp, Maninder Järleberg, and Eva Prakken – thank you all very much.

The helpful staff at the Atria Institute, the Bibliothèque nationale de France, the International Institute of Social History, the Friends House London, the Archiv der deutschen Frauenbewegung, and the Bibliothèque Marguerite Durand were vital to this undertaking. I'd like to thank especially Mirjam Sachse, Lisa McQuillan, and Susanne Neugebauer.

This research and publication was funded by the Dutch Research Council and has received additional support from the Feministisch Cultuurfonds Gender&wetenschap, the Utrechtse Stichting voor Literatuurwetenschappelijk Onderzoek, and the Institute of Cultural Inquiry at Utrecht University.

In 2022 we welcomed a bright little boy into our lives. Thanks, Oscar, for your good spirits and for teaching me the valuable lesson that good things in life take many hands. This book did, too. I am very grateful to Oscar's loving grandparents, Guus, Anda, Joan, and James, for making it possible for me to finish this project, with their encouragement as well as generous hands-on support. In the final stages of this project, Gabrielle and Jacqueline unexpectedly came back into my life, adding sheen to a somewhat surreal period of time. I am thankful for that, too.

Thanks cannot begin to cut it when it comes to the contribution Eoghan made to this book. I see you on every page and know you were there, in all weathers and at any hour of the day. You are my rock and my rock 'n' roll, and your willingness to endlessly talk over the difficulties of this book has made for some of the sweetest memories of the last years.

Abbreviations

AERA	American Equal Rights Association
BFASS	British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society
BnF	Bibliothèque nationale de France
ICW	International Council of Women
IWSA	International Woman Suffrage Alliance