

CONTENTS

Preface xi

1 The Epistemology of the Secret of International Law 1

1.1 A Two-pronged Epistemology 4

1.1.1 Preliminary Observations 4

1.1.1.1 Two Synchronous, Coincident, and Mutually Constitutive Necessities 5

1.1.1.2 Structure and Agency in the Epistemology of the Secret 5

1.1.1.3 The Epistemology of the Secret, the Hermeneutics of Suspicion, and Paranoid Reading 6

1.1.2 The Necessity of Secret Content 8

1.1.2.1 A Meaningful Content 9

1.1.2.2 A Permanent Surplus of Meaningful Content 11

1.1.2.3 A Truthful Content 12

1.1.2.4 A Textual Content 14

1.1.2.5 A Prefigured Content 15

1.1.3 The Necessity of Revelation 17

1.1.3.1 Revelation as an Obligation to Truth 18

1.1.3.2 Revelation as Production of an Invisible-Instantly-Made-Visible 20

1.1.3.3 Revelation as Textual Inscription 22

1.2 An Ordering Epistemology 23

1.2.1 Preliminary Remarks 27

1.2.1.1 Suppression as Production 27

1.2.1.2 Ordering as a Non-decisional Practice 27

1.2.1.3 The Literary, Hermeneutical, Critical, Economic, and Ideological Attitudes Incidental to the Epistemology of the Secret 28

1.2.2 A Mass Production of Speech Materials 29

1.2.3 The Suppression of All That Has Not Been Made an Invisible-Instantly-Made-Visible 32

1.3 The Epistemology of the Secret as an Ideology of Secretism? 35

1.4 The Epistemology of the Secret as an Economy of Secrets? 37

2	Epistemologies of the Secret Elsewhere	40
2.1	The Epistemology of the Secret of Greek Logocentrism	41
2.2	The Epistemology of the Secret of the Christian Governance of the Mind	42
2.3	The Epistemology of the Secret of Modern Thought	44
2.4	The Epistemology of the Secret of Modern Critique	49
2.5	The Epistemology of the Secret of Bourgeois Literature	51
2.6	The Epistemology of the Secret of Freudian Psychoanalysis	54
2.7	The Epistemology of the Secret of Structuralist Thought	56
2.8	An Epistemology of the Secret after Poststructuralist Thought?	60
3	Secrecy and Transparency in International Legal Literature	65
4	Manifestations of the Epistemology of the Secret of International Law	72
4.1	The Postulation of the Necessary Presence of Hidden, Unknown, Invisible Content	74
4.1.1	The Many Hidden, Unknown, Invisible Contents for Which the International Court of Justice Is Solicited	74
4.1.2	The Vast Hidden, Unknown, Invisible Universe of International Legal Scholars	78
4.2	A Necessary Act of Revelation	89
4.2.1	The International Court of Justice as a Revelatory Apparatus	90
4.2.2	International Legal Scholars as Scribes of the Invisible	94
4.3	Ordering through Mass Production and Suppression	104
4.3.1	Mass Production, Suppression, and the Sources of International Law	108
4.3.2	Mass Production, Suppression, and the Law of International Organizations	110
4.3.3	Mass Production, Suppression, and the Histories of International Law	112
4.3.4	Mass Production, Suppression, and Comparison in International Law	113
4.3.5	Mass Production, Suppression, and the Interpretation of International Law	115
5	Resistance to the Epistemology of the Secret of International Law	117
5.1	Why Resisting?	117
5.2	There Is No Way out of the Epistemology of the Secret	120
5.3	Resistance as a Practice of Obnubilation	125
5.4	Concrete Implications of the Practice of Obnubilation	132

CONTENTS ix

5.4.1	Killing Your Secret Darlings	133
5.4.2	Nebulous Words in a Nebulous World	133
5.4.3	Interpretation: From Hermeneutics to Poetics (bis)	134
5.4.4	Theoractice	137
5.4.5	Nothing to Be Represented, Everything to Be Narrated	139
5.4.6	The End of Critique?	143
	Notebook	145
	Bibliography	155
	Critical, Literary, and Philosophical Works	155
	International Law, Legal Theory, and Related Works	162
	Index	187