SPACE AND SOCIETY IN THE GREEK AND ROMAN WORLDS

We cannot properly understand history without a full appreciation of the spaces through which its actors moved, whether in the home or in the public sphere, and the ways in which they thought about and represented the spaces of their worlds. In this book Michael Scott employs the full range of literary, epigraphic and archaeological evidence in order to demonstrate the many different ways in which spatial analysis can illuminate our understanding of Greek and Roman society, and the ways in which these societies thought of, and interacted with, the spaces they occupied and created. Through a series of innovative case-studies of texts, physical spaces and cultural constructs, ranging geographically across North Africa, Greece and Roman Italy, as well as an up-to-date introduction on spatial scholarship, this book provides an ideal starting point for students and non-specialists.

MICHAEL SCOTT is an assistant professor in Classics and Ancient History at the University of Warwick, and formerly the Moses and Mary Finley Research Fellow at Darwin College, Cambridge. He is the author of Delphi and Olympia: the spatial politics of Panhellenism in the Archaic and Classical Periods (Cambridge, 2010), and has also written and edited books for interdisciplinary academic audiences and the wider public (From Democrats to Kings in 2009 and Risk (co-edited with Layla Skinns and Tony Cox) in 2011). He is active in making the study of the ancient world accessible to as wide an audience as possible by talking to schools across the country, writing for international magazines and newspapers, taking part in outreach initiatives with the Mayor of London and Olympics 2012, and writing and presenting TV documentaries for the BBC, History Channel and National Geographic.

KEY THEMES IN ANCIENT HISTORY

EDITORS

P. A. Cartledge
Clare College, Cambridge
 P. D. A. Garnsey
Jesus College, Cambridge

Key Themes in Ancient History aims to provide readable, informed and original studies of various basic topics, designed in the first instance for students and teachers of Classics and Ancient History, but also for those engaged in related disciplines. Each volume is devoted to a general theme in Greek, Roman or, where appropriate, Graeco-Roman history, or to some salient aspect or aspects of it. Besides indicating the state of current research in the relevant area, authors seek to show how the theme is significant for our own as well as ancient culture and society. By providing books for courses that are oriented around themes it is hoped to encourage and stimulate promising new developments in teaching and research in ancient history.

My thanks go to Michael Sharp at Cambridge University Press as well as Paul Cartledge and Peter Garnsey, editors of Key Themes in Ancient History, for their initial invitation to write a volume in this series, and for their constant encouragement and insight through the different stages of its planning and execution. Part of this book was written while working at the Fondation Hardt, Geneva, Switzerland, and I offer my thanks both to the Fondation for providing such an extraordinarily productive working environment and to the other scholars in residence there at the time who offered good comradeship, guidance and diversion when needed.

My thanks go also to EfA, the French Archaeological School in Athens, for allowing me to stay in their dig house on Delos. Not only did this allow me the necessary time to understand the site, but also the privilege of staying on the island. The sight of Delos' Apollo sanctuary lit by the moon will not be forgotten for a long time. My time there was also much enhanced by the excellent company and insight of several scholars working on different aspects of the Delian material, for which I offer my thanks. I had envisaged a similar trip to the archaeological site of Cyrene in Libya, but sadly this was not possible due to the turbulence in the region.

The majority of this book was written at Darwin College and the Faculty of Classics, Cambridge, during my time as Moses and Mary Finley Fellow in Ancient History at Darwin College. My thanks to the Faculty and to Darwin College for providing such a supportive and enjoyable working environment, made all the more so by my colleagues at both College and Faculty. It has been both a pleasure and an honour to work alongside you and discuss many of the issues in this book. My thanks go also to the organisers and attendees of several conferences concerned with issues of spatial analysis across a wide variety of sources, in which I had the good fortune to participate. Each provided thought-provoking analysis and discussion.

Finally, my thanks go to Dr Marion Boos from the University of Darmstadt, Germany for help with images of several tombs at Pompeii; to Maria Pia Malvezzi at the British School of Rome for help with image permissions, and to Prof. Robin Osborne for his comments on earlier drafts. In addition, I offer my sincerest thanks to Thomas O'Reilly at Cambridge University Press and his editorial team for their efficient, expert and congenial shepherding of this book through to publication. All remaining mistakes are, of course, my own.
