

Contents

Acknowledgements	page vii
Abbreviations and conventions	ix
Introduction: the Restoration, the Reformation, and the royal supremacy
Reformation and Restoration: contexts for supremacy	4
Restoration religion, history, and ideology	10
The royal supremacies	20
1 Foundations and legacies: the Reformation and the royal supremacies, 1530–1660
Establishment: 1530–1547	27
Reformation and Counter-Reformation: 1547–1553	39
Re-establishment: 1558–1603	45
Reassertion: 1603–1642	61
Revolution? 1642–1660	73
2 The crown and the cavalier Anglicans: prerogative, parliament, and ecclesiastical law
Prerogative versus parliament: the 1660s	93
Prerogative versus parliament: the 1670s	98
Prerogative versus parliament: 1689	105
Lawyers and the supremacy	115
Parliament, convocation, and ecclesiastical jurisdiction	120
3 Spiritual authority and royal jurisdiction: the question of bishops
Iure divino or iure humano ? The Restoration Church and episcopacy	130
Advocating supremacy: William Falkner and Thomas Pierce	137
Iure humano episcopacy and supremacy: Edward Stillingfleet and John Tillotson	141
Catholicity and iure divino episcopacy	148
Restraining supremacy	154

vi	Contents
4	Dissenters and the supremacy: the question of toleration	163
	The establishment of uniformity and Restoration Dissent	166
	Comprehension and indulgence, 1667–1673	171
	James II and the Dissenters	184
	Dissenters, church courts, and the supremacy	194
5	Anticlericals and ‘Erastians’: the spectre of Hobbes	203
	Consecrating the monarch	208
	Civilising the clergy	217
	Hunting Hobbists	221
6	Catholics and Anglicans: James II and Catholic supremacy	229
	Papist caesaropapism	233
	Anglicans versus Catholics	244
	A new Cromwell? The Ecclesiastical Commission versus the Church	251
	The king versus the bishops	267
	Conclusion	275
	Bibliography	284
	Index	312