

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-01541-8 - Voter Turnout: A Social Theory of Political Participation

Meredith Rolfe

Index

More information

Index

- acquaintance networks*, 88–90
 African Americans, views on importance of voting, 55
 age, and political activity, 139–140 alters, 16
 Altgeld, John P., 59
 altruism, as unconditional decision-making, 31
 American National Election Study
     (ANES), 9, 48, 54
 Ames, Ruth E., 66, 72
 anonymous dictator games, 74
 Asch, Solomon E., 23, 25
Atlanta Journal-Constitution, 47, 48, 50, 60 attractor states, 37 authority relationships, 45 automatic voter registration, 11

 bargaining games
     standard example, 65
 Bearman, Peter, 46
 behavioral economics, 6
 biased random network simulation, 86
Black Female indicator, 136–137
Black Southerner indicator, 136–137 Blais, André, 12
 bounded rationality, 3, 4
 Brady, Henry, 98, 137–138, 147
 Burks, S., 76
 business acumen, in social dilemmas, 66

 campaigns
     choice of target groups, 101
     conditional decision-making, 100–101
     expenditures and turnout, 13 and mobilization, 15
     salience, 108–109
         as network size, 109–111
     strategic mobilization perspective,
         99–100
 Campbell, Karen E., 91 candidate presence, 171 candidate residence, 171, 176
 canvassing, and mobilization, 14–16
 Carpenter, Jeffrey, 76 Charlotte, North Carolina, municipal elections, 110
 Cialdini, Robert, 21–22, 24
 citizen competence, and voting, 60–61
 citizenship, in social dilemmas, 65–67
City Size variable, 136–137 civic duty promotion in media, 61
 civic voluntarism model, 140
 Civic Voluntarism study (1989–1990), 137
 closeness of election outcome, and turnout, 13
 cobweb method, 80
 colored squares experiment, 24
 Columbia School, 16
 commodification of labor, 45 communal relationships, 45 compulsory voting, 11

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-01541-8 - Voter Turnout: A Social Theory of Political Participation

Meredith Rolfe

Index

More information

224

Index

- conditional choice, 4–5
  - applicability to voting, 180
  - generalizability to other situations, 180–181
  - mathematical approach, 181
  - overview, 17–18, 22
  - and perception of reality, 63
  - and social context, 17
  - sources of individual variation, 180
- conditional cooperation, 64
  - in local social networks, 84–85
  - simulations, 191–193
  - validation of the programmed model, 193–194
- conditional decision-making, 5–7
  - evidence for, 22–25
  - involving complex heuristics, 26
  - involving political attitudes, 26–27
  - mathematical models, 28
    - constructing, 39–41, 78–79
    - dynamics, 36–39
    - reasonableness checks, 82
    - robustness checks, 82–84
  - overview, 27–28
  - social dilemmas, 6
  - when others not present, 25–26
- conditional decision rules, 28, 36
  - basic rules, 5–6
  - composite weighted rule, 34–35
  - terminology, 35–36
- contagion dynamics, 79–82,
- contextual explanations of voter turnout, 10–11
- core personal networks, 90
- cost-benefit logic
  - empirical problems with, 9–10
  - inadequacies of, 2, 7–9
  - theoretical problems with, 7–9, 107–108
- Cox, Gary W., 14, 99, 120, 137
- critical mass level of cooperation, 33
- Current Population Study series, 12
- Daily Herald (Chicago)*, 47, 50, 51, 57, 61
- descriptive norms, 24
- dictator bargaining games, 65
- diffusion dynamics, 79–82
- direct mobilization, individual turnout, 118–121
- distribution of decision rules, 6, 38–39
- doormen, and tenants, 46
- Downs, Anthony, An Economic Theory of Democracy (1957), 8, 62
- D-term, 8, 10
- dynamics, in conditional decision models, 36–39
- Economic Theory of Democracy, An* (Downs 1957), 8, 62
- education
  - and distribution of decision rules, 117–118
  - and high-salience elections, 125–126
  - and political interest, 114–117
    - comparison of social cooperation and civic voluntarism, 141
  - and propensity to vote, 2
    - comparison of social cooperation and civic voluntarism, 2, 10, 182
    - linkage mechanism, 2, 10, 182
  - as proxy for social network status, 17–18
  - and unconditional cooperation, 114–115
  - data sources, 129–130
  - fall in turnout with rise in college degrees, 183–184, 187–188
  - homophily in U.S. society, 132–134
  - social theory model implications, 126–129
  - study results, 177
- educational social worlds, 134–135
- egos, 16
- election closeness, coding, 160
- election day holidays, 101–102
- electoral institutions, 12–13
- Elster, Jon, 76
- Engelmann, Dirk, 75
- equality-based interactions, 45
- equity relationships, 45
- fairness
  - appearance of, 69
  - beliefs of economists, 67
  - social dilemmas, 66
- first movers, 19
  - social theory of voter turnout, 102–103
- Fischbacher, Urs, 75
- Geertz, Clifford, 42
- gender, as predictor of turnout
  - probability, 138
- general friendship networks, 90
- General Social Survey (GSS), 48, 50, 116, 130, 137
- methodological notes, 199–200

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-01541-8 - Voter Turnout: A Social Theory of Political Participation

Meredith Rolfe

Index

More informationIndex

225

- Gerber, Alan S., 27, 178, 188
 Girvan, Michelle, 86
 Gosnell, Harold Foote, Non-Voting (1924),
     2, 7–8, 10, 54
 Gould, Roger V., 33
 Granovetter, Mark S., 29, 84, 181, 189, 194
 graphical method, 80
 Green, Donald P., 178, 188
 grid-based network simulations, 86 group exchanges, 67
- Hansen, Mark, 15, 99, 120, 178
 heuristics, 3, 5. See also rule of thumb
 Huckfeldt, Robert, 126
- identity content, 44
 income, and turnout, 177
 indirect mobilization, 14–15
initial activity, 37, 38–39 initial propensity to vote, and mobilization, 15
 institutions as context, 11
     costs, 11–12
- Jin, Emily, 86, 186, 191, 195–196
 JinGir network construction method,
     195–196
 Junn, Jane, 17–18
- Lazarsfeld, Paul Felix, 10
 Ledyard, John, 70
 Lee, Barrett A., 91 line length experiments, 22–24 litter collecting, 31–33
 littering, 24
 local social networks
     conditional cooperation in, 84–85 simulating turnout on, 92–96
     simulation of, 85–88
     types of friendship ties, 88
Low Education World indicator, 134–136, 146
- Macy, Michael W., 86
Marital Status variable, 140
 Marwell, Gerald, 66, 72, 96
 McDonald, Michael P., 158 mean-matching conditional decision rule, 31–33
     social dilemma studies, 72–73
 median-matching conditional decision rule 33–34
     social dilemma studies, 73
 Merriam, Charles Edward, Non-Voting
     (1924), 2, 7–8, 10, 54
 Messick, D. M., 66
 microfoundation for social cognition, 12, 180
 minimax regret decision-making, 9
 mobilization and canvassing, 14–16
     by strategic politicians, 14
     data sources, 159–162
 motivational stories, discontinuity with evidence, 23, 25
 motivations, and social theory of turnout, 7
- name generators, 88
 network centrality, 87
 network position, 87
 network size, 38–39, 86
 networks, survey data available, 87
New York Times, 47, 50, 58–59, 62
 Newman, Mark, 86
 Nie, Norman H., 17–18
Non-Voting (Merriam and Gosnell), 2, 7–8, 10, 54
- O'Connor, Justice, 60
Occupational Prestige variable, 146, 147
 Oliver, Pamela, 96
 Olson, Mancur, 96
 Ordeshook, Peter C., 8
outcome state, 37
- paradox of voter turnout, 8 and conditional choice, 3 partisanship, 9
     social theory of turnout, 178, 184–185
Parental Education variable, 140, 147–148
Partisan Strength variable, 140 partisanship, attempts to resolve paradox of voter turnout, 9 party mobilization, 13
 personal networks
     data collection, 88
     degree, 86
     empirical estimates, 91–92
     density, 86–87
     empirical estimates, 91–92
     types, 91
Political Discussion frequency variable, 140

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-01541-8 - Voter Turnout: A Social Theory of Political Participation

Meredith Rolfe

Index

More information

226

Index

- political interest
  - as D-term, 10
  - distribution in population, 114–117
- Popkin, Samuel L., 158
- PR (proportional representation), 12–13
- presidential elections, closeness of election
  - outcome, 13
- previous election turnout, and turnout
  - decision, 15
- public goods games 24–25
  - standard example, 65
- quality of contact, and mobilization, 15–16
- Rabin, Matthew, 69
- racial segregation, as conditional
  - responsiveness, 29
- real-world social networks, simulation, 86
- Rehnquist, Justice, 60
- relationships, social meanings, 44–45
- religious attendance, as predictor of
  - political activity, 138–139
- Religious Liberalism* indicator, 136–137
- repeated public goods games, 74
- resistance to influence, 38–39
- resource-based theory of voter turnout, 98–99
- reverse-small world experiments, 88
- Riker, William H., 8
- Rogers, Todd, 27
- Rosenbluth, Frances McCall, 120, 137
- Rosenstone, Steven, 15, 99, 120, 178
- rules of thumb, 5
- rural location, and voter turnout, 10
- Sanders, Elizabeth, 10
- scale-free networks, 89
- Schelling, Thomas C., 29, 181
- Schlozman, Kay, 98, 137–138, 147
- Schudson, M., 47, 49, 59–60
- self-reports, value of, 25
- situational parameter, 43
- small-world experiments, 88
- snowball samples, 90
- social cleavages, 38–39
- social context tradition, 16–18
- social dilemmas
  - citizenship, 65–67
  - communality, 69
  - conditional decisions, 6
  - distribution of decision rules, 69–70
  - costs, 75–77
  - experimental manipulations, 73–75
  - self-reports, 72–73
- equality, 67–68
- similarity to voting, 66–67, 77
- social identity, 52, 66, 67
- social influence models, 126
- Social Isolation* variable, 136, 146
- social location, 38–39
- social meaning, as people and
  - relationships, 43–46
- social networks
  - context, 122–123
  - shape, 17
  - size, 130
- social pressure to vote, 7
- social roles, 67
- social situations, 29–30, 36, 43
- under social theory of voter turnout*
  - campaigns, 100–101
  - comparison with civic resources*
    - perspective for low salience elections*, 151
  - campaign use of social ties*, 162
- data sources, 156
  - mobilization, 159–162
  - socioeconomic status, 157
  - turnout rates, 157–159
  - activity correlation to salience and funds*, 162
  - campaign support*, 163
  - fundraising*, 162–163
  - previous candidates*, 164
  - reaching voters*, 163–164
- level of turnout, 155–156
- rationale for low turnout, 152–153
- who will turnout, 153–155
- comparison with civic voluntarism, 141
  - education and political interest, 141
  - education and turnout, 141–144
  - multivariate analysis, 144–148
- cross-national turnout variation, 101–106
- education, 131–136, 148–150
- first movers, 102–103
- individual variation in turnout, 113
  - direct mobilization, 118–121
  - indirect mobilization, 121–124
  - individual tendencies to use decision
    - rules, 113–118
- intranational turnout variation, 106–109
- likelihood of political mobilization, 136–137

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-01541-8 - Voter Turnout: A Social Theory of Political Participation

Meredith Rolfe

Index

More informationIndex

227

- low salience elections, 151
  - turnout patterns, 152–156
- overview, 98
- salience and costs, 111–113
- salience as network size, 109–111
- variables utilized, 137–140
- social theory of voter turnout, 3–4
  - calibration using empirical data, 181–182
- comparison with civic resources
  - perspective for low salience elections
- campaign use of institutional ties, 164–165
  - African American community, 165–168
  - racial variations, 165
- campaign use of social ties
  - neighbors, 164
- precinct level analysis, 169–176
- comparison with civic voluntarism
  - education and turnout, 182
- implications, 185–189
- justification by empirical performance, 182–183
- making sense of existing research, 183–185
  - overview, 178–179
  - use of conditional choice, 179–182
- social worlds indicator, 124
- standing ovation, as conditional
  - responsiveness, 28–30
- Stehlik-Barry, Kenneth, 17–18
- strategic mobilization perspective, on
  - campaigns, 99–100
- strategic politicians, mobilization
  - by, 14
- street musician experiment, 21–22
- Strogatz, Steven H., 186
- taboo tradeoffs, 45
- Tenbrunsel, A. E., 66
- Thies, Michael F., 120, 137
- threshold dynamics, 80
- Tit-for-Tat strategy, 33
- trajectory of changes, 37
- turnout decision
  - as conditional response to decisions of social network, 4
  - model, 96–97
- U.S. Presidential elections, social theory
  - of voter turnout simulations, 102–103
- unconditional actors, 5
- unconditional decision-making rule, 31
  - experimental isolation of, 74–75
  - social dilemma studies, 72
- unfairness, punishment of, 67
- Van Dijk, E., 67–68
- Verba, Sidney, 98, 114, 137–138, 147
- Verhoogen, E., 76
- voter registration
  - as barrier to voting, 3, 11
  - as cost, 102
  - in social theory of voter turnout, 102
- voter turnout, questions posed by, 1–3
- voting
  - as act fundamental to American citizenship, 48–50, 62–63
  - dissenting views, 51
  - non-voter views, 53–56
  - partisan views, 51–53
  - as act of American communality, 58–59
  - as act of democratic equality, 57–58
  - market pricing, 61–62
  - as normatively desirable, 7–8
  - as part of authority relationship, 59–61
  - relevance of social dilemmas, 66–67, 77
  - social meaning of*, 19, 42–43
    - data and methods used, 46–48
- voting reforms, 2
  - absentee voting, 2
  - Motor Voter, 2
- Voting Rights Act (1965), and voter turnout, 10
- voting-eligible population estimations, 158–159
- Washington Post*, 47, 49–50
- Watts, Duncan J., 186
- wealth, and propensity to vote, 2
- weekend elections, 11
- Wilke, H., 67–68
- Work for the Government* indicator, 136–137
- yard signs, 100–101