MEDICINE AND PUBLIC HEALTH IN LATIN AMERICA

A HISTORY

Despite several studies on the social, cultural, and political histories of medicine and of public health in different parts of Latin America and the Caribbean, local and national focuses still predominate, and there are few panoramic studies that analyze the overarching tendencies in the development of health in the region. This comprehensive book summarizes the social history of medicine, medical education, and public health in Latin America and places it in dialogue with international currents in medicine and health. Ultimately, this text provides a clear, broad, and provocative synthesis of the history of Latin American medical developments while illuminating the recent challenges of global health in the region and other developing countries.

Marcos Cueto is a professor at Casa de Oswaldo Cruz, Fiocruz, in Rio de Janeiro and a researcher at Instituto de Estudios Peruanos, Lima.

Steven Palmer is Associate Professor of History and Canada Research Chair in History of International Health at the University of Windsor, Ontario.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book was made possible thanks to the help of the archivists and librarians who have taken such good care of the materials cited and used in this work. Thanks also to the many colleagues who carried out research and produced a sound body of work on the history of medicine and public health in Latin America. Marcos Cueto thanks three institutions, crucial for time and support for research and dialogue with colleagues: the Instituto de Estudios Peruanos of Lima; the Casa de Oswaldo Cruz of Fiocruz in Rio de Janeiro; and the Department of International History of the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva, where he was a visiting professor during the spring term of 2014. His stay in Geneva was made possible thanks to the Pierre du Bois Foundation, to which Marcos Cueto is also grateful. Steven Palmer would like to thank the Canada Research Chairs program and the University of Windsor for generous support during the research and writing of this book, as well as his colleagues in the Department of History for providing a wonderful intellectual milieu. Both authors would like to acknowledge Eric Crahan, whose editorial enthusiasm got this project off the ground; Stuart Schwartz, editor of the series, who gave us feedback and support; and Deborah Gershonowitz at the Press, who made sure it would come to fruition.
