CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-02705-3 - Learn to Write Badly: How to Succeed in the Social Sciences
Michael Billig
Index
More information

Index

academic capitalism, 19 academic competition, 5, 20–1, 24 academic employment conditions of work, 19–20 increase in research, 22–3 number of teachers, 18–19 pay and financial rewards, 20, 23 working conditions, 12–13 academic journals, 24–5 editorial policies, 34–9, 62 favouring technical terms, 35 future prospects, 209–10 impact factors, 153, 155
  increase in, 27
  peer review, 36
academic language as a condition of academic life, 40, 58, 62–3 academic literacies, 55–6 academic publishing decline of monograph, 28 expansion of, 22–30
academic writing addressed to specialists, 14–15, 86, 148, 149–50 aesthetic criticisms, 37–8 difficult to understand, 2, 3 general cross-disciplinary features, 55 high rates of nouns, 48 increasing use of nouns, 81
  'puffed up' words, 43, 74–5 recommendations for improving, 8 acronyms, 85–90
  used to promote approaches, 86–90 advertising, 53, 114, 141–2 African universities, 23 agent-deletion, 117, 120–1, 122–3 Allport, Gordon, 184
Andreski, Stanislav, 3, 4–5, 8, 12, 70
'antecedent recognition', 108 Arendt, Hannah, 2
auditing universities, 23–4
'autocondimentation', 71
'automaticity', 194–9

Bargh, John, 194–9, 200–1, 202, 205
Barthes, Roland, 93–4
Bateson, Gregory, 212–14
Beck, Ulrich, 143, 156–8, 159, 174
Becker, Samuel, 29
Bem, Daryl, 73–4, 181, 202
Berger, Peter, 7, 106, 107–8, 133, 149
Biber, Douglas, 81–3, 128, 129, 130, 136, 139–40, 183
Blanshard, Brand, 3, 5
Bourdieu, Pierre, 40–6, 47, 48, 54, 57, 58, 73, 90–4
British Journal of Sociology, 143, 144–5, 156
Brown, Rupert, 184, 185

Chinese universities, 21 citation scores, 24–5, 151, 153, 155–3 clausal versus nominal writing, 137, 213–14 community colleges, 21–2 conferences, 64–5
congruent pattern of language, 127–8 conversation analysis, 88, 144, 161–74 adjacency pairs, 164–5 creating conversational things, 164–8 doing being a conversation analyst, 173–4 stages of analysis, 166–7, 169–70 technical terminology, 163, 168–73 transition relevance place, 85, 164 turn taking, 162
  use of 'orientate', 168–72 corpus linguistics, 81–3
'cosmopolitanization', 156–8 critical discourse analysis (CDA), 87–8, 116, 120–4, 140–1 Culler, Jonathan, 90–1

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-02705-3 - Learn to Write Badly: How to Succeed in the Social Sciences
Michael Billig
Index
More information

Danziger, Kurt, 178
Dawkins, Richard, 176
de Quincey, Thomas, 96
definitions, 75–6
disciplines, academic, 66 development of disciplines, 13–17 different languages, 55 fragmented, 30–2, 33–4 discursive psychology, 61–2 euphemisms, 71

experimental social psychology, 7–8, 31–2, 176–205 absence of frequencies and individual scores, 192–4, 196–9 concepts imprecise, 183–5 desire to be scientific, 130–1, 176, 178–9 experimental design, 191–2 impersonal style of writing, 130–2 language of variables, 187–90 operationalizing concepts, 186–7 studying variables not people, 185–90, 204 supposed superiority to common sense, 180–1, 205 use of statistics, 191–2, 197–8 writing to conceal and repress, 203–5 writing to exaggerate, 199–203

Fairclough, Norman, 134, 135, 140–1 fast scholarship, 26 fictional things, 43, 78, 123, 128, 137, 155
Foucault, Michel, 144–8, 152, 154, 157, 174
Fowler, Roger, 116–19, 120, 124, 138–9, 154 Freud, Sigmund, 2, 4, 96–103 action language, 98, 99–100 case histories, 96–7, 99–100 concept of repression, 99–103 mental mechanisms, 97–8, 101–2 Oedipus complex, 101–2 technical writing imprecise, 101–2 two styles of writing, 97–9 Frey, Bruno, 36, 62

Gigerenzer, Gerd, 181, 187, 190, 192, 203
Goldthorpe, John, 144
governmentality, 144–55 creating 'governmentality studies', 151–2, 154 different forms of, 151–2 origin of concept, 144–8 Gramsci, Antonio, 92–3
guidebooks for academic writing, 19–25

Halliday, Michael A.K., 51, 124–8, 129, 135, 140, 154, 164 hedging, 55
higher education
  expansion of, 17–19
historians, 207
Honneth, Axel, 108–9, 113
Hundt, Marianne, 141–2
Hutchby, Ian, 169–72

'ideational metafunction', 49–53

James, C.L.R., 2, 10, 67
James, William, 5–6, 10, 15–16, 45–6, 65–6, 70, 71, 77 jargon concept of, 70–1
  conferring status, 72, 76, 84–5, 96 criticisms against, 70–2 defence of, 72–7
  predominance of nouns, 69–70, 72
Johnson, Samuel, 79
Just Being Difficult?, 90, 91

Lacan, Jacques, 4, 99
language importance of negation, 92–3 treated as a thing, 91–2 use by authorities, 117–18, 154
Language and Social Control, 116–18, 122
Lukács, Georg, 108

Marx, Karl, 33, 105–6, 148
mass culture, 28–9
'massification', 17–18, 75–6
'mediatization', 110–12, 113–14
mediopassive voice, 141–2 Meehl, Paul, 190
metaphors, 139, 159, 160–1
Milgram, Stanley, 193–4, 196
Miller, David, 144–52
'mobilities', 157, 158–61
Moon, Claire, 144, 151

name-dropping, 49–51, 52, 57–8
natural sciences
  avoiding personifying physical world, 127–8 creating language of things, 126–7 different from social sciences, 6–7, 30–1, 133–4, 176–7 naming processes as things, 124–7 networking, 63–5
Newspeak, 116–17, 133
Newton, Isaac, 126, 129

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-02705-3 - Learn to Write Badly: How to Succeed in the Social Sciences
Michael Billig
Index
More information

nominalization, 7, 84, 115–16, 117–20, 120–1, 132–7 as count and mass noun, 136 as entity, 136
  as process, 134–6
  definition, 134
  different uses of term, 133, 134–7
  use in natural sciences, 125–7 noun phrases comprised of nouns
  increase in, 69, 81–5 lack of clarity, 81–5
  use in formal language, 67–8 use in scientific writing, 126 nouns academics favouring over verbs, 74–5, 77–9, 79–80, 146–8, 158–9, 182 rates in newspapers and academic writing, 81–5 using adjectives as nouns, 78–9 ordinary language, 9–10, 50, 74, 76–7, 90–4, 181 Orwell, George, 2, 10, 111, 116–17, 211–12, 212–13, 214

Parsons, Talcott, 4
passive voice, 128–32
  less informative than active voice, 7, 119–20 not identifying agents, 167–8 use in methods sections, 129
  use in natural sciences, 128–9 use in social sciences, 130–2 passivization, 115–16, 117–20, 120–1 phenomenography, 49, 53 postgraduate study, 3, 54–66 acquiring promotional culture, 63–4 form of acculturation, 54 learning academic language, 41–2, 56–7, 123–4, 173 learning an approach, 6, 59–63
  pressure to publish, 62
  socialised into a discipline, 54–5, 57–8
pressure to publish, 5–6, 24–6
Priestley, Joseph, 126, 127
Prior, Paul, 54, 56–8, 60, 61, 63 psychology journals, 16, 28, 36–9 public intellectuals, 8–9 publications, boosting number of, 25–6 Publish or Perish, 25

recommendations for improving writing, 208–9, 211–15 avoid big nouns, 213–14 avoid jargon, 212–13
  populate writing, 215
  use active not passive voice, 213 reification, 7, 10, 103–9, 138 accomplished by academic language, 104, 121 as a form of forgetting, 106 history of concept, 105–6 itself a form of reification, 107–9 use of noun rather than 'reify', 7, 107–8 research funding, 22
research, expansion of, 5–6, 19–22
Rose, Nikolas, 144–52

Sacks, Harvey, 162–3, 173
Schafer, Roy, 98–9
Scheff, Thomas, 144, 180
Schegloff, Emanuel, 163, 164, 165, 167–8, 174
Schulz, Winfried, 110–12, 113–14 self-promotion, 47, 113–14 academic culture of, 5, 24, 65
  promoting an approach, 34–5, 38–9, 53, 139, 140–1 use of acronyms, 87–90
Sennett, Richard, 43, 208
Smith, Adam, 14–15
'social categorization', 182–5, 187, 188
Social Construction of Reality, 106, 107 Social Science Jargon Buster, 73, 77, 104 social scientific approaches, 33–5, 59 competing against rivals, 60–2 creating things, 59–60, 121, 122–4, 150–1, 157–61, 171–2 labelling approaches, 60, 68–9 need to have one, 38–9, 49–50, 52
  promoting an approach, 113–14 recruiting followers, 59 social scientific writing based on ordinary language, 74, 93 deleting agents, 120–1 depicting concepts as agents, 107, 108, 113–14, 121, 138–42, 152, 158, 166, 172 depicting people as objects, 149–50, 159–60 imprecise, 49, 111–12, 134–7 similarity to managerial language, 94 status of nouns, 77–80
  unpopulated style, 37–8, 42–3, 95, 108–9, 112, 146, 157, 189–90 sociology, 7
  as study of society, 156 creating sociological things, 144–8 divided discipline, 8, 32, 56 number of journals, 27–8

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-02705-3 - Learn to Write Badly: How to Succeed in the Social Sciences
Michael Billig
Index
More information

Sokal, Alan, 3–4, 176
specialist readers, academics as, 27–8, 29 Starfield, Sue, 48–9, 50–1, 51–2 statistical significance, 193, 202–3 systemic functional linguistics, 49, 53

Tajfel, Henri, 1–2, 177–8, 182, 183–4, 187, 188 technical language, 15 emptiness of, 50, 51
  increasing lengths of words, 74–5 justifications for using, 6–7 status of, 45, 50
textbooks discourse analysis, 122–4
  natural sciences, 179–80
  social psychology, 179, 180–1
Tucker, Abraham, 76–7
Turner, John, 183, 184–5

undergraduate students, 46–52 learning academic terminology, 44–5, 48, 73 studies of essays, 40–1, 43–6, 47–53 superficiality of writing, 44, 54 universities
  development of modern research university, 13–14
  expansion of, 18–19
university departments, 14 university league tables, 20–1 university managers, 19, 66, 85–6 Urry, John, 143, 156, 158–61

Vaihinger, Hans, 128
van Leeuwen, Theo, 122–4, 133 verbs, decline in academic writing, 79–83

Wittgenstein, Ludwig, 10–11
Wodak, Ruth, 140–1
Wooffitt, Robin, 165, 166, 169–72
Wundt, Wilhelm, 16–17, 45, 70, 71, 178

Zimbardo, Philip, 182

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org