Latin was for many centuries the common literary language of Europe, and Latin literature of immense range, stylistic power and social and political significance was produced throughout Europe and beyond from the time of Petrarch (c. 1400) well into the eighteenth century. This is the first available work devoted specifically to the enormous wealth and variety of neo-Latin literature, and offers essential background to the understanding of this material, in twenty-three chapters written by leading scholars – sixteen of which are devoted to individual forms. Each contributor relates a wide range of fascinating but now little-known texts to the handful of more familiar Latin works of the period, such as Thomas More’s Utopia, Milton’s Latin poetry and the works of Petrarch and Erasmus. All Latin is translated throughout the volume.

VICTORIA MOUL is Senior Lecturer in Latin Language and Literature at King’s College London. She is a leader in the field of early modern Latin and English literature, with wide-ranging publications including articles on neo-Latin elegy, lyric and didactic poetry and Milton, Jonson, Donne and Cowley, as well as the reception of Horace, Pindar and Virgil. Her previous publications include Jonson, Horace, and the Classical Tradition (Cambridge, 2010) and a translation of George Herbert’s complete Latin poetry with introduction and notes, for a new edition of Herbert edited with John Drury (George Herbert: Complete Poems, 2015). She is working on an anthology of neo-Latin verse, with commentary, and a major book on the interaction between neo-Latin and English poetry in Britain, 1550–1700.

VIRGINIA COX is Professor of Italian Studies at New York University. She is the author of The Renaissance Dialogue (Cambridge, 1992); Women’s Writing in Italy, 1400–1650 (2008); The Prodigious Muse: Women’s Writing in Counter-Reformation Italy (2011); and A Short History of the Italian Renaissance (2015).

ROBERT CUMMINGS (1942–2015) was a scholar of the English, Scottish, and European Renaissance whose interests ranged far and wide. In recent years he co-edited volume II (1550–1660) of The Oxford History of Literary Translation in English, won the BCLA/BCLT (now ‘John Dryden’) Translation Prize for his English translations of George Herbert’s Latin Poems, edited Robert Graves’ versions of Apuleius, Suetonius and Lucan, and served as Review Editor for the journal Translation and Literature. Robert, sadly, died before he was able to oversee the final stages of editing, and some details of his chapter were completed by the editor.

TOM DENEIRE, Ph.D. (2009), Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, researched (neo-) Latin epistolography and stylistics at that university, and participated in an NWO (Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research) project on bilingual humanist poetry at the Huygens ING Institute (The Hague). In 2014 he was appointed Curator of the Special Collections of Antwerp University Library, where he leads cataloguing, exhibition and digitization projects. He is editor of De Gulden Passer, international journal for book history.

JULIA HAIG GAISER is Eugenia Chase Guild Professor Emeritus in the Humanities and Research Professor in Latin at Bryn Mawr College. Her books include Catullus and His Renaissance Readers (1993), Pierio Valeriano...

Nigel Griffin taught at the universities of Manchester and Oxford. He now lives in south-west France.

Paul Gwynne is Professor of Medieval and Renaissance Studies at The American University of Rome. He received his Ph.D. from the Warburg Institute, University of London. Areas of research focus on late fifteenth- and early sixteenth-century Italy; the rise and diffusion of Italian Humanism. These interests are reflected in a number of articles and chapters in books as well as a trilogy of monographs which review the production of neo-Latin poetry in Rome, 1480–1600: Poets and Princes: the Panegyric Poetry of Johannes Michael Nagonius (2013); Patterns of Patronage in Renaissance Rome. Francesco Sperulo: Poet, Prelate, Soldier, Spy (2015) and Francesco Benci and the Rise of Jesuit Epic (forthcoming). The latter volume will include a complete edition, with translation and commentary of Benci’s epic Quinque Martyres, and discuss Jesuit epic in a global context.

Estelle Haan is Professor of English and Neo-Latin Studies at The Queen’s University of Belfast. She has authored/edited thirteen books on the neo-Latin poetry of Milton, Marvell, Gray, Addison, Vincent Bourne, and William Dillingham, and has edited Milton’s Latin poetry for *The Yasmin Haskell, FAHA, is Cassamarca Foundation Chair in Latin Humanism at the University of Western Australia and a Foundation Chief Investigator in the Australian Research Council Centre of Excellence for the History of Emotions: Europe 1100–1800. She is the author of Loyola’s Bees: Ideology and Industry in Jesuit Latin Didactic Poetry (2003) and Prescribing Ovid: The Latin Works and Networks of the Enlightened Dr Heerkens (2013), as well as of many chapters on neo-Latin poetry, the early modern Society of Jesus, and history of psychiatry and emotions. Her current interests lie in the Latin literature of the Suppression of the Society of Jesus.

L. B. T. Houghton is Teaching Fellow in Classics at the University of Reading, Teaching Fellow in Latin at University College London, and Associate Lecturer in Greek and Latin at Birkbeck College, University of London. He has edited three collections of essays: with Maria Wyke, Perceptions of Horace (Cambridge, 2009); with Gesine Manuwald, Neo-Latin Poetry in the British Isles (2012); and with Marco Sgarbi, Virgil and Renaissance Culture (forthcoming). Other publications on neo-Latin literature include a chapter on Renaissance Latin love elegy in the recent Cambridge Companion to Latin Love Elegy (2013), and several articles on the reception of Virgil’s fourth Eclogue.

Craig Kallendorf is Professor of Classics and English at Texas A&M University. He is the author or editor of twenty-one books, the most recent of which is The Protean Virgil, Material Form and the Reception of the Classics (2015), and 150 articles, book chapters, and reference book entries, many in the area of Neo-Latin Studies. A recipient of major grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Loeb Classical Library Foundation, he gave the annual lecture for the Bibliographical Society of America in 2015 and is immediate past president of the International Association for Neo-Latin Studies.

Sari Kivistö, Ph.D., is Director of the Helsinki Collegium for Advanced Studies, University of Helsinki. Her recent research publications include...

Marc van der Poel is Professor of Latin at Radboud University, Nijmegen. His area of expertise lies at the crossroads between Latin philology and ancient rhetoric and its receptions. He is working on a new edition of Rudolph Agricola’s De inventione dialectica, and is the current editor of Rhetorica. A Journal of the History of Rhetoric.

Joel C. Relihan is Professor of Classics at Wheaton College in Massachusetts, where he also serves as Research Compliance Officer. His current projects are an annotated translation of ps.-Lucian, The Ass, and a large literary study, Panopticon: A History of Menippean Satire.

Keith Sidwell is Professor Emeritus of Latin and Greek at University College Cork and Adjunct Professor of Classics in the Department of Classics and Religion, University of Calgary. His neo-Latin research interests are focused on Lucian’s reception in the Renaissance and Irish Latin poetry. Recent books are The Tipperary Hero: Dermot Ó Meara’s Ormonius (1615) with David Edwards (2011) and Poema de Hibernia: A Jacobite Epic on the Williamite Wars with Pádraig Lenihan (2017). He has also contributed to the Oxford Handbook of Neo-Latin.

Stefan Tilg is Professor of Latin at the University of Freiburg. Previously he was the first director of the Ludwig Boltzmann Institute for Neo-Latin Studies in Innsbruck. His main neo-Latin research interests are drama and fiction. He is the co-editor (with Sarah Knight) of the Oxford Handbook of Neo-Latin (2015).

Terence Tunberg earned his Ph.D. in Classical Philology with a Medieval Studies component at the University of Toronto in 1986. He is currently a professor of Classics at the University of Kentucky. He has published many studies of neo-Latin prose style and eloquence, as well as several articles devoted to the question of imitation in neo-Latin.

Acknowledgements

This book has been long in the making and has incurred many debts. I am grateful to all the contributors as well as to Michael Sharp at Cambridge University Press for their collective patience and good humour over several years and repeated interruptions of various kinds. Thanks are also due to the anonymous readers for their comments. For assistance and advice at various stages of the project, I would like to thank in particular Stefan Tilg, Nigel Griffin, Gesine Manuwald, Fiachra Mac Góráin and Robert Cummings (who, very sadly, died before the book appeared). Clare Parsons was a friend beyond compare, especially through two long periods of serious illness and seemingly endless hospital visits. Above all, I thank my husband, David Todd, for his unstinting love and support, and for sharing all my pride and pleasure in our little family.
