THE BLACK SEA AND THE EARLY CIVILIZATIONS OF EUROPE, THE NEAR EAST AND ASIA

The Black Sea lies at the junction of three major cultural areas: Europe, central Asia and the Near East. It plays a crucial role in enduring discussions about the impact of complex Near Eastern societies on European societies, and the repercussions of early urbanisation across Eurasia. This book presents the first comprehensive overview of the Black Sea region in the prehistoric period. It penetrates artificial boundaries imposed by traditions, politics and language to encompass both the European and Asiatic coasts and both Eastern European and Western scholarly literature. With a critical compilation and synthesis of archaeological data, this study situates the prehistoric Black Sea in a global historical context. By adopting the perspective of technology and innovation, it transcends a purely descriptive account of material culture and emphasises society, human interaction and engagement with the material world.

Mariya Ivanova is a lecturer in Prehistoric Archaeology at the University of Heidelberg and research Fellow at the German Archaeological Institute. She has participated in field projects in Turkey and in southeast and central Europe. She is the author of Fortified Settlements in the Balkans, in the Aegean and Western Anatolia, c. 5000–2000 BC and has published articles in Prähistorische Zeitschrift, Oxford Journal of Archaeology and Eurasia Antiqua.

“Artists – as also artisans – are itinerant wayfarers. They make their way through the taskscape, as do walkers through the landscape, bringing forth their work as they press on with their own lives. It is in this very forward movement that the creativity of the work is to be found,” wrote Tim Ingold in his essay “The Textility of Making”. In my own experience, this view also applies perfectly well to scholarly work. The writing of this book was a journey both figuratively and literally. At the Institute of Prehistoric and Near Eastern Archaeology in Heidelberg I had the unique privilege to follow unrestrained all paths opened by my curiosity. I am indebted to the German Research Council (DFG) for a research fellowship that allowed me to commit to research without the restrictions of administrative and teaching duties and to Professor Joseph Maran for his continuous support and encouragement at all stages of research and writing. In its initial stage, the present study was stimulated by a six-month-long untroubled and inspiring journey in Eastern Europe and in the Middle East enabled by a Reisestipendium of the German Archaeological Institute (DAI). The book would never have been completed had it not been for the one-year scholarship with which the DAI supported the writing of the manuscript.

J. Rassamakin generously assisted me during my stays in Kiev. To Juri and his colleagues at the Institute of Archaeology in Kiev I express my deepest gratitude. I am also indebted to many friends and colleagues for supplying me with references and copies, sharing their ideas, offering hospitality and opening for me the doors of excavation storerooms and libraries: Peter Miglus and Adele Bill in Heidelberg; Friedrich Lüth and Knut Rassmann in Frankfurt; Sabine Reinhold and Svend Hansen in Berlin; Getzel Cohen, Susan Allen and John Wallrodt in Cincinnati; Natalia Shishlina, Olga Brileva, Jekaterina Devlet and Nikolaj A. Makarov in Moscow; Genadij Toshchev in Zaporyzha; Irina Vdovichenko in Simferopol; Arsen Bobokhyan in Erevan; Levan Dschabaschwili in Tbilisi; Vladimir Slavchev in Varna; Krassimir Leshtakov and Vassil Nikolov in Sofia; and Aydogdy Kurbanov in Ashgabat. Alex Bauer (New York) and Ljubov Kircho (St. Petersburg) kindly supplied copies of their work; Bertille Lyonnet (Paris), Igor Manzura (Kishinev), Juri Rassamakin (Kiev), Oscar Muscarella (New York) and Ulf-Dietrich Schoop (Edinburgh) granted permission to reprint material from their work. My appreciation also goes to all who welcomed and assisted me in the foreign departments of DAI, at excavations and in museums in Eastern Europe and the Middle East.

The book is based exclusively on published material, without reference to archives or unpublished artefacts from museum collections. While some secondary literature was also used, my aim was to access all primary publications. I am deeply indebted to the librarians of the Institutes of Prehistoric Archaeology in Tübingen and Heidelberg; the Römisch-Germanische Kommission of DAI in Frankfurt; the Archaeological Institutes in Kiev and Moscow; the Institute for History of Material Culture in Saint Petersburg; the libraries of DAI in Istanbul, Teheran and Amman; the Archaeological Institutes in Erevan and Tbilisi; the Manfred O. Korfmann Library in Çanakkale; the library of the Archaeological Museum in Varna; and the library of the Classics Department and the University Library in Cincinnati. I also acknowledge those who allowed me to see archaeological finds in the storerooms of several research institutions: Natalia Shishlina granted me access to the storerooms of the State Museum of History (GIM) in Moscow, Juri Rassamakin organized the permission for the depot of the Archaeological Institute in Kiev and Olga Brileva generously showed me finds from excavations of the Moscow State Museum for Oriental Art (MINV).

I express my gratitude to my editor at Cambridge University Press, Beatrice Rehl, and to Anastasia Graf, James Dunn and Elise Oranges, who guided me through the process of publication.

My deepest appreciation is due to my husband Gebhard Bieg and my daughter Katharina for their unconditional support and understanding. Without them the completion of this book would never have been possible.

A Note on Transliteration and Spelling of Cyrillic Names

In the present study personal and geographic names have been transliterated from Cyrillic to Roman alphabet in the following way:

а	a	кс	x	х	kh
б	b	л	l	ц	ts
в	v	м	m	ч	ch
г	g	н	n	ш	sh
д	d	о	o	щ	shch
е	e	п	p	ъ	u
ж	zh	р	r	ь	omitted
з	z	с	s	ы	y
и	i	т	t	э	e
й	j	у	u	ю	ju
к	k	ф	f	я	ja

Inconsistencies in transliteration were not wholly avoidable. Exceptions were made for well-established and widespread forms, for example Maikop (and not Majkop) or Azerbaijan (and not Azerbajdzhan). Also, the –я ending in some regional names was transcribed with –a (e.g. in Ossetia and not Ossetija).

Two peculiarities of geographic names in the former Soviet Union have to be always kept in mind. During the early decades of the Soviet period, “politically incorrect” names were replaced by new ones, for example stanitsa Tsarskaja (Tsar’s hamlet) was renamed to Novosvobodnaja (“the hamlet of new freedom”). Moreover, after the fall of the Soviet regime, local Ukrainian and Caucasian forms (e.g. Tripylia instead of Tripolie) gradually replaced Russian versions of geographical names. In this study I use the name that appeared in the original publication of the archaeological site.
