THE CAMBRIDGE EDITION
OF THE NOVELS OF
THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK

MELINCOURT
THE CAMBRIDGE EDITION
OF THE NOVELS OF
THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK

GENERAL EDITOR: Freya Johnston, University of Oxford

SENIOR EDITORIAL ADVISOR: Nicholas A. Joukovsky, Pennsylvania State University

VOLUMES IN THIS SERIES

1. Headlong Hall
2. Melincourt
3. Nightmare Abbey
4. Maid Marian
5. The Misfortunes of Elphin
6. Crotchet Castle
7. Gryll Grange
THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK

MELINCOURT

Edited by Gary Dyer
CONTENTS

<table> <thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>List of illustrations</td>
<td>ix</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>General Editor's preface</td>
<td>xi</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgements</td>
<td>xxi</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chronology</td>
<td>xxii</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>List of abbreviations</td>
<td>liv</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>lix</td>
</tr> </tbody>
</table>

MELINcourT

| I Anthelia                      | 1    |
| II Fashionable Arrivals         | 5    |
| III Hypocon House               | 11   |
| IV Redrose Abbey                | 19   |
| V Sugar                         | 23   |
| VI Sir Oran Haut-ton            | 29   |
| VII The Principle of Population | 36   |
| VIII The Spirit of Chivalry     | 50   |
| IX The Philosophy of Ballads    | 55   |
| X The Torrent                   | 60   |
| XI Love and Marriage            | 68   |
| XII Love and Poverty            | 75   |
| XIII Desmond                    | 83   |
| XIV The Cottage                 | 88   |
| XV The Library                  | 100  |
| XVI The Symposium               | 108  |
| XVII Music and Discord          | 116  |
| XVIII The Stratagem             | 128  |
| XIX The Excursion               | 134  |
|                                | 139  |
Contents

XX   The Sea-Shore 147
XXI  The City of Novote 151
XXII The Borough of Onevote 160
XXIII The Council of War 169
XXIV The Barouche 175
XXV The Walk 184
XXVI The Cottagers 190
XXVII The Anti-Saccharine Fete 194
XXVIII The Chess Dance 200
XXIX The Disappearance 208
XXX The Paper-Mill 212
XXXI Cimmerian Lodge 219
XXXII The Deserted Mansion 229
XXXIII The Phantasm 234
XXXIV The Churchyard 239
XXXV The Rustic Wedding 243
XXXVI The Vicarage 250
XXXVII The Mountains 256
XXXVIII The Fracas 260
XXXIX Mainchance Villa 263
XL The Hopes of the World 281
XLI Alga Castle 291
XLII Conclusion 299

Appendix: Peacock’s Preface of 1856 307

Note on the text 311
Emendations and variants 314
Ambiguous line-end hyphenations 338
Explanatory notes 340
Select bibliography 532

viii
ILLUSTRATIONS

1 Cover, Miss Melincourt; or, Ten Thousand a Year (Ward & Lock, 1884), collection of Nicholas A. Joukovsky.  page xcii

3 Illustration from The Juvenile Library, Including a Complete Course of Instruction on Every Useful Subject (1800), The Carl H. Pforzheimer Collection of Shelley and His Circle, New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundation. cxlvi

4 Title page of Melincourt (1817), vol. 1, The Carl H. Pforzheimer Collection of Shelley and His Circle, New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundation. 1

The editor thanks Nicholas A. Joukovsky and the Pforzheimer Collection for kind permission to reproduce these images, and for supplying photographs.
‘That Peacock is a classic’, declared the scholar and editor R. W. Chapman in 1924, ‘now needs no proof; he has passed his century, and his reputation grows’. Such a judgement might have appeared sanguine even in the year in which The Works of Thomas Love Peacock, edited by H. F. B. Brett-Smith and C. E. Jones (1924–34), also known as the Halliford Edition, began to be published. During the early 1920s, Oxford University Press steadfastly resisted proposals for works by and about Peacock. But Chapman – learned, urbane Secretary to Delegates of the Press from 1920 to 1942 – was eager to see the novels back in print. He remarked in his Introduction to the World’s Classics texts of The Misfortunes of Elphin and Crotchet Castle that the ‘experiment’ of publishing them, shortly after the initial five volumes of his ground-breaking edition of Jane Austen (1923) had appeared, might transform Peacock into a ‘popular classic’.

The present editors hope, in part, to realize that frustrated ambition. It seems fitting that the Cambridge Edition of the Novels of Thomas Love Peacock should appear not long after the Cambridge Edition of the Works of Jane Austen (2005–8). That the decades since the 1920s have been kinder to Austen than to Peacock is no surprise; unlike Austen, Peacock is habitually, wilfully arcane. Nora

General Editor’s preface

Crook and Derek Guiton observe that ‘His writings contain references as inaccessible to the common reader as medieval graffiti in cathedral towers’; the historical and architectural contexts are appropriate, as is the flavour of irreverence suggested by ‘graffiti’. Even if his comic fictions abound, like Austen’s, with clever, good-looking women and with sparkling dialogue that culminates in marriage, Peacock’s repartee can be hard to follow. On a first, unmediated encounter with him, many readers will feel, with Captain Fitzchrome (in Chapter 6 of Crotchet Castle), that ‘the pleasantry and the obscurity go together’. Peacock does not aspire to the portrayal of interiority – perhaps the most cherished aspect of Austen’s novels. Rather, his characters, both male and female, exist primarily in order to share, voice and test the limits of their ideas. His fictions, rebuffing intimacy, are inescapably political and intellectual. To approach the nineteenth-century novel via Peacock is therefore to see it as an outward-facing genre indebted to philosophical tracts, lectures, classical dialogues and the rhythms of parliamentary debate.

It would have amused Peacock, who tended to write contemptuously of academics and their institutions, that in 1921 Professor Herbert G. Wright’s proposal for a new edition of The Misfortunes of Elphin was rejected by Oxford University Press, whereas the Snowdon Mountain Tramroad and Hotels Company, ‘being desirous to provide holiday reading for visitors to the Principality’, successfully lobbied for the same work’s appearance in the World’s Classics series, alongside Crotchet Castle, three years later. Making the case for Peacock can be a tricky, unpredictable business. According to J. B. Priestley, he is ‘a treacherous subject for criticism’. An erudite, eclectic and fastidious reader, possessed of an excellent memory, Peacock is a daunting prospect for editors, too; as Stephen Gill puts it, 'he was a bibliographer of sorts and a textual critic of some severity'. One of the most striking things about his fastidious and omnivorous novels is just how many ancient and modern writers they lightly touch upon, in such a way as to reveal their author's delighted saturation in literature. To gloss his works judiciously therefore requires more than a few notes. ‘Doing so much’, thought Chapman, the Halliford editors ‘might well have done a little more’ in this regard: ‘In the process of verification they must have traced many of Peacock's adespotic quotations; readers would have been grateful if they had given the references. It would be interesting, too, to know if Peacock often misquoted.’ ‘Adespotic’, in the hyper-abstruse sense in which Chapman uses it here (i.e. relating to classical, especially Greek, literature which is not attributed to any particular author), is so rare as not to appear in the Oxford English Dictionary, or indeed in Peacock's fiction, but there are plenty of other terms and allusions in his novels that will baffle the modern reader. Peacock's head, like Taliesin's (in Chapter 16 of The Misfortunes of Elphin), was 'brimfull of Pagan knowledge', sometimes misquoted. Volume editors have tried to keep in view the reader's need for information about and explanation of Peacock's myriad sources, and his relationship to them, while remaining conscious that annotations of his works are potentially limitless. Peacock wrote in a letter to Lord Broughton that he believed 'the author of an inscription always knows what he means, however difficult of apprehension his meaning may be to others'. His comment suggests a puzzling quality to the epigraphs and other forms of quotation in the novels and elsewhere; but it also suggests that we might recover the author's meanings, if we will only persist in hunting for them. The Cambridge Edition aims to reveal his locally apposite, imaginative use of out-of-the-way sources and analogues. The appearance in 2001 of Nicholas A. Joukovsky’s definitive edition of Peacock’s Letters, incorporating details of the books Peacock read while composing his fiction, has paved the way for many new attributions. The seven novels he wrote between 1815 and 1861 have been enriched in the present edition by ampler cross-referencing to his other works, published and unpublished, and to their relevant literary, historical and cultural contexts, than has previously been attempted.

---

3 Peacock to Lord Broughton (13 May 1861), Letters, 2.413.
General Editor's preface

In his essay on ‘French Comic Romances’, Peacock remarked of Pigault-Lebrun that ‘his successive works are impressed with the political changes of the day: they carry their eras in their incidents’. The same might be said of Peacock’s fiction, but he was equally interested in the capacity of his works to outlive their moment. Looking back on Melincourt some thirty-nine years after the novel first appeared in print, its author pointed out that ‘Many of the questions, discussed in the dialogues, have more of general than of temporary application, and still have their advocates on both sides’. Some things might not be true, some decades later, but they had ‘worthy successors’ in the present. As Alexander Pope reflected with malicious complacency that his dunces would be perennially replaced with a fresh stock of dud writers, generation after generation, so Peacock envisaged his satires living beyond their original moment, as well as being marked by it (and needing some explanation accordingly).

---

8 Halliford, 9.255.
9 Peacock’s reflections on the changes appeared in his Preface to the 1856 edition of Melincourt, while the reference to ‘worthy successors’ appeared in his Preface of 1837. In ‘The Publisher to the Reader’, Pope asserts of The Dunciad that ‘the Poem was not made for these Authors, but these Authors for the Poem: And I should judge that they were clapp’d in as they rose, fresh and fresh, and chang’d from day to day, in like manner as when the old boughs wither, we thrust new ones into a chimney.’ The Twickenham Edition of the Poems of Alexander Pope, ed. John Butt et al., 11 vols. (London: Methuen;
The numerous quotations from and allusions to other writers in Peacock's fiction suggest the company he chose to keep and in which he wished to be recorded. He would have agreed with Samuel Johnson that citing ancient writers, far from being mere pedantry, 'is a good thing; there is a community of mind in it. Classical quotation is the parole of literary men all over the world.' That phrase, 'community of mind', sums up the sociable disputes to which Peacock's novels play host, and explains the gravitation within them towards the library as well as to the dining table. In Crotchet Castle, for instance, the library is a suite of interlinked apartments in which games, words and music are shown to be continuous with one another. The library is therefore structurally representative of the novel, revealing adjacency, sequence, continuity and difference between play, talk, literature and song.

There is a further sense in which Peacock's books might be viewed as miniature libraries: they share certain characteristics with commonplace books of quotation gathered around different subjects. It can be hard to differentiate a quotation from an allusion in Peacock; to tell why certain sources are named and flagged while others are left more implicit or indeed almost entirely submerged. But one way of reading the novels might be as anthologies of classical material, as well as of the state of political life and reviewing culture at a given nineteenth-century moment (at one point in Chapter 18, Melincourt quotes an issue of the Edinburgh Review in place of a character's speech). A definitive edition of Peacock's fiction therefore requires attentiveness to old and contemporary orthodoxies, and to the bridges between them. He is a writer who manages to rehearse highly acrimonious debates without himself becoming either angry or jaded.

General Editor’s preface

Quotations serve, too, as forms of evidence, anchoring the claims made in the text, so that they contribute to the kind of authority and probability that Peacock, following in Henry Fielding’s wake, claimed was necessary in all kinds of fiction – however outrageous – and in the teeth of such historically incoherent works as Thomas Moore’s The Epicurean (1827), which Peacock reviewed with majestic scorn.11 In nineteenth-century reviews, lengthy quotations are often provided in order to ridicule and condemn a work, as well as to offer a representative selection from it. Perhaps the long footnotes quoting (for instance) Lord Monboddo in Melincourt combine these roles. They serve to establish a genuine basis for Sylvan Forester’s arguments about his captured creature in Monboddo’s own outlandish claims about orangutans, and in so doing they also poke fun at the nature of those arguments. In fact, the quotations are so substantial that, like the Edinburgh Review, they invade the text, forming part of Forester’s italicized speech in Chapter 6 – a chapter which amounts to a miniature encyclopaedia of arguments in favour of natural man. Such quotations are both seriously meant – they show attentive fidelity to source material – and satirically driven, since they show how far from common sense such arguments may be taken. In other words, they resemble the notes to Pope’s Dunciad.

Having said all this, and acknowledging Peacock’s remarkable allusiveness, scholarly editing is not only about commentary and explanatory annotation. We have benefited handsomely from more than a century of sophisticated textual enquiry into Peacock, and from the formidable legacy of earlier bibliographical investigators. The Cambridge Edition is indebted to the diligence and skill of H. F. B. Brett-Smith and C. E. Jones, who set a very high standard in terms of the accuracy and completeness of their work. The first collected edition of Peacock, published in 1874 (dated 1875), was in three volumes; the Halliford editors oversaw the publication of ten. Their bibliographical retrievals and discoveries were legion; the dearth of explanatory notes accompanying the texts was dictated by prevailing trends in editorial practice, rather than by their own preferences. Supplemented by David Garnett’s two-volume edition of the novels (1948, 1963), and by Nicholas A. Joukovsky’s numerous textual, critical and biographical gleanings, Halliford continues to offer the best and fullest selection of Peacock’s writings as a whole.

Unlike Brett-Smith and Jones, who, in accordance with editorial thinking at the time, gave the preference to Peacock’s revised lifetime texts, the Cambridge Edition of the Novels of Thomas Love Peacock employs as copytexts the first editions, in book-length form, of his fictions. This policy has been adopted partly because it seems better to accord with Peacock’s authorial character; when given the opportunity to do so, he made few revisions to his novels. The first editions of those works also serve as the best witnesses of Peacock’s satirical topicality, a vital source of his appeal and interest, and a distinctive aspect of his contribution to nineteenth-century fiction. In the case of Nightmare Abbey, for instance, now Peacock’s best-known and most widely studied work, the text as first published in 1818 not only reflected but also directly participated in the literary and political debates of his time.

Our texts remain as close to the copytexts as possible. Spelling and punctuation have not been modernized and inconsistencies in presentation, titles (such as Dr. and Doctor) and grammatical forms have generally been left as they were found. Peacock’s own footnotes are an essential part of his mock-explicatory, Scriblerian style; they are also a means, like his epigraphs, of displaying his literary allegiances and antagonisms. In this edition they remain at the bottom of the page – signalled by asterisks and daggers – as in the copytexts. The presence of editorial endnotes is contrastingly indicated by superscript numbers in the text.

The few corrections and emendations we have made to the texts, other than replacing dropped or missing letters, have been permitted only when an error is very plain, or where its retention might impede comprehension of the passage. For instance, missing quotation marks have been supplied, run-on words have been separated, repeated words have been excised and unclosed parentheses have been closed. Occasionally, where the copytext is corrupt and clearly does not reflect Peacock's intentions at the time of writing, it has been emended. For instance, at the beginning of Chapter 13 of Nightmare Abbey, the 1818 text reads 'or of a waggon, or of a weighing-bridge'. In this case, the 1837 correction 'or of a waggon on a weighing-bridge' appears to be a restoration of what he must have originally written or intended to write. All such changes to the texts have been noted in the final apparatus. Where relevant, in each volume surviving draft manuscript fragments have been transcribed, with explanatory headnotes indicating both their nature and their relationship to the printed text, in an appendix or series of appendices. All manuscript materials have been transcribed with their changes or erasures either reproduced or noted. Variant readings of such materials are not incorporated into the textual apparatus.

Peacock appears to have been sparing in the changes he made to the four novels (Headlong Hall, Nightmare Abbey, Maid Marian and Crotchet Castle) that were re-published by Richard Bentley in his Standard Novels series in 1837, but countless tiny alterations were introduced to this text. For many of those, Peacock is unlikely to have been responsible, although the concern he showed when correcting or altering orthography in the cases of characters' names, locations, dialect and pronunciation makes it generally unwise to attempt to determine which are his, and which are not. In the case of Headlong Hall, for instance, along with a number of misprints, there are some new substantive readings in 1837, one of which appears to be authorial. The Cambridge Edition accepts that many decisions about spelling, punctuation, capitalization, spacing, italicizing and paragraphing may not have been Peacock's, either in the copytexts or in subsequent lifetime texts, but we have no way of knowing for certain that they were not. All volume editors have therefore undertaken a complete collation of the copytext with other lifetime editions, but not all the accidental variants have been printed. Instead, we have reproduced all substantive variants between the copytext and other lifetime editions, and a number of variants in accidentals, including all those in the spelling of proper names.

Introductions to each volume are substantial and have a common basic structure. They incorporate original discussion of each work’s genesis and composition, its publication history, reception and after-life. An extensive chronology of Peacock’s life, revised by Nicholas A. Joukovsky from his edition of the \textit{Letters}, is also provided in every volume.

Modern readers may ask what Peacock hoped to achieve through the elegant representation of opposing views in his imaginative, dialogic and dramatic prose. The answer is probably something akin to what he admired in French comic fiction: its capacity, by ‘presenting or embodying opinion’ through characters that are ‘abstractions or embodied classifications’, or representatives ‘of actual life’, to direct ‘the stream of opinion against the mass of delusions and abuses’ in the public arena.\footnote{Halliford, 9.259.} Peacock commented of Paul de Kock that the author very rarely expressed a political opinion (‘never’, he says in ‘French Comic Romances’, modified to a ‘very slight’ indication of such opinion in ‘The Épicier’); this elusive quality evidently puzzled and interested him.\footnote{Halliford, 9.256.} What sort of a writer pursues opinion without committing himself? Does it make him tantamount to a mere reviewer? What kind of public is interested in opinions, and why? What is the status of literature in relation to public opinion? In a letter to Thomas L’Estrange (11 July 1861), Peacock wrote that: ‘In the questions which have come within my scope, I have endeavoured to be impartial, and to say what could be said on both sides’. Around the same time (June 1861), he suggested to Lord Broughton what talking heads might, at their best, have to offer:

\footnote{Halliford, 9.259.} \footnote{Halliford, 9.256.}
General Editor's preface

The dialogues of Plato and Cicero are made up of discussions among persons who differed in opinion. Neither they nor their heroes would have been content to pass eternity in the company of persons who merely thought as they did. They were enquirers. They did not profess to have found truth. They might have expected to find it in another life: but then they would no longer think, as they had thought, with those who agreed with them in this.¹⁴

Freya Johnston

¹⁴ Letters, 2.425, 419.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to thank Cleveland State University for a Faculty Scholarship Initiative grant that funded research for this project. For help and suggestions, I thank Rachel Carnell, William Galperin, Michael Gamer, Freya Johnston, Nicholas A. Joukovsky, James J. Marino, Barbara Riebling and Susan Wolfson.
1785
18 Oct. Born at Weymouth, or Melcombe Regis, Dorset, the only child of Samuel Peacock (born 1722/3), a London glass merchant whose father, Josiah Peacock, had been a linen draper and grocer at Taunton, Somerset, and Sarah Love (born 10 Nov. 1754), daughter of Thomas Love, a retired master in the Royal Navy from Topsham, Devon, who lost a leg as Master of HMS Prothée in the battle of the Saints, Rodney's great victory off Dominica, on 12 Apr. 1782. (His parents were married at St Luke's, Chelsea, on 29 Mar. 1780.)

?Dec.–Jan. 1786 Baptized by Henry Hunter, DD, minister of the Scots Presbyterian church, London Wall. (The Loves were Presbyterians, while the Peacocks were Independents.)

1786
Autumn–Winter 1787 His father stops attending the Court of the Pewterers’ Company (of which he is an Assistant) and apparently transfers his interest in his glass warehouse at 46 Holborn Bridge to his brother George (his brother Thomas having previously become a junior partner in the firm).
Chronology

1791

before 31 Dec.

His mother and her parents take separate houses at Chertsey. (His uncle William Love also settles his family at Chertsey in 1793.)

1792

Winter–Spring

Sent to a private school kept by John Harris Wicks at Englefield Green, where he remains for six and a half years, spending his vacations at Chertsey and often visiting a schoolfellow named Charles at the Abbey House.

1793

early Feb.

Death of his father (buried 5 Feb. at the Elim Baptist Chapel, Fetter Lane), after the purchase of two small annuities for his widow and one for his son.

1 Mar.

Birth of his cousin Henry Ommanney Love (died 16 Sept. 1872) at Chertsey.

1794

Apr.

His uncle William Love (born early Apr. 1764) promoted to the rank of lieutenant in the Royal Navy, having been a midshipman since 1778.

1 June

His uncle Thomas Love (born 29 May 1752) serves as Master of HMS Alfred in Howe’s great victory over the French.

Nov.

Death of his uncle Richard Love (baptized 1 Mar. 1761) at Bombay, after having served in the Russian navy.

1795

4–14 Feb.

Writes his first known poem, an epitaph for a schoolfellow named Hamlet Wade.

1797 before 24 Apr.

Birth of his cousin Harriet Blagrave Deane Love (died 14 Feb. 1881) at Chertsey.
Chronology

1798

June

before 18 Oct.

Writes a poem on his ‘Midsummer Holidays’.

Removed from school, possibly due to failure of one of his mother’s annuities. From this time he is entirely self-educated.

1800

before 11 Feb.–

?1805 or 1806

Employed as a clerk for Ludlow, Fraser & Company, merchants in the City of London, while residing with his mother on the firm’s premises at 4 Angel Court, Throgmorton Street. During these years he has a circle of friends in the neighbourhood of Hackney, including William de St Croix of Homerton and, perhaps later, Thomas Forster of Lower Clapton.

Feb.

Receives an ‘Extra Prize’ from the Monthly Preceptor, or Juvenile Library for his first publication, a verse ‘Answer to the Question: “Is History or Biography the More Improving Study?”’

1803

16 Nov.

Presents a (lost) manuscript volume of poems to Lucretia Oldham, ‘the beauty of Shacklewell Green’, with a dedicatory poem on the first leaf.

1804

Sept.

Writes ‘The Monks of St. Mark’ (later privately printed as a leaflet, probably in connection with the printing of the Palmyra volume in the autumn of 1805).

Collects most of his juvenile verse, except the Lucretia Oldham poems, in a manuscript volume of ‘Poems, by T. L. Peacock’.

xxiv
Chronology

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Autumn</td>
<td>Writes a verse drama entitled ‘The Circle of Loda’.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18 Oct.</td>
<td>Death of his grandfather, Thomas Love, at Chertsey (buried 20 Dec. at the Presbyterian meeting-house).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1806</td>
<td>Autumn Solitary walking tour in Scotland.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1807</td>
<td>Feb. His uncle William Love promoted to the rank of commander.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 Aug.</td>
<td>Spring Returns to live with his mother at Chertsey.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14 May–</td>
<td>Summer–Autumn Brief engagement to Fanny Falkner broken off by the interference of one of her relations. She marries another man and dies the next year.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Apr. 1809</td>
<td>1808 Serves as Captain’s Clerk to Sir Home Riggs Popham and, after 18 Dec., to Capt. Andrew King, aboard HMS Venerable in the Downs – ‘this floating Inferno’. During this period he writes several prologues and epilogues for the officers’ amateur theatricals as well as ‘Stanzas Written at Sea’ (published with The Genius of the Thames).</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table> Chronology

1809

13 Mar. Sends Edward Hookham a ‘little poem of the Thames’ and mentions ‘a classical ballad or two now in embryo’, perhaps ‘Romance’ and ‘Remember Me’.

after 2 Apr. Having left the Venerable, walks from Deal to Ramsgate and around the North Foreland to Margate, before proceeding to Canterbury and London, then eventually returning to live at Chertsey.

29 May Begins a two-week expedition to trace the course of the Thames on foot from its source to Chertsey, with a stay of two or three days at Oxford.

1810

Jan. Travels to North Wales, visiting Tremadoc before settling at Maentwrog, Merionethshire.

after 20 Jan. Sends Edward Hookham the Prooemium to The Genius of the Thames while the poem is being printed.

Apr.–May Attracted to the Maentwrog parson’s daughter Jane Gryffydh, ‘the Caernarvonshire nymph’, but by 12 June ‘Richard is himself again’.

late May–early June The Genius of the Thames: A Lyrical Poem, in Two Parts published by Thomas and Edward Hookham.

late June–?early Oct. Affair with an unidentified ‘Caernarvonshire charmer’ (‘not a parson’s daughter’), ending in disillusionment.

Chronology

1811
7 Apr.
Leaves Maentwrog, after bidding farewell to Jane Gryffydh, ‘the most innocent, the most amiable, the most beautiful girl in existence’. On his walk home by way of South Wales, he climbs Cadair Idris and calls on Edward Scott at Bodtalog, near Towyn, before proceeding to Aberystwyth and the Devil’s Bridge, near Hafod.

?May–July
A ‘long abode in Covent-Garden’.

Autumn
His mother’s remaining annuity having expired at Michaelmas, she is forced by creditors to leave Chertsey. He and his mother are enabled by friends to occupy Morven Cottage, Wyrardisbury, near Staines.

?Autumn
 Writes The Philosophy of Melancholy – ‘in ten days’, according to Edward Hookham.

before 14 Nov.
Revises The Genius of the Thames, Palmyra and ‘Fiolfar, King of Norway’ for a new edition, to which he adds ‘Inscription for a Mountain Dell’. Consigns all his other poems ‘to the tomb of the Capulets’.

18 Dec.
Grant of £21 from the Literary Fund.

1812
Winter–Spring
Writes a (lost) farce entitled ‘Mirth in the Mountains’, which is read by James Grant Raymond, the actor-manager of the Drury Lane Company.

?Winter–Autumn
 Translates passages from Greek tragedies, which he thinks of publishing under the title ‘Fragments of Greek Tragedy’. Around this time he probably also writes and privately prints his Aristophanic Greek anapaests on Christ (no known copy).
Chronology

late Feb.
The Philosophy of Melancholy: A Poem in Four Parts, with a Mythological Ode published by Thomas and Edward Hookham.

early Apr.
Second edition of The Genius of the Thames, Palmyra, and Other Poems published by Thomas and Edward Hookham.

before 20 May Forced temporarily to leave Morven Cottage, Wyrardisbury, by his inability to pay local tradesmen’s bills.

20 May
Grant of £30 from the Literary Fund. Edward Hookham, in his letter of application, expresses fears that ‘the fate of Chatterton might be that of Peacock’.

20 May
Cosigns an East India Company bond for Peter Auber in the amount of £500.

?Summer–Spring 1813
Writes, with Raymond’s encouragement, two more farces, ‘The Dilettanti’ and ‘The Three Doctors’, but neither is performed at Drury Lane. Other dramatic projects of this period include two Roman tragedies entitled ‘Otho’ and ‘Virginia’.

July–Aug.
Thomas Forster visits him for a week at Wyrardisbury.

before 18 Aug.
Thomas Hookham sends Peacock’s two recent volumes of poetry to Shelley at Lynmouth, Devon.

late Aug.–early Sept.
Visits Thomas Forster at Tunbridge Wells.

In love with Clarinda Knowles at Englefield Green – ‘this goddess of my idolatry’.

17–30 Sept.
Walking and sailing tour of the Isle of Wight with Joseph Gulston of Englefield Green, during which he visits his uncle William Love at Yarmouth and finds his cousin Harriet ‘grown into a fine girl’.
Chronology

4 Oct.–13 Nov. Introduced to Shelley by Thomas Hookham in London.

late Nov. Thomas Hookham sends Peacock's poem 'Farewell to Meirion' to Shelley at Tan-yr-allt, near Tremadoc.

1813

?Winter–Spring Writes, and possibly prints, a prospectus outlining his educational theories and proposing ‘to receive eight pupils, in a beautiful retirement in the county of Westmoreland’.

?Winter–Spring Writes Sir Hornbook, which is illustrated by Henry Corbould before 1 June.

12 Mar. Writes the poem ‘Al mio primiero amore!’ to an unidentified ‘first love’.

?Apr.–June Sees Shelley several times in London and meets Thomas Jefferson Hogg and William Godwin.

11 June His epilogue to Lumley Skeffington's comedy Lose No Time is recited at Drury Lane, then printed in the Morning Post on 14 June.

16 June Grant of £10 from the Literary Fund.

late June–late Aug. Second visit to Wales, during which he wanders through Radnorshire, Cardiganshire and Merionethshire. Tentatively engages ‘a very beautiful place in Radnorshire’. Returns by way of Bath.

Sept. Visits Shelley at Bracknell, where he meets John Frank Newton, Harriet de Boinville and their circle.

4 Oct.–early Dec. Accompanies Shelley and his family to the Lake District and Edinburgh.

xxix
Chronology

Nov.–Dec.
Sir Hornbook; or, Childe Launcelot's Expedition: A Grammatico-Allegorical Ballad published by Sharpe & Hailes, with plates dated 1 June 1813 and title page post-dated 1814. (Second and third editions follow in 1815, fourth edition in 1817, fifth edition in 1818.)

1814
Mar.
Sir Proteus: A Satirical Ballad published under the pseudonym of P. M. O'Donovan, Esq. by Thomas and Edward Hookham.

8 Apr.
Letter signed ‘P.’, pointing out a resemblance between Hamlet and Euripides’ Hippolytus, published in the Morning Chronicle.

?Spring–Spring 1815
Begins and outlines two versions of ‘Ahrimanes’, an unfinished romantic epic in Spenserian stanzas.

12 July
Writes gloomy ‘Lines to a Favorite Laurel in the Garden at Ankerwyke Cottage’.

28 July
After having consulted Peacock about his marital crisis, Shelley elopes to the Continent with Mary Godwin and Claire Clairmont. During his absence, he writes to ask Peacock ‘to superintend money affairs’. Peacock does not meet the two girls until after their return on 13 Sept.

?Aug.
Proposes marriage to Cecilia Knowles at Englefield Green, having previously proposed to her sister Clarinda.

?Sept.
Watches the driving of the deer, by two regiments of cavalry, from Windsor Forest into the Park – ‘the most beautiful sight I ever witnessed’.

***