

Israel's Security Networks

Since the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948, particularly after the Arab–Israeli War of 1967, a highly informal but simultaneously potent security network has influenced Israel's domestic sphere. Composed of acting and former security personnel and their partners in the state's various civilian spheres, this security network has affected Israeli culture, politics, society, economy, public discourse, and foreign relations. This book discusses this major sociopolitical phenomenon and its effects in a comparative and theoretical perspective.

Gabriel Sheffer is a professor of political science at The Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is the author of numerous books, journal articles, book chapters, and edited volumes, including Middle Eastern Minorities and Diasporas (2002), Diaspora Politics: At Home Abroad (Cambridge, 2003), Militarism and Israeli Society (2010), and The Jewish Diaspora and the Jerusalem Question (2012).

Oren Barak is an associate professor of political science and international relations at The Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is the author of The Lebanese Army: A National Institution in a Divided Society (2009) and co-editor, with Gabriel Sheffer, of Existential Threats and Civil-Security Relations (2009) and Militarism and Israeli Society (2010).

Acknowledgments

This book could not have been completed without the generous help of numerous individuals and institutions.

We thank the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute for its generous help in launching the Workshop on Israeli Security and Society, where we had the opportunity to develop many of the ideas that culminated in this book.¹ We also thank the Leonard Davis Institute for International Relations at The Hebrew University of Jerusalem for helping us organize a conference at which we presented and further developed our ideas.² In recent years, we presented various parts of this project at meetings of the Association for Israel Studies, the International Studies Association (ISA), the Inter-University Seminar on Armed Forces and Society, and the Israel Political Science Association. We also presented these ideas in department colloquia at several universities in Israel and abroad. We thank participants in all of these conferences and seminars for their helpful comments and suggestions.

Many individuals in Israel and abroad have given us feedback on our project in various stages and we are indebted to them. We thank Sarai Aharoni, Eyal Ben-Ari, Oded Löwenheim, Amiram Oren, Shaul Shenhav, Mario Sznajder, and Eyal Tsur from The Hebrew University of Jerusalem; Stuart Cohen from Bar Ilan University; Zoltan Barany and Ami Pedahzur from the University of Texas in Austin; Richard Kohn from Duke University; Jonathan Caverley and Hendrik Spruyt from Northwestern University; and Christopher Dandeker from Kings College.

At Cambridge University Press, we thank our editor, Lewis Bateman; Shaun Vigil; and two anonymous referees who offered valuable feedback on the ¹ The proceedings of the workshop were published in Sheffer, Barak, and Oren (2008) and Sheffer and Barak (2010) as well as in a special issue of the journal Israel Studies.
