

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

ANCESTRAL ENCOUNTERS IN HIGHLAND MADAGASCAR

Nineteenth-century highland Madagascar was a place inhabited by the dead as much as the living. Ghosts, ancestors, and the possessed were important historical actors alongside local kings and queens, soldiers, traders, and missionaries. This book considers the challenges that such actors pose for historical accounts of the past and for thinking about questions of presence and representation. How were the dead made present, and how were they recognized or not? In attending to these multifarious encounters of the nineteenth century, how might we reflect on the ways in which our own history writing makes the dead present? To tackle these questions, Zoë Crossland tells an anthropological history of highland Madagascar from a perspective rooted in archaeology and Peircean semeiotics, as well as in landscape study, oral history, and textual sources.

Zoë Crossland is Associate Professor of Anthropology at Columbia University. Her research focuses on the historical archaeology of Madagascar, as well as forensic archaeology and evidential practices around human remains. She is the coauthor of A Fine and Private Place: The Archaeology of Death and Burial in Post-Medieval Britain and Ireland (with Annia Cherryson and Sarah Tarlow). Her work has appeared in American Anthropologist, Archaeological Dialogues, and Signs and Society, among other journals. She established the U.S. branch of the Theoretical Archaeology Group, an international conference devoted to discussing archaeological theory.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

---

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

ANCESTRAL ENCOUNTERS IN HIGHLAND MADAGASCAR

MATERIAL SIGNS AND TRACES OF THE DEAD

ZOË CROSSLAND

Columbia University

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

32 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10013-2473, USA

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107036093

© Zoë Crossland 2014

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2014

Printed in the United States of America

A catalog record for this publication is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Crossland, Zoë, author.

Ancestral encounters in highland Madagascar: material signs and traces of the dead / Zoë Crossland.

pages cm

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-107-03609-3 (hardback)

1. Ethnology – Madagascar. 2. Semiotics – Madagascar. 3. Dead – Religious aspects. 4. Landscapes – Symbolic aspects – Madagascar. 5. Madagascar – History – 19th century. 6. Madagascar – Religion – 19th century. 7. Imerina (Madagascar) – History – 19th century. 8. Merina (Malagasy people) – Religion. 9. Missions – Madagascar. I. Title.

GN661.M2C76 2013

305.8009691–dc23 2013018870

ISBN 978-1-107-03609-3 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party Internet Web sites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such Web sites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

---

For BB

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

---

Contents

Figures	page	ix
Acknowledgments		xi
Introduction		1
Encounters with ancestors		1
Themes in the historiography of Madagascar		7
Encounters		10
Ancestral agency		13
Materiality and representation		15
Outline of the book		21
The center		22
The frontier		24
PART I: THE CENTER
1	Uncertain signs and the power of the dead	31
	The politics of fire	31
	Locating ruins	35
	Fire and the ancestors	41
	Signs of change	48
2	Recognition and misrecognition in the missionary encounter	56
	Problems of recognition	56
	Arrival in Antananarivo	59
	Locating mission	61
	Improvement	68
	The semeiosis of recognition and nonrecognition	72
	First: Quality or potential	75
	Second: Relation or reaction	79
	Third: Habit and mediation	83
	Challenges to recognition	88

3	The signs of mission	100
	Ancestral agency	100
	Paying tribute	104
	Semeiotic agency	107
	Landscape and center	110
	Kinship and exchange	113
	Interpretants of blessing and its mismanagement	120
	Between signs and practical reality	130
PART II: THE FRONTIER
4	Conquering the Andrantsay: Familiar histories	141
	State expansion and kinship	144
	History, servitude, and kinship	148
	Building and breaking kinship on the state frontier	151
	Ancestral landscapes of the Andrantsay	164
	Gathering the signs of history	168
	Conquering the dead	171
5	Standing stones and the semeiosis of reproduction	181
	Highland stone worlds	186
	Stones of the state	187
	Mortuary stones	190
	Stones that speak	195
	Stone texts	200
	Histories of exchange	204
	The habit of meeting	208
	Stones of state authority: Rabiby	210
	Soldier stones: Rainipiana and Rainitongavola	213
	Ancestral debt and obligation	216
	A standing stone is a sum of money	223
6	Zone Rouge : Encounters on the frontier	228
	Military men	229
	Strangers	237
	Vazimba , brigands, and the enslaved	242
	Red Zone	247
	Epilogue: Ghostly presences	257
	Worlds of might be and would be	263
	Notes	267
	Glossary	317
	Reign of sovereigns mentioned in the text (central Imerina)	323
	Archival sources	325
	Bibliography	327
	Index	371

Figures

	Map of Madagascar showing major towns and regions mentioned in the text	page xv
1	The remains of the Queen's Palace, or Manjakamiadana, and the palace church	32
2	Images of the Rova	33
3	Presidential residence at Iavohola	35
4	Hilltop highland village	64
5	The cluster of palaces at the Rova and elite houses surrounding it in the 1860s	65
6	The landscape around Antananarivo in 2005	65
7	Neuaddlwyd Chapel, Ceredigion, and Jones's father's grave today	70
8	Radama I, as portrayed in William Ellis's History of Madagascar, Volume 2	71
9	Neuaddlwyd Academy	77
10	Highland chapel	77
11	Constructing the first stone-built church at Ambatonakanga	85
12	The church and graveyard at Ambatonakanga today	87
13	Cosmological ordering of space and time	95
14	Cosmological ordering of the house	96
15	Interior of highland house, late nineteenth century	97
16	Fragmented coin currency and whole vola tsy vaky (uncut coin)	105
17	Map of central Imerina	111
18	Dynamics of school placement, 1824 and 1828	117
19	Schematic map of the mission schools and territorial organization of central Imerina in 1824 and 1828	119
20	Sampy , or group protector	123
21	The village and rock of Ambatomanga	125
22	The village of Amboatany	129

23	Comparison between 1883 LMS map of missionized areas and the extent of the fanjakana	137
24	Map of Andrantsay region	152
25	Andrantsay River in the far west of the kingdom	153
26	Looking northeast from Fiva	154
27	View to west from Fiva, with Vohibe	155
28	Terraced rice paddies near Betafo	155
29	Malagasy double-piston bellows	157
30	Measuring scales used in highland markets	159
31	Guard tower in open plaza with tombs in Ambohimambola	161
32	Stone wall at high site in west of Andrantsay	165
33	Andrianonitomponitany's tomb with cold house ( tranomanara ) on top	167
34	Abandoned high site of Faliarivo	172
35	High site of Fiva	173
36	Stone entranceway at Fandanana	174
37	Standing stone at Tsarahafatra	175
38	Catat's illustration of Rainimandaniarivo's stone	182
39	Rainimandaniarivo's stone today	183
40	Andrianonitomponitany's stone showing descent	189
41	Standing stones associated with tombs	191
42	Plan and cross section of highland tomb	192
43	Rainihasimbola's standing stone and later inscription	194
44	Coppalle's portrait of Radama I	199
45	Rabiby's stone today	212
46	Map of Betafo and market square	214
47	Rainipiana's stone today	215
48	Rainitongavola's stone today	239
49	Andrianatoavina's stone today	243
50	Accession cards from the British Museum for pottery vessels	252

Acknowledgments

This book has grown out of research that I have carried out with colleagues in highland Madagascar since 1997. From the first day that I arrived at the Museum of Art and Archaeology at Antananarivo, I found a warm welcome from the faculty and staff there. Directors Jean-Aimé Rakotoarisoa and Chantal Radimilahy have been particularly encouraging, helping with all sorts of logistical issues and facilitating fieldwork. Thanks to Chantal and her family for their friendship and for letting me move in with them for months at a time. Rafolo Andrianaivoarivony, director of the Center for Art and Archaeology in Antananarivo, has also been a welcome and valued source of advice and friendship, as has Bako Nirina Rasoarifetra. Thanks, too, to Bako for all the wonderful meals and conversation. Two people stand out for their invaluable help and support, without which I could not have undertaken much of the research that I have done in Madagascar. Ramilisonina, renowned field archaeologist and ethnologist, has been with me through all my field research, providing a calm presence in tricky situations, as well as guidance and friendship. On my first and many subsequent visits, I stayed with the Ramilisonina family, and I would like to thank them all for allowing me to share their family life, particularly Mme. Delphine Ramilisonina. Victor Razanatovo has been responsible for the museum Land Rover, driving it over the roughest terrain and fixing it when it seemed unfixable, always with unflinching good cheer. Thanks to them both for making fieldwork possible.

The stories that I tell here draw on a variety of research that I have carried out over the past fifteen years. Many people and institutions have helped me over the years, and I am grateful to all of them. Chapter 1 has developed out of a project that I have been working on with Bako Rasoarifetra on the debates around the reconstruction of the Rova, Antananarivo. Chapters 2 and 3 draw on research into the archaeology of early mission that I carried out as part of a Junior Research Fellowship at Churchill College, Cambridge, from 2002 to 2005. My thanks to Churchill College for supporting this work, and to the Society of Antiquaries of London, the McDonald Institute, University of Cambridge, and the Phyllis and Eileen Gibbs Travelling Scholarship, Newnham College, for funding of associated fieldwork and archival research. David Austin, Paul M. M. Boucher and family, Irene Williams, Havard Gregory, Rev. Kenneth Lintern, and Mr. and Mrs. John Jenkins of Penybanc also provided help with research in Wales. My thanks to all of them.

Chapters 4 to 6 touch on archaeological research I undertook in the Andrantsay region of Madagascar between 1997 and 2010. A complete account of this fieldwork will be published with the University of Michigan Museum of Anthropology Press (Crossland forthcoming), but here I should acknowledge the financial support of the University of Michigan, the University of Michigan Museum of Anthropology, the Wenner Gren Institute for Anthropological Research, the National Science Foundation, the British Academy, and the British Institute in East Africa for funding of fieldwork between 1997 and 2010. Columbia University provided funds to help with archival research. Will Griffin and his students helped with the recording of standing stones in Betafo in 2003 and provided photographs published here as Figures 40, 41, 43, 45, 47, 48, and 49.

Many people have helped with archaeological survey and excavation over the years. I would like to thank them all for their cheerful enthusiasm and good humor. Key team members have included Vonjy Ramilison, Léa Ramilison, Joelina Ramilison, Toky Ramilison, Hanta Andrianavalona, Vololombohangy Ranivoarisoa, and Kerry Harris, who were all student volunteers at different times. Samüel Ratovoarizo, Jeannot Ramisaharison, and Hajo Ramisondrarivo have helped with survey and illustration. The mayors of Betafo, Soavina, Ankazomiriotra, and Ambohimambola facilitated our fieldwork in the Andrantsay area and found accommodation for us. Tatamo and Mme. Voangy Andrianasolo of the Commune Rurale in Ambohimambola kindly shared their house with us in 1998, 1999, and 2000.

Archival work was carried out at Madagascar's National Archives and the archive of the Church of Jesus Christ in Madagascar (FJKM), Antananarivo; at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London; at Tÿ John

Acknowledgments

xiii

Penri, Swansea, and the Llyfrgell Genedlaethol, Aberystwyth, United Kingdom; as well as at the Centre des Archives d'Outre-Mer, Aix-en-Provence, France. Thanks to the staff of all these institutions for their assistance and especially to Berthe Raminosa at the FJKM archive, and Dewi Myrddin Hughes and his colleagues at Tŷ John Penri who went out of their way to help. Olga Ramilisonina and my father Ian Crossland were enormously helpful in carrying out archival research and checking references.

Of the many images in this book, those photographs by William Ellis stand out for their early representations of highland landscapes and people. My thanks to Robert Bell of the Wisbech and Fenland Museum for assistance with finding these, and to the museum for permission to reproduce Figures 11 and 21. Figure 9 was supplied by Yr Amgueddfa Ceredigion. Thanks to Michael Freeman and Carrie Canham for their enthusiastic help with tracking down image. Thanks also to John Mack and Katherine Coleman for helping me figure out the British Museum's permissions system. At Columbia University the staff of the Art History and Archaeology Media Center was a great help in scanning and preparing slides for publication. Thanks to Rose Matzkin, who compiled many of the images and created the base maps that are used in Figures 17, 18, and 24. Michael Taylor also helped with research and with organizing materials. I am grateful to Chapurukha Kusimba and Christopher Philipp at the Field Museum of Chicago for allowing me to photograph the coins and scales that the museum holds in the Linton collections, and to Julie Pomerantz and Georgina Cullman for help in tracking down a 10,000 ariary note at the last minute for Figure 2.

Colleagues at Columbia University have been unstintingly supportive while I've been working on this book and have created a warm and nurturing environment for research and writing. Marilyn Astwood, Juana Cabrera, Michael Chin, and Esperanza Soriano have always been there when I've needed them, and have helped with all sorts of logistical issues with good humor and great resourcefulness. Particular thanks to Nadia Abu-El Haj, Terence D'Altroy, E. Valentine Daniel, Catherine Fennell, Severin Fowles, Hlonipha Mokoena, Rosalind Morris, Elizabeth Povinelli, Nan Rothschild, and Paige West for comments and conversations about various drafts of chapters, and to Lila Abu-Lughod and Brinkley Messick for their support and encouragement. Val Daniel introduced me to Peirce's writings when I was a graduate student at the University of Michigan, and I hope that he enjoys the direction that I've gone with Peirce's work. He has been a source of great inspiration, and I've also benefited enormously from the close readings that Paul Kockelman and Lesley Sharp made of different chapters. Sections of the book have been read by many people, including the students of my graduate class on archaeological semiotics, and anonymous readers for Cambridge University Press. Jennifer Cole, Shannon Dawdy, Sarah Fee, and Albert Gonzalez provided me with a careful and critical reading of different parts of the book, along with stimulating suggestions and tactful criticisms. Gwyn Campbell, Pier Larson, and Genese Sodikoff gave me helpful comments on an early draft of Chapters 2 and 3. Their suggestions pushed me to think more carefully and critically about the missionary encounter. Henry Wright, Susan Kus, Victor Raharijaona, and Mike Parker Pearson not only read chapters but also gave me invaluable support while writing, and while carrying out fieldwork in Madagascar. Mike is also responsible for the title Ancestral Encounters; thanks, too, to Karen Godden for advice and a sympathetic ear. Kevin Frey, Sarah Fee, Susan Kus, Victor Raharijaona, and Olga Ramilisonina checked some of my Malagasy translations; my Malagasy is a work in progress, and I am grateful for the help with this. Beatrice Rehl and Anastasia Graf at Cambridge University Press have been patient and supportive editors; thanks, too, to Shana Meyer at Aptara Inc. for her help with production of this volume. My thanks to all of these readers for taking the time to give me comments and for generously sharing ideas and sources that have been important in bringing the manuscript to its final state. The errors and issues that remain are of course all my own.

Finally, thanks to my family for sticking with me while I saw this through, especially to my parents, Ian and Vivienne, who have shown so much interest in my work, and to Sheena and Tom Boyd for all their encouraging support. Last of all, thanks to Brian for your love and for helping me not to carry it all.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-03609-3 - Ancestral Encounters in Highland Madagascar: Material Signs and Traces of the Dead

Zoë Crossland

Frontmatter

More information

Map of Madagascar showing major towns and regions mentioned in the text