

Contents

List of figure	page ix
Foreword	xi
Preface	xv
Introduction: the ultimate value proposition	1
1 Modern happiness studies and “individual subjective wellbeing”: you only get what you measure	10
Measuring happiness	15
Issues of measurement	24
The need for a narrative	32
2 Happiness and income: how much happiness can money buy?	39
In a given country, are the rich happier than the poor?	42
Are richer countries happier than poorer countries?	53
Do countries become happier as they grow richer?	61
How much happiness can money buy?	71
3 Choice, desire, and pleasure: is happiness getting what you want or wanting what you get?	78
How to spend it	78
Spoiled for choice	83
Comforts, pleasures, and the education of desire	96
4 The biotechnology of happiness: not just a “quick fix”	111
It’s all in the mind	112
Beyond pleasure and satisfaction	115
When all else fails	137

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-04463-0 - Happiness and Virtue Ethics in Business: The Ultimate Value Proposition

Alejo José G. Sison

Table of Contents

More information

viii CONTENTS

5	Working on happiness	151
	Happiness and employment	152
	The unhappiness of the unemployed	155
	The happiness of the employed	161
	Happiness and leisure	174
	Happiness and inflation: having more money, yet feeling worse	177
6	Happiness, politics, and religion: now and at the hour of our death	184
	The role of institutions	184
	The demographics of happiness	186
	Democracy and happiness	195
	Democracy and economic growth	202
	Democracy, rights, and freedoms	204
	Religion: belief and practice	212
	Religion and happiness	214
	Voluntary participation and institutions	222
7	Aristotelian virtue ethics: the forgotten philosophical tradition on happiness	229
	Politics, economy, and ethics	232
	The analogy of the virtues	241
	Virtues in actions	242
	Virtues in habits	243
	Virtues in character	244
	Virtues in lifestyles	246
	Yesterday's answers to today's questions	249
	Having, doing, becoming	269
	Conclusion: learning to be happy	275
	Index	288