

Thieves in Court

From the seemingly insignificant theft of some bread and a dozen apples in nineteenth-century rural Germany, to the high courts and modern-day property laws, this English-language translation of Habermas' Diebe vor Gericht explores how everyday incidents of petty stealing and the ordinary people involved in these cases came to shape the current legal system. Habermas draws from an unusual cache of archival documents of theft cases, tracing the evolution and practice of the legal system of Germany through the nineteenth century. This close reading – relying on approaches of legal anthropology – challenges long-standing narratives of legal development, state building, and modern notions of the rule of law.

Ideal for legal historians and scholars of modern German and nineteenth-century European history, this innovative volume steps outside of the classic narratives of legal history and gives an insight into the interconnectedness of social, legal, and criminal history.

REBEKKA HABERMAS holds the chair in modern European history at the Georg August University, Göttingen. She is an editor of the of the journal Historische Anthropologie and of the book series Historische Studien.

KATHLEEN MITCHELL DELL'ORTO has, in the course of her career, held positions in university teaching, private industry, and the United States government. As a professional linguist for many decades, she has translated documents and books on subjects from science and technology, the humanities, and law.

Publications of the German Historical Institute

Edited by

SIMONE LÄSSIG

with the assistance of David Lazar

The German Historical Institute is a center for advanced study and research whose purpose is to provide a permanent basis for scholarly cooperation among historians from the Federal Republic of Germany and the United States. The Institute conducts, promotes, and supports research into both American and German political, social, economic, and cultural history; into transatlantic migration, especially during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries; and into the history of international relations, with special emphasis on the roles played by the United States and Germany.

Recent Books in the Series:

- Adam T. Rosenbaum, Bavarian Tourism and the Modern World, 1800–1950
 Hartmut Berghoff, Jürgen Kocka, and Dieter Ziegler, editors, Business in the Age of Extremes: Essays in Modern German and Austrian Economic History
 Lars Maischak, German Merchants in the Nineteenth-Century Atlantic
 Thomas W. Maulucci, Jr., and Detlef Junker, editors, GIs in Germany: The Social, Economic, Cultural, and Political History of the American Military Presence
 Gerald D. Feldman, Austrian Banks in the Period of National Socialism
 Eric C. Steinhart, The Holocaust and the Germanization of Ukraine
 Alison Efford, German Immigrants, Race, and Citizenship in the Civil War Era
 Cathryn Carson, Heisenberg in the Atomic Age: Science and the Public Sphere
 Michaela Hoenicke Moore, Know Your Enemy: The American Debate on Nazism, 1933–1945
 Yair Mintzker, The Defortification of the German City, 1689–1866
 Astrid M. Eckert, The Struggle for the Files: The Western Allies and the Return of German Archives after the Second World War
 Winson Chu, The German Minority in Interwar Poland
 Hartmut Berghoff and Uta Andrea Balbier, The East German Economy, 1945–2010: Falling Behind or Catching Up?
 Roger Chickering and Stig Förster, editors, War in an Age of Revolution, 1775–1815
 Monica Black, Death in Berlin: From Weimar to Divided Germany
 John R. McNeill and Corinna R. Unger, editors, Environmental Histories of the Cold War
 Christof Mauch and Kiran Klaus Patel, The United States and Germany during the Twentieth Century: Competition and Convergence

Thieves in Court

The Making of the German Legal System in the Nineteenth Century

REBEKKA HABERMAS

University of Göttingen

TRANSLATED BY KATHLEEN MITCHELL DELL'ORTO

GERMAN HISTORICAL INSTITUTE

Washington, D.C.

and

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
 978-1-107-04677-1 — Thieves in Court
 Rebekka Habermas, Translated by Kathleen Mitchell Dell'Orto
 Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE
 UNIVERSITY PRESS

One Liberty Plaza, New York NY 10006, USA

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107046771

© Verlag Campus, Frankfurt/New York, 2008

© Cambridge University Press 2016 English edition

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2016

Printed in the United States of America by Sheridan Books, Inc.

A catalog record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

NAMES: Habermas, Rebekka, 1959– author.

TITLE: Thieves in court : the making of the German legal system in the nineteenth century / Rebekka Habermas.

OTHER TITLES: Diebe vor Gericht English

DESCRIPTION: New York : Cambridge University Press, 2016. | Series: Publications of the German Historical Institute | Includes bibliographical references and index.

IDENTIFIERS: LCCN 2016025908 | ISBN 9781107046771 (Hardback)

Subjects: LCSH: Theft—Germany—History—19th century. | Criminal law—Germany—History—19th century. | BISAC: HISTORY / Europe / General.

CLASSIFICATION: LCC KK8648 .H33 2008 | DDC 349.4309/034—dc23 LC record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2016025908>

ISBN 978-1-107-04677-1 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

This work was translated by Kathleen Mitchell Dell'Orto

The translation of this work was funded by Geisteswissenschaften International –

Translation Funding for Humanities and Social Sciences from Germany, a joint initiative of the Fritz Thyssen Foundation, the German Federal Foreign Office, the collecting society VG WORT, and the Börsenverein des Deutschen Buchhandels (German Publishers & Booksellers Association).

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-04677-1 — Thieves in Court
Rebekka Habermas , Translated by Kathleen Mitchell Dell'Orto
Frontmatter
More Information

---

to Hepp for everything

Contents

Acknowledgments	page xi
Introduction: Questions Regarding Thieves, Reformers, Jurists, and Others	I
PART I WHAT IS THEFT: QUESTIONS REGARDING THIEVES AND JURISTS – QUESTIONS REGARDING HONOR AND PROPERTY
1 Who Are the Thieves and Who Are the Victims?	19
2 How Does a Person End Up in Court – Why Does Something Go on the Record?	55
3 The Theft Happens – from Act to Crime	76
PART II HOW LAW IS MADE: EVIDENCE PRODUCTION
4 Techniques for Finding Truth – the Slow Production of the Modern State of Law	100
5 Techniques for Finding Truth and Other Types of Knowledge Formation: How Can a New Outlook Be Put into Practice?	127
6 Techniques for Finding Truth: How Do People Become Jurists and How Does Property Come into Being?	155
PART III IN THE COURTROOM, OR WHAT IS LAW?
7 Reforms for More Legal Equality, Justice, and Public Openness?	187
8 The Meaninglessness of Jury Courts for Justice	199

9	Legitimation through Procedure	209
10	Irritations, Dissonances, and Various Other Matters: More Than Just Theater	244
	Conclusion: The Making of the Modern Legal System – Thieves and Property	281
	Relevant Laws	291
	Bibliography	295
	Index	341

Acknowledgments

I have many friends and colleagues to thank for having allowed me to put forward parts of the book in various stages for discussion: Michael Werner and Jacques Revel (Paris), Martina Kessel (Bielefeld), Lucian Hölscher and Regina Schulte (Bochum), Jakob Tanner (Zürich), and Alf Lüdtke (Erfurt). I also want to thank the Einstein Forum (Potsdam) and especially the Historic Anthropology Work Group, which had to discuss many versions of this book. I profited greatly from those discussions.

I would likewise like to thank Susanna Burghartz (Basel) both for suggestions just dropped into telephone conversations in passing and for much reading. Maria Rhode (Göttingen) also contributed a great deal without slowing her running speed. For reading I am especially grateful to Philipp Müller (London), Richard Hölzl (Göttingen), Alexandra Przyrembel (Göttingen), and Gerd Schwerhoff (Dresden), all of whom had to deal with everything in very rough form. I found the reading by Sylvia Kesper-Biermann (Bayreuth) particularly helpful – for that I owe special thanks.

For what was probably the most important information, calling my attention to the Marburg Main State Archives, I would like to thank Joachim Eibach (Berlin).

Without the work of Alexandra Ortmann (Göttingen/Berlin) I would be suffering from even deeper, and especially even longer-lasting, desperation. She did much more than edit the manuscript. She wrote comments ranging from friendly to annoyed in the margins, made suggestions for shortening and putting in commas, and especially tried to recreate the context that had sometimes gotten away from me.

I owe Adalbert Hepp thanks for commenting on chapter drafts in such an unusually friendly way that it instantly became clear to me: that must not have been it yet. Because of her first impression (gained from reading only one page) and her comment, “That is too boring for me. . .,” Toni helped bring about the result that not everything stayed quite so boring.

Finally, Tanja Hommen (Campus Publishers) was likewise subjected to painstaking reading of the manuscript and spared me several bloopers, not only of a stylistic kind. For that and for the judicious management of the manuscript and then the relatively quick publication of the German edition I wish to give thanks.

Without the work of Mrs. Walter, who attempted to keep the worst university demands from reaching my desk, and the work of a great number of former research assistants in Bochum and Göttingen, the book would never have gotten finished. In the last years they have had to suffer many tribulations with the thieves: Bettina Brockmeyer (then Bochum, today Bielefeld), Lena Steilen, and Eckart Schörle (Erfurt), who found every Hessian town, no matter how small; Wiebke Jensen (Göttingen), Alexandra Ortmann (Göttingen/Berlin), Christina Nawa (Regensburg), who developed what is probably the most extensive database of nineteenth-century thieves, and Ole Münch. Christin Templin and Sandra Michaelis also searched one last time for errors – and found an endless number. In cases of doubt, I was the one who smuggled in the ones still present.

They transcribed and corrected; they created databases; they sought to bring order to the murky Electoral Hessian administration and to track down important, and less important, jurists. More than anything else, however, they showed me repeatedly that universities involve more than administration of outside funds and of real and fictive significant details: they are places of intellectual curiosity.

For that I am grateful.