

The Corporation

The corporation has become an increasingly dominant force in contemporary society. However, comprehensive, in-depth analysis of the concept of the corporation is often restricted, or limited to one disciplinary approach. This handbook brings together the cutting-edge scholarship, expertise and insight of leading scholars in a wide range of disciplines, notably management studies, law, history, political science, anthropology, sociology and criminology, using a critical approach to dissect and understand the corporation.

Ten chapters provide overviews of the state of play of critical scholarship on the corporation in each of these disciplines. Further contributors tackle hot topics, such as corporate social responsibility, corporate crime, global value chains, financialization, and the interaction between corporations and communities. Finally, they consider resistance and alternatives to the corporation.

With its interdisciplinary approach, this book is an invaluable resource for all readers studying the past, present and future of the corporation.

It takes company to write a book, and the company it took for this one was a multinational enterprise if ever there was one. Starting as a Dutch–New Zealand joint venture, it soon became a partnership between a core group of individuals who set the agenda, vision and tone for the project. We would like to thank especially Hugh Willmott, Jeroen Veldman, David Whyte, Paddy Ireland, Tom Hadden, Peter Fleming, Jason Glynos, David Quentin, David Hansen-Miller, Liam Campling and Andrew Sanchez, who were there from the start, and instrumental in getting the project up and running. After an angel investment from the Economic and Social Research Council, we were able to ‘go public’ with the Critical Corporation’s seminar series. This allowed us to invite key ‘shareholder activists’, critics and organisers Ewa Jasiewicz, Leah Borrromeo, Tansy Hoskins, and Claire Fauset as well as significant international stakeholders, who became close collaborators, such as Dan Danielsen and Jennifer Bair. We would like to thank them for the opportunity to host a joint conference with the Corporation in Global Society Research Group at Harvard’s Institute of Global Law & Policy in June 2014. We are also grateful to Glenn Morgan and Bobby Bannerjee for the opportunity to present the project at LAEMOS in Havana, Cuba, in March 2013 and Susanne Soederberg and Laureen Snider for including us in the ‘Critical Perspectives on Corporate Power’ CRN at the Law & Society Association

Annual Meeting in Boston in 2013 and Seattle in 2015.

The amount of time, effort and enthusiasm the authors of the chapters in this volume dedicated to the enterprise is truly humbling. Many of the authors in this book also participated in and spoke at the seminars and public debates we have organized, and it has been such an intellectually stimulating and inspiring experience to work with each of you. Our Critical Corporation Project could not have been as multinational, as critical and as interdisciplinary – and indeed as cooperative, without you. If this book needs a dedication, it is to you. In regards to the final public events which we held after the book had been completed, and just before the project was wound up, we would like to thank Swethaa Ballakrishnan, Jo Littler, Adrienne Roberts, Sofie Tornhill, Melissa Tyler and Ulrike Marx for allowing us to look beyond the horizon of this project to a more radical, intersectional and communal future.

Furthermore, our deep thanks go to Peter Aggar at CLS and Robert Whitelam and Nicola Jones at Cass for invaluable administrative, logistical and moral support, both with the funding application, the events and the website. At Cambridge University Press, Paula Parish, Valerie Appleby, Stephen Acerra, Mary Bongiovi and James Gregory were instrumental in getting the book to press. Finally, Marie Selwood provided eagle-eyed editing under high pressure with patience and grace.
