The Emergence of Humanitarian Intervention

How should the international community react when a government transgresses humanitarian norms and violates the human rights of its own nationals? And where does the responsibility lie to protect people from such acts of violation? In a profound new study, Fabian Klose unites a team of leading scholars to investigate some of the most complex and controversial debates regarding the legitimacy of protecting humanitarian norms and universal human rights by non-violent and violent means. Charting the development of humanitarian intervention from its origins in the nineteenth century through to the present day, the book surveys the philosophical and legal rationales of enforcing humanitarian norms by military means, and how attitudes to military intervention on humanitarian grounds have changed over the course of three centuries. Drawing from a wide range of disciplines, the authors lend a fresh perspective to contemporary dilemmas using case studies from Europe, the United States, Africa, and Asia.

Fabian Klose is a senior researcher at the Leibniz Institute of European History (IEG) in Mainz, Germany.

The present book is the result of an existing network among international scholars in the field of humanitarianism and human rights as well as of the annual conference of the German Association for Historical Peace Research (Arbeitskreis Historische Friedensforschung) held in October 2012 at the Historisches Kolleg in Munich. I am most grateful to the German Foundation for Peace Research (DSF) for the generous funding of the conference and to the German Research Foundation (DFG), the History Department of the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität Munich, and the German Association for Historical Peace Research for their significant support. I am indebted to all the scholars from different disciplines attending the conference for their perceptive remarks and contributions, which significantly helped to shape this book. Additionally, I would like to say thank you to Adrian Franco, who worked relentlessly as conference administrative assistant as well as conference rapporteur. Furthermore, I would like to thank Martin Aust at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität Munich, Brendan Simms at the University of Cambridge, and Tobias Grill at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität Munich for their important suggestions on various issues concerning the conference and the book. I am particularly grateful to Johannes Paulmann at the Leibniz Institute of European History in Mainz, Martin Geyer at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität Munich, and Andrew Thompson at the University of Exeter for their crucial and perceptive comments on earlier drafts of the manuscript. During the process of preparing this book for publication, I could rely heavily on the editorial work of Dona Geyer for which I am very grateful. Finally, I would like to thank Michael Watson at Cambridge University Press for his inestimable support in the publication process. Many thanks to all of you!
