This clear and compelling account of the Habsburg Monarchy in its last century explains why, a century after its disappearance, it has never been more relevant. With extensive discussion of recent historiographic controversies about the Monarchy’s character and viability, Steven Beller presents a detailed account of the main strands of the Monarchy’s political history and how its economic, social and cultural development interacted with this main narrative. While recognising the importance of these larger trends, readers will learn how the historical accident of personality and the complexities of high politics and diplomacy still had a central impact on the Monarchy’s fate.

Although some would see the Monarchy as an atavistic irrelevance in the modern age, its multicultural, multinational experience and inclusive ‘logic’ were in many ways more relevant to our modernity than the nationalism that did so much to bring about its demise.

Steven Beller is an independent scholar, having studied history at the University of Cambridge, and been a Research Fellow at Peterhouse, Cambridge. He has been a Member of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, and a Fellow of the Institute for the Human Sciences (IWM), Vienna, as well as the International Research Centre for Cultural Studies (IFK), also in Vienna. He has written extensively on subjects in modern Central European and modern Jewish history and was awarded the Austrian State History Prize for the German translation of his first book Vienna and the Jews, 1867–1938: A Cultural History (Cambridge, 1989) in 1995. Other books include Herzl (1991); Francis Joseph (1996); A Concise History of Austria (Cambridge, 2006); Antisemitism: A Very Short Introduction (2007, 2015); and Democracy (2013). He is a member of the European Academy of Sciences and Arts and has taught modern European and modern Jewish history.
New Approaches to European History

Series editors
T.C.W. Blanning, Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge
Brendan Simms, Peterhouse, Cambridge

New Approaches to European History is an important textbook series, which provides concise but authoritative surveys of major themes and problems in European history since the Renaissance. Written at a level and length accessible to advanced school students and undergraduates, each book in the series addresses topics or themes that students of European history encounter daily: the series embraces both some of the more ‘traditional’ subjects of study and those cultural and social issues to which increasing numbers of school and college courses are devoted. A particular effort is made to consider the wider international implications of the subject under scrutiny.

To aid the student reader, scholarly apparatus and annotation is light, but each work has full supplementary bibliographies and notes for further reading: where appropriate, chronologies, maps, diagrams and other illustrative material are also provided.

For a complete list of titles published in the series, please see:
www.cambridge.org/newapproaches.
The Habsburg Monarchy, 1815–1918

Steven Beller
Independent Scholar
Contents

List of Figures vi
List of Maps viii
Acknowledgements x
Introduction: Austria and Modernity 1
1 1815–1835: Restoration and Procrastination 25
2 1835–1851: Revolution and Reaction 54
3 1852–1867: Transformation 87
4 1867–1879: Liberalisation 128
5 1879–1897: Nationalisation 160
6 1897–1914: Modernisation 192
7 1914–1918: Self-Destruction 241
Conclusion: Central Europe and the Paths Not Taken 273

Bibliography 287
Index 298
Figures

1. Poster advertising service by the Austrian State Railways to Ragusa (Dubrovnik). page 3
2. The Congress of Vienna, 1815, after a painting by Jean Baptiste Isabey. 27
3. ‘The Grand Gallop’, by Johann Strauss Sr., etching by Andreas Geiger and Johann Christian Schoeller, from Bäuerles’ Theaterzeitung, 1839. 40
4. Archduke Johann and Anna Plochl, after a painting by Matthäus Loder (1781–1828). 51
5. Opening of the Reichstag by Archduke Johann, in the Winter Riding School of the Hofburg, 22 July 1848. 72
6. Empress Maria Anna and Archduchess Sophie escort Franz Joseph I to the throne, by Leopold Kupelwieser. 77
8. Emperor Franz Joseph and Empress Elisabeth after Their Coronation as King and Queen of Hungary in 1867, after the painting by Eduard Engerth. 122
9. Trieste’s harbour in 1905. 144
10. The railways float in the Makart parade of 1879. 157
11. The Hungarian Parliament Building in Budapest. 167
12. Cartoon of Karl Lueger, the ultimate political opportunist. From Der Floh, 10 May 1885. 174
13. Badeni riots in Prague, 30 November 1897. 190
14. Large-scale wall map of the results of the 1907 Reichsrat election. 202
15. The ironworks at Vitkovice, Moravia. 206
16. The Municipal Theatre, Cracow, opened in 1893. 207
17. Poster from 1908 for the Austrian Lloyd. 210
18. Reading room of the Café Griensteidl, 1897. 212
19. Mahler and friends, Vienna, 1905. 214
Figures

20. Berta Zuckerkandl, 1908, photographed by Madame d’Ora. 218
21. Franz Joseph on the Old Bridge in Mostar, 3 June 1910. 234
22. Czech-language war bonds poster. 239
23. Karl, accompanied by Zita and Otto, at Franz Joseph’s funeral, 30 November 1916. 262
24. Karl and Wilhelm II at Spa, 12 May 1918. 267
25. Declaration of the Republic of German Austria in Vienna, 12 November 1918. 272
Maps

1. The Habsburg Monarchy 1815–1918. ix
2. Central Europe after the Congress of Vienna in 1815. 24
3. The nationalities of the Habsburg Monarchy around 1890. 159
4. The Balkans 1912–1914. 237
5. The nationalising of Central Europe, 1918–1921. 278
Map 1: The Habsburg Monarchy 1815–1918.
Acknowledgements

I thank Tim Blanning for inviting me to write this ‘sequel’ to Charles W. Ingrao’s The Habsburg Monarchy 1618–1815 in the New Approaches to European History series. Ingrao’s book is one I have much admired, and I regard it an honour to write the ‘follow-up’. I initially had some doubts about how new my approach would be, and readers of two of my previous books, Francis Joseph and A Concise History of Austria, will find many reminders of those here. On the other hand, Habsburg historiography has recently seen the publication of important, revisionist interpretations such as Pieter Judson’s The Habsburg Empire, and other, older texts have rewarded closer study. This has all led me to some re-evaluation, and hence a new approach after all. The format of this book does not facilitate detailed acknowledgement of the sources used, but this book could well be characterised as a conversation between my previous views, and those of revisionists such as Alan Sked, John Deak, Lothar Hôbelt, István Deák, Gary Cohen and Judson, with Helmut Rumpler, Gerald Stourzh, Moritz Csaky, Heidemarie Uhl, Ernst Hanisch, Waltraud Heindl, Manfred Rauchensteiner, Claudio Magris, Jonathan Sperber, John W. Boyer, R.J.W. Evans, C.A. Macartney, Roy Bridge, Mark Cornwall and Norman Stone, offering their own points of order and information along the way, with comments by many, many others added into the mix. I only regret that I cannot acknowledge all more fully.

I am most grateful to Nancy M. Wingfield, Raoul Kneucker and Aviel Roshwald for reading this book in manuscript and offering their sound advice (whether I followed it or not). I would also like to thank the many interlocutors I have had, including Allan Janik, Fritz Stadler, Erhard Busek, Emil Brix, Edmund Leites, Ian Reifowitz, Erik Willenz, Susi Schneider, Erhard Stackl, Brigitte Fuchs, Elisabeth de Gelsey, Gertraud Auer d’Olmio and Jan and Herta Palme – as well as the members of the Wednesday and Friday Stammtische. I am further grateful to Eva and Thomas Nowotny, Andrea Schrammel, Andreas Pawlitschek, Harald Günther, Peter Mikl, Andreas Stadler and Christine Moser, who have...
Acknowledgements

offered such generous, diplomatic advice and encouragement in recent years.
I thank Günter Bischof for inviting me to the ‘Vienna 1900’ Workshop at Center Austria, University of New Orleans, in 2016. Regarding recent visits to the region of study itself, I am particularly grateful to Piero Budinich for bringing me to fabulous Trieste and to Helmut Konrad for a visit to Graz. Radmila Schweitzer and the Wittgenstein Initiative have generously invited me to Vienna, as has Christian Glanz, and I am most thankful to Michael Haas for helping out with accommodation there. Klaus Nellen’s invitation to speak at the IWM was also most appreciated, and I am very grateful to Oliver Rathkolb for arranging a research visit to Vienna.

Oliver Rathkolb further provided one of the key images for the book, the map of the 1907 election. Ingrid Kastel at the Albertina provided the beautiful image from the Austrian Lloyd. All other illustrations were provided by Hans Petschar and his team at the remarkably comprehensive Picture Archive of the Austrian National Library, for which I am most appreciative.

Michael Watson, Elizabeth Friend-Smith, Abigail Walkington, Ruth Boyes, Sunantha Ramamoorthy and the other members of the editorial team also have my gratitude, as do the anonymous readers of the proposal and the first draft.

It remains to thank the extended Haiböck family for their remarkable generosity and hospitality all these years. I shall always be deeply grateful to my beloved, now departed, parents, as well as my splendid parents-in-law, Doris Brimmer and the much missed Andrew F. Brimmer. I owe my wife, the remarkable Esther Brimmer, more than I can say. I would also like to thank my son, Nathaniel, for his insistence on my writing another book – whether he meant this one or not.

The book itself is as much a warning as a recommendation: about what happens when decisions are made with unforeseen consequences, or misfortune upends a promising future, and something or someone ends before their proper time. In that spirit, I dedicate this book to the memory of my dear, much mourned, cousin, Francis Davin.

STEVEN BELLER, WASHINGTON, DC, 23 OCTOBER 2017.