

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More informationIndex

- Abrams, Elliott, 109–114
 accommodationism, 220–225
 Acheson, Dean, 40n.38, 225–233 action alternative narratives concerning September 11 and, 158–163 in dominant narratives, 14–16 erosion of non-interventionist narrative in face of, 75–83
 in national security narratives, 12–13
 in Terror narrative, 150–157
 Afghanistan
 Soviet invasion of, 111–114, 265–269
 War on Terror and, 32–36, 269–275
 agents and agency. See also authority;
 dramatic pentad
 in alternative narratives of September 11, 161–163 dynamics of contestation and, 41–48
 erosion of non-interventionist
 narrative in face of, 75–83
 narrative dominance and role of, 1–7
 in national security narratives, 7–16, 276–279
 in Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–133, 142–145
 in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 119–121
 rhetorical skill as, 32–41
 Roosevelt's national security narrative and, 70–75
 in Terror narrative, 150–157
 United States hegemony and, 148–149
 age of fracture, national security narrative and, 276–279, 284–285
 Alexander, Jeffrey, 14–16
 Algeria, French policy failures in, 265–269
 Al Qaeda
 Iraq linked to, 32–36, 163–172 responsibility for September 11 attacks claimed by, 158–163
 Terror narrative and, 269–275, 279–282 alternative narratives, 46–47 to Cold War Consensus, 191–195 dominant narrative marginalization of, 32–36, 46–47 military success as advantage for, nationalist narrative on Korean War, 220–233, politics of national security and,
 187–189
 183–189
 Reagan's Cold War narrative and, 114–119 rhetorical coercion concerning Iraq war and, 168–172 to Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 133–145, security narratives and, 22–24
 to Terror narrative, 158–163
 America First Committee, 75–88,
 American exceptionalism national security narrative and,
 13–14, 35–36
 post-Vietnam emergence of, 257–264 anti-war movement (Vietnam War) cautious rhetoric of, 251–257 criticism of Vietnam War in, 248–249
 delegitimation of, 245–246 argument. See also instrumental argument; normative argument national security narratives and, 279–285 presidents' misuse of, 66–68

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

Index

371

- as rhetorical mode, 36–41
- in Roosevelt's rhetoric, 79–83
- Aristotle, 7–8, 31–32
- Armitage, Richard, 148–149
- arms control policy, 246–251
- Aron, Raymond, 191–195
- The Arrogance of Empire* (Fulbright), 255–257
- “Arsenal of Democracy” speech, 79–83
- Ashcroft, John, 148–149
- Atlantic Charter, 79–83
- audience
 - legitimation of security narrative and, 14–16
 - response to security narrative and, 58–65
- Austin, J. L., 22–24
- authenticity
 - legitimation of security narrative and, 14–16
 - in Terror narrative, 161–163
- authority. See also agents and agency
 - dominant narrative and, 25–26, 48–52
 - fragmentation of, 284–285
 - national security narratives and, 5–7, 31–32, 52–55, 279–282
 - in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 133–142
- Bacevich, Andrew, 269–275
- Barthes, Roland, 8–9, 52–55
- Basic National Security Policy (1962 draft), 236–245
- battlefield performance. See also war outcomes
 - Cold War consensus and, 219–220
 - erosion of dominant narrative and, 176–179
 - Korean War and, 225–233
 - politics of failure and, 179–183, 185–186, 225–233, 265–269
 - politics of national security narratives and, 183–189, 282–285
 - success as support for narrative, 187–189
- Bay of Pigs operation, 236–245
- Berger, Thomas, 179–183
- Berinsky, Adam, 91–96
- Berlin, Isaiah, 138–142
- Berlin Wall, as historical rupture, 148–149
- Beschloss, Michael, 241–242
- Betts, Richard, 191–195
- Bially Mattern, Janice, 23n.98
- bin Laden, Osama, 158–172,
- Bismarck, Otto von, 17–18
- Black, Edwin, 14–16
- Blum, John Morton, 68–70
- Bohlen, Charles, 233–236, 237–238
- Bourdieu, Pierre, 8n.16
- Bricker, John, 233–236
- Brooks, David, 10–11, 12
- Bruner, Jerome, 10–11, 36–41
- Brzezinski, Zbigniew, 100–101, 155–156
- bully pulpit
 - authority in dominant narrative and, 48–52
 - limits to, 66–68
- Bundy, McGeorge, 187–189
- Burke, Kenneth, 12–13, 52–55
- Bush, George H. W.
 - Gulf War and, 169–170, 187–189
 - presidential narrative authority and, 50–52
 - rhetorical strategies of, 46–47
- Bush, George W., 5–7, 38–39, 44–46
 - alternative narratives dismissed by, 158–163
 - Iraq setbacks and, 269–275
 - storytelling rhetoric of, 101–105
 - “surge” in Iraq and, 1
 - Terror narrative of, 122, 145–147, 150–157, 163–172, 279–282
- Byrd, Robert, 169n.158
- Callahan, William, 161
- Cambodia, Vietnam War and
 - expansion into, 251–257
- Cantril, Hadley, 128–133
- Carroll, Lewis, 9
- Carter, Jimmy, 99, 101–105, 114–115, 255–264,
- case selection logic, 58–65
- Casey, Steven, 128–133
- Cato Institute, 155–156
- causality, security narratives and, 20–24
- Caute, David, 224

- caution
 - foreign policy consequences of, 83–88
 - in Franklin Roosevelt's decision-making, 75–83, 88–91
 - politics of national security and, 185–186
- Centering Resonance Analysis
 - application and methodology, 301–307
 - bundled terms in, 308–310
 - of Reagan's foreign affairs rhetoric, 101–105
 - of Roosevelt's foreign affairs rhetoric, 66–68, 70–83, 124–133
- Central America
 - political unrest in, 97–99
 - Reagan's rhetoric on, 111–114, 116–119
- Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)
 - activities in Nicaragua of, 114–119
 - Cuban Missile Crisis and, 242–244
 - Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and, 111–114
- Century Group, 75–83
- change, theories of, 179–183
- Cheney, Dick, 163–172
- Chicago Tribune*, 70–75, 100–101
 - Cold War consensus and, 195–214, 236–237
 - Cuban Missile Crisis and, 242–244
 - Korean War and, 225–233
 - leadership changes at, 216–218
 - New Right ideology in, 257–264
- China. See also Nationalist China
 - as global threat, 269–275
 - Korean War and, 225–233
 - rise of, 161–163
 - Sino-Soviet split and, 237–238, 250–251
 - Vietnam War and role of, 250–251
- Christie, Chris, 289–293
- Church, Frank, 246–257,
- Churchill, Winston, 88, 91–96, 138–142, 187–189
- Clausewitz, Carl von, 184–185
- Clemenceau, Georges, 187–189
- Clinton, Bill, 44–46, 101–105, 166–167, 169–170
- Clinton, Hillary, 269–275, 289–293
- closure, individual need for, 52–55
- coercive diplomacy, Cold War
 - consensus and, 218
- cognitive psychology, in security
 - narratives and, 52–55
- Cohen, Roger, 32–36
- coherence, narrative and, 10–11
- Cold War consensus
 - alternative narratives to, 114–119
 - basic elements of, 191–195
 - coding for, 315–318
 - contending explanations for, 212–218
 - contestation of, 18, 47–48, 245–246, 255–257
 - continuity in Carter-Reagan
 - Nicaraguan policy and, 114–115
 - Cuba and, 236–245
 - Cuban Missile Crisis and, 27–28
 - détente and, 246–251
 - divergence in media coverage of, 208–209
 - dominance of, 1–7, 176–179, 200–214
 - dynamics of, 27–28, 175, 189–190
 - erosion of, 55–58, 148–149, 200–214
 - evolution of, 191, 219–220
 - global politics and, 233–236
 - Korean War and, 27–28, 176–179, 205–210, 218, 220–236
 - limits of, 204–208
 - measurement of, 195–200
 - national security narrative and, 191–195, 265–269, 282–285
 - neoconservatives and, 97–99, 257–264
 - periodization of, 205–210
 - Reagan's adoption of, 97–109,
 - re-emergence after Vietnam, 246–251, 257–264
 - storytelling and, 39–41
 - traditional approaches, narrow focus of, 200–214
 - Vietnam War and, 1–7, 18, 27–28, 175, 191, 200–214
- Committee on War Information, 122–124
- Committee to Defend America by
 - Aiding the Allies, 75–83

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

Index

373

- communications technology, national security narrative and, 27–28
- Communist threat
 - Cold War consensus and, 27–28, 191–195, 200–214
 - divergence in media coverage of, 208–209
 - Korean War narrative and, 225–233
 - media representations of, 200–214
 - Reagan's rhetoric invoking, 101–105
 - security narrative in, 5–7
 - Vietnam War and invocation of, 246–251
- Congress
 - dominance of non-interventionists in, 83–88
 - erosion of non-interventionism in, 91–96
 - Reagan's contra policies and, 97–99
- Congressional Record*, 195n.24
- conjunctural theory of dominant narrative, 41–65
 - authority and, 48–52
 - Cold War consensus and, 176–179
 - content of national security narratives and, 52–55
 - evaluation of, 58–65
 - leadership limits and, 55–58
 - rhetorical performance and, 279–282
 - Terror narrative and, 161–163
- constructivist theory, national security narratives and, 19–20, 22–24, 279–282
- containment strategy
 - Cold War consensus and, 175, 191–195, 219–220
 - détente and, 246–251
 - global politics and, 233–236
 - in Iraq, 168–172
 - Korean War and, 228–233
 - national security narratives and, 39–41, 213–215, 246–251
- content analysis. See also Centering Resonance Analysis; human coding
 - bundled ideological terms, rhetorical strategies using, 75–83
 - of Bush's foreign affairs rhetoric, 122, 145–147, 150–157, 163–172, 269–275, 279–282
 - of Cold War consensus, 176–179, 195–200
 - limitations of, 199–200
 - methodology for, 301–307
 - national security narratives, 52–55, 58–65
 - of Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–133
 - of Reagan's rhetoric, 99–109, of Roosevelt's foreign affairs addresses, 308–310
 - of Terror narrative, 150–157
- contestation
 - of dominant narrative, 47–48, 279–282
 - within dominant narrative, 42–44
 - dynamics of, 41–48, 279–282
 - politics of national security and, 8–9, 58–65
 - war outcomes and, 183–189
- contra forces in Nicaragua
 - Congressional resistance to aid for, 114–119
 - contradictions to Regan narrative concerning, 109–114
 - Reagan's rhetoric concerning, 97–99, 102–109
- Cooper, John Sherman, 248–249
- Copenhagen School, 22–24
- costs of war, discussions relating to
 - rhetorical coercion in Iraq War narrative and silencing of, 168–172
 - Vietnam War opposition and, 246–251
- Council for Democracy, 75–83
- counterfactual analysis
 - failure of presidential narrative and, 66–68
 - Reagan's contra aid program and, 119–121
 - Roosevelt's "minimal rewrites" strategy and, 88–91
 - of Roosevelt's rhetoric, 88–91, 142–145
 - in security narratives, 58–65
- counter-framing, of Terror narrative, 155–156
- Cousins, Norman, 237–238
- Craig, Campbell, 242–244

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

374

Index

- credibility, presidential narrative
 - authority and, 50–52
- crime against humanity, September 11
 - attacks as, 158–163
- criminalization of terrorism, dominance
 - of Terror narrative and, 156–157
- The Crippled Giant* (Fulbright), 255–257
- crisis
 - authority of narrative and, 50–52
 - evolution of Terror narrative in
 - context of, 145–147, 150–157
 - narrative dominance and role of,
 - 25–26, 279–282
- Critchlow, Donald, 233–236
- critical junctures
 - narrative disorder and, 32–36
 - Reagan's rhetorical strategy and,
 - 97–99
 - theories of change and, 179–183
- critical theory
 - Copenhagen School and, 22n.94
 - security narrative and, 20–24
- Croft, Stuart, 20–24
- Cruz, Ted, 4
- Cuban Missile Crisis
 - Chicago Tribune* coverage of,
 - 242–244
 - Cold War consensus and, 27–28,
 - 176–179, 218, 236–245
 - in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric,
 - 101–105, 106
 - superpower relations in wake of,
 - 265–269
- cultural context
 - of dominant narratives, 176–179
 - national security narrative in, 24–25,
 - 284–285
 - in Pearl Harbor narrative, 136–138
 - politics of national security and,
 - 183–189
 - of September 11 attacks, 149–150
- Daschle, Tom, 171
- Dean, Howard, 269–275
- deception, leaders' use of, 55–58
- defense spending
 - battlefield performance and, 224
 - Cold War consensus and, 191–195
- De Gaulle, Charles, 5–7, 52–55, 88–91,
 - 265–269
- Demirel, Suleyman, 42–44
- democracy rhetoric
 - Bush's Terror narrative and, 163–172
 - Roosevelt's use of, 79–83
- Democratic Party
 - alternative to Reagan's Cold War
 - rhetoric and, 47–48, 66–68,
 - 97–99, 102–119,
 - Korean War and, 220–236
 - neoconservatives and, 260–264
 - opposition to Iraq surge and, 1
 - rhetorical coercion of Terror
 - narrative and, 44–46
 - Roosevelt's caution and, 83–88
 - Terror narrative and tactics of,
 - 50–52, 155–156, 163–164,
 - 168–172, 185–186, 269–275
- Denmark, Nazi invasion of, 75–83
- détente, national security narratives
 - and, 246–251
- Dewey, Thomas, 138–142, 224
- Diction content-analysis program,
 - 58–65, 301–307
 - of Roosevelt's foreign policy
 - speeches, 73–74
- Dirksen, Everett, 233–236, 242–244
- discursive dominance
 - Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative
 - and, 133–142
 - security narratives and, 20–24
- Divine, Robert, 79–83
- dominant narratives of national security
 - authority and, 48–52
 - changes in life-course of, 179–183
 - Cold War consensus as, 191–195,
 - 200–214
 - conjunctural theory of, 41–65
 - contestation within, 42–44, 47–48
 - contexts for, 32–36
 - dynamics of, 1–7, 44–46, 58–65,
 - 66–68
 - endurance of, 265–269
 - future challenges to, 293–296
 - international dimensions of, 265–269
 - legitimation and, 14–16, 20–24
 - limits of leadership and, 55–58
 - measurement of, 195–200
 - military outcomes and, 187–189,
 - 282–285
 - of non-interventionism, 68–75,

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More informationIndex

375

- Pearl Harbor narrative as, 133–142
- production of meaning and, 31–32
- rhetorical modes, 36–41
- role of political elites in, 183–189
- Terror narrative as, 150–157
- theoretical background, 58–65
- theory of, 31–32
- domino theory
 - Cold War consensus and, 195–200
 - Korean War and, 228–233
 - media coverage of, 200–214
 - Reagan's Cold War rhetoric and, 101–105
 - Vietnam War and, 246–251
- Dowd, Maureen, 289–293
- dramatic pentad
 - in alternative narratives of September 11 attacks, 158–163
 - in evolution of Terror narrative, 150–157
 - national security narrative and, 12–13
 - post-Cold War contestation of, 148–149
 - Reagan's storytelling rhetoric and, 97–99
 - Roosevelt's national security narrative and, 70–75
 - storytelling and, 52–55
- Drezner, Daniel, 289–293
- Dryfoos, Orvil, 216–218
- Dulles, John Foster, 224
- Edkins, Jenny, 8–9, 20–24
- Eisenhower, Dwight D., 101–105, 191–195, 224
 - Cold War consensus and, 242–244
 - globalism, 233–236
- elites (political and cultural)
 - framing of dominant narratives by, 32–36, 176–179
 - mass politics and, 8n.16
 - national security politics and, 183–189
 - opposition to Vietnam War and, 251–257
 - rise of New Right and, 257–264
- El Salvador, political unrest in, 97–99
- emplotment, security narrative and, 11
- ethnic identity, non-interventionist narrative and, 91–96
- evangelical tradition, in Terror narrative, 158–163
- evidence, in national security narratives, 279–285
- evil, in Terror narrative, 150–157, 163–172
- exigence, rhetorical, 55–58
- exogenous shocks. See also international events
 - Cold War consensus and, 212–218
 - critical junctures and, 179–183
 - disruption of dominant narratives and, 32–36
 - policy orthodoxies and, 22–24
- Federal Bureau of Investigation, harassment of anti-contra activists by, 116–119
- Feinstein, Dianne, 168–172
- Fierke, Karin, 20–24
- Fight for Freedom Committee, 75–83
- Fireside Chats, 66–68, 70–83,
- Ford, Gerald, 257–264
- Fordham, Benjamin, 224
- foreign aid programs, Cold War consensus and, 191–195, 200–214
- Foreign Economic Administration (FEA), 138–142
- foreign policy. See also policy debate
 - change in, 179–183
 - consequences of caution in, 83–88
 - limits of consensus in, 265–269
 - national security narratives and, 18–19, 44–46, 58–65, 279–282
 - neoconservatism and, 145–147
 - non-interventionist narrative challenge to Roosevelt in, 70–88, 124–133
 - pragmatism in, 293–296
 - sectional economic interests and, 91–96
 - September 11 attacks and, 150–157, 158–163
 - success as threat to dominant narrative, 187–189
- Foreign Policy Research Institute, 257–264

- Formosa (Taiwan), Korean War and, 228–233
- Foucault, Michel, 8n.16, 9, 20–24
- foundational narratives, persistence of, 286–293
- Four Freedoms, 75–83
- framing
- instrumental and normative arguments and, 36–41
 - narrative and stability of, 20–24
 - of Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 102–109, 114–119
 - in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–133
 - social norms in security narratives and, 52–55
 - in Terror narrative, 150–157
- France
- dominant narratives in, 265–269
 - non-interventionist narrative and fall of, 74–75, 91–96
 - security narrative in, 5–7
- freedom-fighter imagery, in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 102–109
- Friedman, Thomas, 289, 297–300
- Fry, Joseph, 251–257
- Frye, Northrup, 12
- Fulbright, J. William, 224, 241–242, 246–251, 255–257
- Gaddis, John Lewis, 149–150, 191–195, 265–269
- Gallup, George, 128–133
- Garthoff, Raymond, 247n.122, 248–249
- Gavin, James, 246–251
- Gelb, Leslie, 191–195, 246–251
- gender norms, in national security narratives, 52–55
- geographic context, national security narrative in, 24–25
- Germany
- defeat in Second World War, 24n.101
 - postwar political change in, 179–183
 - responsibility of citizens, in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 133–142
- Germany Is Our Problem* (Morgenthau), 138–142
- Glazer, Nathan, 260–264
- globalized capitalism, September 11 attacks linked to, 158–163
- global politics
- Cold War consensus and, 27–28, 44–46, 191–195, 200–214, 219–220
 - erosion of non-interventionism and, 91–96
 - Korean War and, 225–236, national security narratives and, 70–75, 79–83, 124–133, 282–285
 - Vietnam War and, 246–251
- Goddard, Stacie, 13n.47
- Goffman, Erving, 11
- Goldwater, Barry, 260–264
- Goodman, Nelson, 35–36
- Gorbachev, Mikhail, 55–58, 102–109, 265–269
- Gore, Albert Jr., 155–156, 163–164, 169–170
- Gore, Albert Sr., 248–249, 251–257
- Gramsci, Antonio, 9, 20–24
- grand strategy and national security narratives, 12–13
- Gravel, Mike, 251–257
- “Great Debate” (1950–1951), 225–233
- Great Depression, change in economic theory and, 179–183
- Greece, US assistance to, 39–41
- group preferences, erosion of non-interventionist narrative and, 91–96
- Gruening, Ernest, 251–257
- Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, 248–249, 251–257
- Gulf War I
- failure of, 179–183
 - political consequences of, 169–170
- Gutman, Roy, 119–121
- Habermas, Jürgen, 20n.79
- Halberstam, David, 148–149
- Hall, Stuart, 4, 20–24
- Halleck, Charles, 242–244
- Harriman, Averill, 228–233
- Hart, Roderick, 58–65
- Harvey, Frank, 145n.76

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More informationIndex

377

- Hay, Colin, 179–183 hegemonic projects, narrative dominance and, 1–7
 Heinrichs, Waldo, 79–83 historical consistency, in security narratives, 58–65
 Hitler, Adolf
 American attitudes towards, 70–75 framing of, in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 128–133 non-interventionist dismissal of,
 79–83
 Roosevelt's references to, 75–83
 Saddam Hussein compared to, 166–167
 Ho Chi Minh, 250–251
 Hoenicke-Moore, Michaela, 136–138
 Hoffmann, Stanley, 246–251
 Holder, Eric, 156–157
 Hollywood, dominance of Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative in, 133–142
 Holocaust convergence of narratives concerning, 20–24
 as crime against humanity, 158–163
 German responsibility for, 138–142
 Holsti, Ole, 191–195
 Honduras, Sandinista raid in, 116–119
 Hoover, Herbert, 225–233
 Hull, Cordell, 74–75, 83–88, 138–142 human coding content analysis of security narratives and, 58–65
 measurement of Cold War consensus and, 195–200, 315–318 human rights, rhetoric of, 42–44
 Hussein, Saddam, 1, 163–172

 Ickes, Harold, 74–75, 83–91, 128–133 identity narratives, American exceptionalism and, 262–264
Iliad (Homer), 284–285 individual preferences, erosion of non-interventionist narrative and,
 91–96
 Indochina, French policy failures in, 265–269
 inertia, in foreign policy, 175 institutional authority dynamics of, 282–285
 national security narrative and, 1–7, 24–25
 of presidents, 68–70, 122, 145–172
 for Terror narrative, 145–147
 institutionalist theory dominant narratives and, 179–183
 Korean War and, 224
 instrumental argument counterfactual analysis of Reagan's rhetoric and, 119–121
 national security narrative and,
 25–26, 276–279
 in non-interventionists' rhetoric, 83–88
 rationality and, 36–41
 Reagan's Cold War rhetoric and, 102–109
 as rhetorical mode, 36–41
 Roosevelt's use of, 79–83
 by Vietnam War opposition, 246–257, intercoder reliability, in measurement of Cold War consensus, 195–200 international events. See also exogenous shocks
 Cold War consensus and, 218 leadership manipulation of, 55–58
 legitimation of security narrative and,
 1–7, 25–26
 Pearl Harbor narrative and role of, 124–133
 shift in non-interventionism and, 68–70 international relations theory
 national security narrative and,
 16–24, 279–282 internet, narrative projects and,
 286–293
 “interpretive leadership,” national security politics and, 183–189 interventionist and internationalist policies
 Cold War consensus and, 191–195, 233–236, 246–251 criticism of non-interventionists by, 83–88
 erosion of non-interventionist
 narrative in face of, 75–83 factors in emerging dominance of, 91–96

- interventionist (cont.)
 - impatience with Roosevelt among, 88–91
 - Korean War and, 224
 - New Right and, 260–264
 - opposition to, 251–257
 - Vietnam War and, 251–257
- Iran, security narrative during Revolution in, 5–7
- Iran-Contra affair, 114–119
- Iraq Liberation Act of 1998, 166–167
- Iraq war (2003)
 - Bush's Terror narrative and, 145–147
 - dominance of Terror narrative in justification for, 145–147, 150–157, 269–275
 - erosion of presidential narrative authority and, 50–52
 - politics of national security and, 184–185
 - rhetorical coercion and, 163–172
 - “surge” in, 1, 5–7, 32–36
- Irish Republican Army, 102–109
- isolationism. See also non-interventionist narrative
 - Cold War consensus and erosion of, 233–236
 - dominance of Terror narrative over, 155–156
 - Korean War and re-emergence of, 225–233
 - Roosevelt's foreign policy and dominance of, 68–96
- Israel
 - dominant narratives in, 265–269
 - security narrative in, 5–7
 - self-criticism in, 161
 - “Israel lobby,” 18
- Italy, framing of, in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 128–133
- Japan
 - marginalization of, in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–133, 142–145
 - postwar political change in, 179–183
- Johnson, Lyndon Baines, 101–105, 297–300
- isolation of Vietnam critics by, 251–257
 - opposition to, 245–246
 - Vietnam War and, 246–251, 265–269
- Judt, Tony, 168–172
- Kadushin, Charles, 251–257
- Kemalist narrative (Turkey), 42–44
- Kennan, George, 18, 39–41, 213–215, 246–251, 265–269, 297–300
- Kennedy, David, 68–70
- Kennedy, Edward, 116–119, 169n.158
- Kennedy, John F., 178–179, 216–218, 236–245, 265–269
- Kermode, Frank, 11
- Kernell, Samuel, 150–157
- Kerry, John, 269–275
- Keynesian economics, Great Depression and, 179–183
- Khrushchev, Nikita, 213–215, 236–245
- Kirkpatrick, Clayton, 216–218
- Kirkpatrick, Jean, 260–264
- Kissinger, Henry, 116–119, 247n.122
- Korean War
 - casualty comparisons with Vietnam, 221n.3
 - Cold War consensus and, 27–28, 176–179, 205–210, 218, 220–236
 - demise of nationalist alternative and, 220–225
 - national security narrative and, 184–185, 282–285
 - politics of failure and, 225–233
- Kosovo intervention (1999), 44–46
- Kucinich, Dennis, 269–275
- Laclau, Ernesto, 8n.16, 20–24, 44–46
- language
 - instrumental and normative arguments and, 36–41
 - nested nature of, 35–36
 - politics of national security narratives and, 7–16
 - security narrative and role of, 1–7
- law-enforcement model of terror, 156–157
- leadership
 - dominant narratives and, 293–296

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More informationIndex

379

- international relations theory and, 16–24
- internet and, 216–218, 286–293
- limits of, 55–58
- new media impact on, 27–28
- Obama's discussion of, 276–279
- legitimation
 - dominant narrative and, 32–36
 - of Iraq war, 163–172
 - of media coverage for dominant narratives, 195–200
 - of non-intervention in Second World War, 68–70, 83–88
 - security narrative and importance of, 1–7, 13n.47, 14–16
- Legro, Jeffrey, 22–24, 179–183, 187–189
- Legvold, Robert, 246–251
- Lemann, Nicholas, 168–172
- Lend-Lease program, 55–58, 91–96
 - opposition to, 83–88
- Levin, Carl, 169n.158
- “liability of newness,” narrative
 - instability and, 35–36
- liberalism
 - in alternative narratives of September 11 attacks, 158–163
 - Cold War consensus and, 246–251
 - erosion of non-interventionist narrative and, 91–96
 - national security narratives and, 16–24, 279–282
 - opposition to Vietnam War and, 251–257
 - rhetorical coercion concerning Iraq war and silencing of, 168–172
- Lieberman, Joseph, 269–275
- Lincoln, Bruce, 31–32, 284–285
- Lindbergh, Charles, 75–88,
- Lippmann, Walter, 73–74, 88–91, 213–215
- literary theory, narrative criteria in, 11
- locally weighted scatterplot smoothing (LOWESS), 202n.44
- Lodge, Henry Cabot Jr., 228–233
- Logevall, Frederik, 242–244
- logrolling, Korean War and, 224
- Lubell, Samuel, 233–236
- Luce, Clare Booth, 88
- Ludwig, Emil, 128–133
- Lugar, Richard, 111–114
- Lustick, Ian, 23n.98, 154, 179–183
- lying, leadership and, 55–58
- Lynch, Cecelia, 23n.98
- MacArthur, Douglas, 228–233
- MacLeish, Archibald, 125, 224
- Macmillan, Harold, 237–238
- manipulation, leaders' use of, 55–58
- Mansfield, Mike, 241–242, 246–251
- Marshall, George, 40n.38, 233–236
- May, Ernest, 265–269, 293–296
- McCarthy, Joseph, 224
- McCloy, John, 138–142
- McCormick, Robert, 216–218, 259
- McCullough, David, 262–264
- McGovern, George, 251–257
- meaning
 - competing narratives and, 46–47
 - limits of consensus and, 265–269
 - in national security narratives, 279–285
 - production of, 31–32
 - storytelling and, 36–41, 44–46
- Mearsheimer, John, 18
- media coverage
 - Cold War consensus in, 195–214,
 - narrative and leadership in internet age and, 27–28, 286–293
 - Pearl Harbor narrative in, 133–142
 - rhetorical coercion concerning Iraq War and, 168–172
 - storytelling rhetoric and, 44–46
 - Terror narrative in, 150–157
- Middle East, US policy in, “Israel lobby,” 18
- military assistance programs
 - Cold War consensus and, 47–48
 - Congressional resistance to contra assistance and, 114–119
 - Reagan's Cold War rhetoric and, 111–114
 - unpopularity of, for non-interventionists, 83–88
- military policy. See also battlefield performance
 - alternative narratives and, 142–145
 - Cold War consensus and, 1–7, 18, 27–28, 175, 189–190, 191–195, 219–220

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

380

Index

- military policy. (cont.)
 - narrative politics of battlefield and, 283–284
 - national security narratives and, 5–7, 27–28, 187–189, 282–285
 - non-interventionists and, 83–88
 - Pearl Harbor narrative and, 133–142
 - Roosevelt's postwar planning and, 138–142
 - Vietnam War and, 248–249, 255–257
- Mondale, Walter, 119–121
- Morgenthau, Henry, 88–91, 122–124, 128–133, 138–142
- Morgenthau, Hans, 18, 246–251
- Morris, Lewis, 284–285
- Morse, Wayne, 251–257
- Munich accords (1938)
 - Iraq War and invocation of, 166–167
 - Korean War and invocation of, 228–233
 - non-interventionist narrative and, 75–83
- Muslims, perception of War on Terror as attack on Islam, 158–163, 269–275
- Muste, A. J., 228–233
- narrative. See also dominant narratives
 - critical juncture theory and, 32–36
 - definition, 1–7
 - evolution of Terror narrative and, 150–157
 - future challenges to, 293–296
 - international relations theory's disregard of, 16–24
 - internet and, 286–293
 - political discourse and, 7–16
 - in post-Cold War era, 148–149
 - storytelling and, 38–39, 44–46
 - typology of, 12
- narrative situation, 32–36. See context
 - for narratives
 - conjunctural theory and, 41–65
 - for dominant narratives, 32–36
 - dominant narratives and, 31–32, 279–285
 - dynamics of contestation and, 41–48
 - lost opportunities and, 66–68
 - persistence of non-interventionism as example of, 68–96
 - presidential narrative authority and, 50–52
 - presidents' misreading of, 66–68
 - Reagan's contra aid program and, 116–119
 - September 11 attacks and, 145–172
 - speaking in, 32–36
 - stable situations and, 101–105
 - for Terror narrative, 145–147
- National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, 116–119
- national identity discourse, politics of national security and, 183–189
- Nationalist China, 228–233. See also Formosa (Taiwan)
- nationalist narrative
 - Cold War consensus and, 233–236
 - Korean War and, 225–233
 - New Right and, 260–264
- National Review*, 233–236, 260–264
- National Security Council Paper
 - NSC-68 (1950), 220–225, 265–269, 297–300
- national security narratives
 - arguments, evidence and implications in, 279–285
 - battlefield performance and, 183–189
 - Cold War consensus and, 27–28, 191–195, 282–285
 - contending explanations for Cold War consensus and, 212–218
 - content of, 52–55
 - evolution and collapse of, 1–7, 24–25
 - future of, 27–28
 - global politics and, 282–285
 - international relations theory and, 16–24
 - life cycle of, 25–26
 - non-interventionists and, 79–83
 - persistence of, 27–28
 - politics of national security and, 7–16, 297–300
 - rhetorical coercion for Iraq War using, 168–172
 - structure and agency in, 276–279
 - theories of change and, 179–183
- National Security Strategy* 2002, 35–36
- Nation* magazine, 228
- Nazi Germany

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

Index

381

- American attitudes towards, 70–75
 - framing of, in Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–142,
 - German responsibility for, 128–142,
 - invasion of Czechoslovakia, 75–83
 - Iraq compared to, 166–167
 - national security narrative
 - concerning, 5–7, 25–26
 - non-interventionism and actions of, 75–83, 91–96
 - Roosevelt's framing of, 75–83
 - US declaration of war against, 96n.97
- neoclassical realism, 16–24, 213n.53
- neoconservatism
 - Terror narrative and, 145n.76, 163–172
 - Vietnam War and, 257–264
- neoliberalism, September 11 attacks
 - linked to, 158–163
- Neutrality Act, 88
- New Left, 13–14, 257–264
- new media environment, narrative and leadership in, 286–293
- The New Republic*, 225–226
- Newsweek* magazine, 150–157
- New York Times*, 100–101
 - Cold War consensus and, 195–214, 236–245
- Cuban Missile Crisis coverage in, 242–244
- foreign policy coverage in, 257–264
- internationalism in, 224
- Korean War coverage in, 228
- leadership changes at, 216–218
- Obama coverage in, 289–293
- Nicaragua
 - Carter's policy toward, 114–115
 - Cold War rhetoric concerning, 99–109
 - as national security threat, 66–68
 - political unrest in, 97–99
 - Reagan Doctrine and, 119–121
 - Reagan's rhetorical strategy and, 102–109, 119–121, 279–282
- Nietzsche, Friedrich, 8–9
- Nixon, Richard, 101–105, 245–246, 247n.122
- Nixon Doctrine, 257–264
- Noelle-Neumann, Elisabeth, 14–16
- non-interventionist narrative. See also isolationism
 - erosion of, 75–83, 187–188
 - interwar period and persistence of, 68–96
 - Pearl Harbor defeat and persistence of, 83–88, 124–133, 279–282
 - public support for, 83–88
 - Roosevelt's failure to shift, 55–58
 - sectional economic interests and, 91–96
- normative argument
 - mode of, 36–41
 - national security narrative and, 276–279
 - in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 102–109
 - Roosevelt's use of, 79–83
- North African invasion, Roosevelt's insistence on, 142–145
- Norway, Nazi invasion of, 75–83
- Novak, Michael, 49–50
- Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, 242–244
- nuclear weapons policy, Cold War
 - consensus and, 191–195
- Nutting, Wallace, 114–115
- Nye, Gerald, 83–88
- Oakes, John, 216–218
- Obama, Barack
 - dominance of Terror narrative and, 156–157, 269–275
 - leadership style of, 276–279, 289, 297–300
 - opposition to Iraq War of, 186, 269–275
 - rhetorical strategies of, 46–47, 49–50
- Office of Facts and Figures, 125
- Office of War Information (OWI), 83–88, 128–133
- O'Hanlon, Michael, 289–293
- O'Neill, Tip, 111–114
- opposition elites
 - embrace of dominant narrative by, 269–275
 - politics of national security and, 183–189
 - rhetorical coercion of Terror narrative and, 163–172

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

382

Index

Ortega, Daniel, 114–119

Özal, Turgut, 42–44

Pakistan

US aid to, 111–114

War on Terror and, 32–36, 269–275

Palestine Liberation Organization, 102–109Panama Canal treaties, revision of,
262–264Panay incident (1937), Roosevelt's rhetoric concerning, 74–75

Pearl Harbor attack persistence of non-interventionism following, 83–88, 91–96

public indifference to, 122–124 successful narrative concerning, 122, 279–282Terrorism narrative compared with, 172

Petraeus, David, 32–36

Phillips, Kevin, 260–264

Podhoretz, Norman, 260–264 policy debate. See also foreign policy alternative narratives and, 142–145

American exceptionalism and, 257–264 authority and, 48–52Cold War consensus and, 191–195 contestation in dominant narrative,
42–44limits of consensus and, 265–269
national security politics and,
183–189, 276–279, 297–300non-interventionist narrative and,
75–88,opposition to Vietnam War and,
251–257Pearl Harbor narrative and,
133–145,politics of national security and,
7–16, 297–300post-Cold War uncertainty and, 44–46

presidential interventions and, 66–68

Reagan's storytelling and, 47–48,
109–114sectional economic interests and,
91–96

Terror narrative and, 155–156

policy outcomes

national security narratives and,
16–24

theories of change and, 179–183

political identity

erosion of non-interventionist narrative and, 91–96Reagan's contra aid program and, 116–119

storytelling and, 38–39

politics of narrative authority in narrative dominance

and, 1–7

dominant narratives, 176–179

failure in Korean War and, 225–233

national security narrative and role of, 7–16, 176–179, 282–285non-security policy narratives and, 282–285in Terror narrative in, 155–156
US security policy and, 297–300polycentrism, Cold War consensus and, 237–238

Posen, Barry, 12–13

Post-positivism, security narratives and, 21n.88Post-structuralist theory, security narratives and, 20–24

postwar planning

public opinion concerning, 133–142 Roosevelt's German aggression
narrative and, 122–124

presidential rhetoric

Cold War consensus and role of, 215narrative authority and, 48–52,
97–121, 176–179, 289–293national security narrative and role of, 25–26, 68–96, 279–282political debate and interventions by, 66–68speech and storytelling, descriptive data, 311–314

psychology

in alternative narratives of September 11 attacks, 158–163erosion of non-interventionist narrative and, 91–96

narrative and, 10–11

need for closure and, 44–46

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

Index

383

- social norms in security narratives and, 52–55
- public narrative
 - Cold War consensus as, 175–179, 219–220
 - dynamics of, 176–179
 - security narrative and, 1–7, 32–33, 58–65
 - Vietnam War in, 262, 265–269
- public opinion
 - American exceptionalism in, 257–264
 - Cold War consensus and, 191–195
 - military success and shifts in, 187–189
 - national security narrative and, 58–65
 - non-interventionist narrative and, 70–75, 79–88,
 - Pearl Harbor narrative and, 128–133
 - political and ethnic identity and, 91–96
 - Reagan's demonization of Sandinistas and, 97–99, 102–109
 - of Soviet Union, 246–251
 - Terror narrative and, 150–157, 161–163, 168–172
 - on US entry into Second World War, 122–124
- purpose. See also dramatic pentad
 - in alternative narratives of September 11 attacks, 158–163
 - erosion of non-interventionist narrative in face of, 75–83
 - in national security narratives, 12–13
 - in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–133
 - in Terror narrative, 150–157
- “Quarantine” address (Roosevelt), 68–75, 91–96
- Reagan, Ronald
 - Democratic alternatives to policies of, 47–48, 66–68, 97–99, 102–119,
 - limits to national security narrative of, 66–68, 97–121, 279–282
 - narrative strategies of, 25–26
 - renewed Cold War rhetoric of, 99–109
 - rhetorical skills of, 46–47
 - storytelling by, 47–48, 97–99, 101–105, 109–114
 - Vietnam and rise of, 257–264
- realism
 - in alternative narratives of September 11 attacks, 158–163
 - Cold War consensus and, 212–218
 - national security narrative and, 16–24, 265–269, 279–282
 - Vietnam War and, 246–251
- Reeves, Richard, 49–50
- Remnick, David, 289–293
- Republican Party
 - Cold War consensus and, 233–236
 - Iraq War surge and, 1, 269–275
 - Korean War and, 225–233
 - New Right and transformation of, 257–264
 - opposition to Bohlen nomination and, 233–236
 - Reagan's Sandinista narrative and, 111–114
 - Roosevelt's postwar planning and, 138–142
 - Terror narrative and, 145–147, 163–172
- responsible dissent, in Vietnam War opposition, 251–257
- rhetorical mode. See also argument; storytelling
 - analysis of, 58–65
 - Aristotle on production of meaning and, 31–32
 - coercion in policy debates, 42–44
 - dominant narrative and, 20–24, 25–26, 32–41
 - dominant narratives and, 32–41
 - Korean War narratives and, 224
 - national security narrative and, 1–7
 - order in, 44–46
 - of political elites, 183–189
 - presidential storytelling and, 311–314
 - in Terror narrative, 145–147, 150–157, 163–172
 - of Vietnam war critics, 251–257
 - Richmond News Leader*, 225–226
 - Ricks, Tom, 168–172
 - Rodgers, Daniel, 284–285, 289

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

384

Index

- Roosevelt, Franklin D.
 caution in foreign policy of, 83–88 content analysis of foreign affairs addresses, 308–310 counterfactual analysis of rhetoric of, 88–91, 119–121 internationalist policies of, 68–70 limits of leadership by, 55–58 national security narrative of, 70–75 non-interventionist narrative and caution of, 75–83
 Pearl Harbor narrative of, 122–145, persistence of non-interventionism and rhetoric of, 68–96 postwar planning by, 122–124, 138–142 “Quarantine” speech by, 68–70, 91–96 rhetorical strategies of, 25–26, 46–47, 66–68, 83–88, 124–133, 279–282
 storytelling by, 70–83, 88–91
 Rose, Charlie, 276–279
 Rosenau, James, 191–195
 Rosenman, Samuel, 68–70, 73–75,
 Ross, Charles, 225–226
 Rostow, Walt, 236–245
 Rothbard, Murray, 233–236
 Rusk, Dean, 246–251
 Rwandan genocide, as crime against humanity, 158–163
- Sandinistas
 contradictions to Reagan narrative of, 109–114
 counterfactual analysis of Reagan’s rhetoric on, 119–121
 Reagan’s demonization of, 97–99, 102–109
 Reagan’s storytelling concerning, 101–105
Saturday Review magazine, 237–238 scene. See also dramatic pentad absence in Roosevelt’s narrative of, 79–88,
 in alternative narratives of September 11, 161–163
 in national security narratives, 12–13
 in Roosevelt’s Pearl Harbor narrative, 124–133
 in Terror narrative, 150–157
 Schattschneider, E. E., 8n.16
 Schweller, Randall L., 17n.68
 Scott, James, 14–16
 Second Quebec Conference (1944), 138–142
 Selective Service, extension of, 88 self-criticism in alternative narratives of Nazi Germany, 133–142
 in alternative narratives of September 11 attacks, 158–163
 American exceptionalism and, 257–264
 September 11, 2001 attacks alternative narratives concerning, 158–163 dominant narrative in aftermath of, 20–24, 265–269, 279–282 as historical rupture, 44–46, 148–149 national security politics after, 42–44 realist theory concerning, 18 success of narrative concerning, 122, 145–172 War on Terror narrative and, 1–7 settled narrative situation policy debates and, 42–44
 Reagan’s Cold War rhetoric and, 99–109, 119–121
 rhetorical strategy and, 32–36
 Roosevelt’s rhetorical challenge in face of, 70–75 storytelling rhetoric in, 47–48, 109–114
 Sewell, William, 179–183
 Sherry, Michael, 189–190
 Sherwood, Robert, 75–83
 Shultz, George P., 102–109, 111–114 silence
 competing narratives and, 46–47 dominance of Roosevelt’s Pearl Harbor narrative and, 133–142 presidential narrative as alternative to, 66–68 rhetorical coercion and, 42–44, 168–172
 Sinclair, Upton, 68–70
 Sino-Soviet split, 237–238, 250–251
 Skowronek, Stephen, 4–5
 Snyder, Jack, 224

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More informationIndex

385

- social life, dominant narratives and, 32–36
- social norms, in national security narratives, 32–36, 52–55
- social sustainability, 13–14
- Somoza Debayle, Anastasio, 106
- Sorensen, Theodore, 241–242
- Soviet Union
 - Cold War consensus and, 191–195
 - collapse of, 55–58, 148–149
 - Cuban Missile crisis and, 236–245
 - Hitler's invasion of, 75–83
 - neoconservatives attitude toward, 97–99
 - policy failures in, 265–269
 - in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 101–105
 - Roosevelt's postwar planning and, 138–142
 - Sino-Soviet split and, 237–238, 250–251
 - Truman Doctrine and, 39–41
 - Vietnam War and attitudes toward, 246–251, 255–257
- speech act theory
 - dominant narratives and, 32–41
 - security narratives and, 22–24
- stable narratives
 - evolution of Terror narrative as, 150–157
 - Reagan's Cold War rhetoric and, 101–105
 - storytelling and, 44–46, 97–99
- Stalin, Joseph, 39–41, 136–138, 213–215
- Stassen, Harold, 228–233
- Stimson, Henry, 88–91, 136–142, "Stop Hitler Now!" advertisement, 75–83
- storytelling, rhetoric of. See also rhetorical mode
 - Bush's Terror narrative and, 122, 145–147, 150–157
 - content analysis, 52–55
 - contestation dynamics and, 41–48
 - dominant narrative and, 36–41
 - in national security narratives, 5–7, 279–282
 - Pearl Harbor narrative and, 91–96, 122–124, 133–142
 - political discourse and, 7–16
 - presidential use of, 25–26, 66–68
 - Reagan's use of, 97–109,
 - Roosevelt's use of, 70–83, 88–91
 - settled narratives and, 47–48, 109–114
 - stable narratives and, 44–46
- strategic alliances
 - Cold War consensus on role of, 200–214
 - elite consensus on necessity of, 257–264
- Stritzel, Holger, 22–24
- structural context
 - in alternative narratives of September 11, 161–163
 - dynamics of contestation and, 41–48, 97–99
 - historical evolution of security narrative and, 1–7
 - leadership rhetoric and, 55–58
 - national security narratives, 276–279
 - in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 119–121
 - in Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor narrative, 142–145
- structural realism
 - contending explanations for Cold War consensus and, 212–218
 - national security narratives and, 16–24
- Sulzberger, Arthur Ochs, 216–218
- Sun Tzu, 4
- superpower competition
 - Cold War ideology and, 191–195, 200–214
 - elite consensus on, 257–264
 - Korean War narratives and, 224
 - Soviet policies and role of, 265–269
 - Vietnam War and attitudes toward, 246–251
- symbolic reassurance, in evolution of Terror narrative, 150–157
- Taft, Robert
 - alternative nationalist narrative and, 225–233
 - Cold War consensus and, 233–236
 - Vietnam War and, 262
- Tehran conference (1943), 136–138

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-10395-5 - Narrative and the Making of US National Security

Ronald R. Krebs

Index

More information

386

Index

- terrorism, in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 102–109
- Terror narrative
 - alternatives to, 158–163
 - construction of, 148–157
 - Iraq War and, 185–186
 - perceptions in aftermath of, 176
 - production of meaning in, 145–147
 - as rhetorical coercion, 163–172
- Tet Offensive, 184–185
- Time* magazine, 195–200
- The Time for Decision* (1944), 133–142
- totalitarian regimes, leadership rhetoric in, 55–58
- Trachtenberg, Marc, 265–269
- Traub, James, 155–156
- trauma narratives, convergence concerning, 20–24
- Trubowitz, Peter, 91–96
- Truman, Harry, 39–41, 219–220
 - Korean War and, 225–233
- Truman Doctrine, 39–41, 228–233, 255–257
- trust, presidential narrative authority and, 50–52
- Turkey
 - Kurdish identity issue in, 42–44
 - US assistance to, 39–41
- United Kingdom
 - air attacks on, erosion of non-interventionist narrative and, 75–83
 - Lend-Lease program and, 75–88, public opinion of Germany in, 136–138
- United States hegemony
 - declaration of war against Germany and, 96n.97
 - dominance of non-interventionist narrative in, 68–75,
 - global leadership narrative for, 1–7, 39–41, 200–214, 257–264
 - Korean War narratives and dominance of, 224
- unmediated events, erosion of non-interventionism and, 91–96
- unsettled narrative situation
 - authority and, 48–52
 - competing narratives and, 46–47
 - emergence of, 44–46
 - erosion of non-interventionism and emergence of, 75–83
 - rhetorical strategy and, 32–36
 - Roosevelt's Pearl Harbor storytelling rhetoric and, 133–142
 - September 11 attacks and, 148–149
- vagueness in security narratives
 - evolution of Terror narrative and, 150–157
 - political risks of, 72n.20
- Vance, Cyrus, 100–101
- Vandenberg, Arthur, 40n.38, 224
- Vansittart, Robert, 136–138
- Versailles Treaty, 70–75, 133–142, 161
- Vietnam War
 - casualty comparisons with Korean War, 221n.3
 - Cold War consensus and, 1–7, 18, 27–28, 175, 191, 200–214
 - New Right movement as legacy of, 257–264
 - opposition to, 97–99
 - politics of national security and, 184–185, 265–269
 - re-emergence of dominant narrative and, 211–214, 219–220, 257–264
 - responsible dissent and, 245–264
 - shadow of, in Reagan's Cold War rhetoric, 100–101, 102–109, 111–114, 116–119
- Wallace, Henry, 224
- Walt, Stephen, 18, 289–293
- War on Terror
 - Cold War consensus and, 27–28
 - dominance of Terror narrative in discourse on, 1–7, 25–26, 155–156
 - erosion of presidential narrative authority and, 50–52
 - Iraqi regime linked to, 163–172
 - Iraq "surge" and, 32–36
 - Iraq War as distraction from, 168–172, 185–186, 269–275
 - Islamic view of, 158–163
 - legitimation of, 42–44
 - persistence of, 269–275
 - September 11 policy narrative and, 122, 145–172

- war outcomes. See also battlefield performance
 - Cold War consensus and role of, 216
 - narrative politics of national security and, 183–189
 - security narratives and, 182–183
- warrior ideal, in national security narratives, 52–55
- Washington, George, 13–14
- weapons of mass destruction (WMD), 163–172
- Welch, David, 179–183
- Welch, William, 246–251
- Welles, Sumner, 133–142
- Wheeler, Burton, 70–75, 83–88
- Wherry, Kenneth, 225–233
- White, Henry Dexter, 138–142
- White, William Allen, 88–91
- Williams, Michael, 20–24
- Willkie, Wendell, 88–91, 95n.95
- Wilson, Charlie, 111–114
- Wilson, Woodrow, 13–14, 48–49
- Wirthlin, Richard, 47–48, 109–114
- Wolfers, Arnold, 284
- Wood, Robert, 83–88
- World Court, 88–91
- Yalta Conference, 191–195, 228–233
- Yergin, Daniel, 191–195
- Yom Kippur War, 265–269
- Zakaria, Fareed, 289–293
- Zehfuss, Maja, 20–24