From Hometown to Battlefield in the Civil War Era

Mahoney examines how members of the middle class from small cities across the great West were transformed by boom and bust, years of recession, and civil war. He argues that in their encounters with national economic forces, the national crisis in politics, and the Civil War, middle class people were cut adrift from the social identity that they had established in the “face-to-face” communities of the “hometowns” of the urban West. By grounding them in their hometown ethos, and understanding how the Panic of 1857 and the subsequent recession undermined their lives, the author provides important insights into how they encountered, responded to, and were changed by their experiences in the Civil War. Providing a rare view of social history through the framework of the Civil War, the author documents the dramatic change and development of modern life in nineteenth-century America in both breadth and depth.

Timothy R. Mahoney is Professor of History at the University of Nebraska. He is the author of River Towns in the Great West: The Structure of Provincial Urbanization in the American Midwest (Cambridge University Press, 1990) and Provincial Lives: Middle-Class Experience in the Antebellum Middle West (Cambridge University Press, 1999). Collectively this trilogy of books, crisscrossing similar ground and following the same people from the 1800s through 1880s, reflects his efforts to tell a comprehensive story of the transformations of the Midwest and nineteenth-century American society in general.

Acknowledgments

It is a pleasure to thank the individuals and institutions that helped me complete this book. Because the idea for this book emerged in my earlier work, I have been doing research for it for more than twenty years. As all historians recognize, the unsung heroes of our profession are the librarians, archivists, and staff members who provide – at libraries and institutions around the country and world – access to the historical record of the past. I have worked at the following institutions and would like to thank all the librarians, archivists, and staff members who provided guidance, advice, and interest and made materials available for my use: the Library of Congress; the Washburn-Norlands Foundation in Livermore, Maine; the Maine Historical Society; the Massachusetts Historical Society; the New York Historical Society and the New York Public Library in New York; New York, Princeton University Libraries; the Military History Institute in Carlisle, Pennsylvania; the former Illinois State Historical Society - now The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library; the Newberry Library; the Regenstein Library at the University of Chicago – my graduate school alma mater; the Charles Deering McCormick Library of Special Collections at Northwestern University Library; the Iowa State Historical Society; the Chicago History Museum; Missouri Historical Society; the Putnam Museum in Davenport, Iowa; the Loras College Dubuque History Room; the Galena Public Library; the Iowa State Library and Archives, Des Moines, Iowa; the Nebraska Historical Society; the Denver Public Library; the New Mexico State Library; the Huntington Library; the Bancroft Library at University of California at Berkeley; and the University of Oregon Archives. I especially want to thank the following people for their help toward the end of this project in checking facts and acquiring images and permissions – Jerry Enzler and Christin Waterbury at the National Mississippi River Museum and Aquarium and the Bowell Library in Dubuque, Iowa; Debbie S. Hamm, Cheryl Schnirring, and Roberta Fairburn at the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library; Mary Bennett and Marvin Bergman at the Iowa State Historical Society; Steve Repp at the Galena Public Library; Michael D. Gibson at the Loras College Center for Dubuque History in Dubuque, Iowa; Joseph Aaron Campbell and Angela Hoover at the Chicago History Museum; and Shari S. Stelling at the Iowa State Historical Library and Archives in Des Moines. Finally, I would also like to thank Rob Shepard of the University of Iowa for making the maps.

Because, after some years of delay, I began writing the middle chapters of this book during a cold and snowy winter break while teaching as the Senior Fulbright Lecturer in American Studies at the School of English at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznan, Poland, I would like to thank the Fulbright Program for their support. Closer to home, the Newberry Library, the Huntington Library, and the Department of History and the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Nebraska – Lincoln, have supported my research a number of times through fellowships and travel and research grants. I especially wish to thank Department of History chairs Kenneth J. Winkle and William G. Thomas III for their support in helping me find time to wrap up research and write. Most of the final chapters of this book were written during my Faculty Development Leave and a course reduction in 2012–2013 academic year. I also want to thank the following for reading sections of the manuscript as it evolved, though, in general, because I was writing it after some years administrating and doing other academic service, I side stepped the usual academic practice of presenting papers and submitting chapters as articles in my effort to bring the project to completion. Among those are Guy Reynolds, Kenneth M. Price, Wendy J. Katz, Kenneth J. Winkle, Jeannette E. Jones, James Garza, Andrew Graybill, Peter Capuano, Douglas Seefeldt, Thomas E. Smith, Marvin Bergman, Benjamin G. Rader, and William G. Thomas III. I also wish to thank Lewis Bateman, the anonymous reviewers, Elda Granata, and Rachel Cox at Cambridge University Press for guiding this project to publication. Finally, I wish to thank friends and especially my family – my wife Malgorzata (Gosia) and our children, Magdalena and Maciej, for their patience and helping me manage the demands of finishing such a large project like this. Thank you.
