

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	page vii
Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
PART I
Introduction	3
1 The Comparative Study of Science	10
2 Arabic Science and the Islamic World	53
3 Philosophy, Science, and Civilizational Configurations	76
4 The European Legal Revolution	111
5 Madrasas and the Transmitted Sciences	140
6 Universities and the Institutionalization of Science	172
PART II
7 Science and Civilization in China	201
8 Education, Examinations, and Neo-Confucianism	236
Appendix 1: Anatomy, and Post-mortems in China	255
9 Poverties and Triumphs of Chinese Science	258
Appendix 2: Books and Essays on Western Science and Astronomy Translated into Chinese by the Jesuits	288

vi

Table of Contents

PART III

291

10 The Rise of Modern Science

293

Epilogue – Science, History, and Development

325

Select Bibliography

334

Index

376