THE INDIAN LEGAL PROFESSION IN THE AGE OF GLOBALIZATION

This book provides the first comprehensive analysis of the impact of globalization on the Indian legal profession. Employing a range of original data from twenty empirical studies, the book details the emergence of a new "corporate legal sector" in India including large and sophisticated law firms and in-house legal departments, as well as "legal process outsourcing" companies. As the book’s authors document, this new corporate legal sector is reshaping other parts of the Indian legal profession, including legal education, the development of pro bono and corporate social responsibility, the regulation of legal services, and gender, communal, and professional hierarchies with the bar. Taken as a whole, the book will be of interest to academicians, lawyers, and policymakers interested in the critical role that a rapidly globalizing legal profession is playing in the legal, political, and economic development of important emerging economies like India, and how these countries are integrating into the institutions of global governance and the overall global market for legal services.

David B. Wilkins is the Lester Kissel Professor of Law, Vice Dean for Global Initiatives on the Legal Profession, and Faculty Director of the Center on the Legal Profession at Harvard Law School. He is also a Senior Research Fellow of the American Bar Foundation and a Fellow of the Harvard University Edmond J. Safra Foundation Center for Ethics.

Vikramaditya S. Khanna is the William W. Cook Professor of Law, faculty director of the Directors’ College for Global Business and Law, and co-director of the Joint Centre for Global Corporate and Financial Law & Policy.

David M. Trubek is Voss-Bascom Professor of Law and Dean of International Studies Emeritus at the University of Wisconsin – Madison and a Senior Research Fellow at the Center on the Legal Profession, Harvard Law School.

Acknowledgments

The editors would like to thank all the contributors to this volume, without whom none of this work would have been possible. They would also like to thank the support provided by the Harvard Law School Center on the Legal Profession, which serves as the institutional home of the Globalization, Lawyers, and Emerging Economies (GLEE) project, and has provided essential support of every kind. This book would not have been possible without the generous support – in time, advice, and funding – of the Center’s world-class Advisory Board. Indeed, the initial impetus for the GLEE project came at the 2010 spring annual meeting of the Advisory Board in New York City where Cyril Shroff suggested that we begin a project on the impact globalization was having on the legal profession in the world’s most important emerging economies. We would also like to thank the other sources of support the GLEE India project has received, including from the Narotam Sekhsaria Foundation, the Centre for Policy Research, the Indian School of Business – Hyderabad, and Khaitan & Co. Finally, the editors thank the hundreds of Indian lawyers who generously devoted their time, insights, and talents through countless interviews and surveys. Without their contributions this book would never have been possible. We are eternally grateful.
