Contents

Acknowledgments
page vi

Introduction
1

- Green modernism: Canonical themes and environmental questions
- Nature’s dialogue in three modernist voices
- Modern ecology and the view from above
- E.M. Forster, Virginia Woolf, and W.H. Auden

1
Passage from pastoral: E.M. Forster
25
- The lure of the pastoral in “The Story of a Panic” and “The Other Kingdom”
- Anti-pastoral and the fantasy of the green retreat in “The Machine Stops,” Howards End, “Arthur Snatchfold,” and Maurice
- Beyond the pastoral: A Passage to India

2
The phenomenological whole: Virginia Woolf
82
- Woolf as a green reader
- Humans and nonhumans in “Kew Gardens,” Flush, and “Thunder at Wembley”
- The meaning of a more-than-human life in To the Lighthouse

3
Brute being and animal language: W.H. Auden
146
- Subversive natural science and the human subject
- Talking animal
- Words in the flesh of the world

Epilogue
193
Notes
199
Bibliography
228
Index
239