

Contents

List of Figures	page vi
List of Tables	vii
List of Boxes	viii
Introduction	1
1 Investing in the Ability to Withstand Shocks	8
2 Measuring Long-term Sustainable Performance	26
3 Authenticity	37
4 Customer Centricity	56
5 Product Focus	70
6 Geographical Focus	91
7 Long-term Orientation and Strategic Decision Making	103
8 Process Tools for Supporting Strategic Decision Making	115
9 Ownership Structure, Span of Control and Organizational Design	134
10 Conclusion	147
Bibliography	156
Index	163

Figures

1.1	Resilience model	page 24
2.1	VOLARE in the automotive industry	33
2.2	Effect of an external shock on share prices	34
4.1	HeidelbergCement's "innovation/competitive advantage matrix"	66
4.2	HeidelbergCement's "stairway to a stable price premium"	68
5.1	Price bands for Porsche models	72
5.2	Price bands for Audi models	73
5.3	Price bands for Peugeot models	74
5.4	Price bands for Ford models	76
5.5	Price bands for Fiat models	77
6.1	Performance of Italian internationalized SMES relative to non-internationalized Italian firms	93
6.2	Reference markets and performance of internationalized Italian SMEs	93
6.3	Banking sector VOLARE: best and worst performers	94
6.4	VOLARE and the liability of size in banking	95
7.1	The Eisenhower matrix	106
7.2	'Celebrity kiss' experiment results	108
7.3	Bonus bank and expected performance	112
8.1	The strategic process	124
8.2	Formal annual planning	130
10.1	The drivers of resilience	148

Tables

2.1	The variety of performance indicators: the banking example	page 27
2.2	Benefits and shortcomings of performance measure	29
3.1	Assess your firm's authenticity	55
4.1	Assess your firm's customer centricity	69
5.1	Assess your firm's product focus	89
6.1	Assess your firm's geographical focus	102
7.1	Assess your firm's long-term orientation	113
8.1	Biases and managerial implications	121
8.2	Assess your Firm's decision-making capability	133
9.1	Assess your Firm's control model	146
10.1	Overall resilience score	153

Boxes

- 8.1 Group activities designed to identify the corporate vision page 132