General Index

Ethnoms may be indexed with their toponyms. Romans are generally listed under their nomen, except for a few (e.g. Cicero, the emperor Tiberius) much better known by another name. Many toponyms in the Geography appear in a number of variants. Often these are significant and represent the history of the name or its form in different languages, but in other cases they may simply indicate differences between Strabo's sources or even errors. Nevertheless, in the interests of thoroughness and clarity, many variants appear in this index. Moreover, it is not always possible to determine whether repeated mentions of the same toponym in the same region are identical or different places. Ancient authors only appear in this index when they are discussed as part of the commentary; for a full list of ancient authors cited, see Index of Passages Cited.
