PREFACE

ON August 1st, 1907, I delivered a lecture, on the Care of Natural Monuments, at the Leicester meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. The lecture was given at a joint meeting of the Geographical, Geological, Botanical, and Zoological sections.

The present book may be regarded as the above lecture in an extended form; and, in publishing it, I am acceding to the expressed wishes of my English friends.

Whilst the book makes no pretence to deal exhaustively with the subject, I hope that it is sufficiently comprehensive to be acceptable and serviceable to naturalists, and, indeed, to lovers of nature in general.

Preface

There remains the pleasant duty of thanking the various British authorities, societies, and naturalists who have generously supplied me with information. In particular, I beg to tender my heartfelt thanks to Professor F. W. Oliver, Mr Clement Reid, Professor A. C. Seward, Dr W. G. Smith, Mr A. G. Tansley, and, last but not least, Dr C. E. Moss, who has kindly revised my English manuscript, and seen my book through the press.
