

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the
Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

|                               | PAGE |
|-------------------------------|------|
| PREFATORY NOTE . . . . .      | v    |
| CONTENTS . . . . .            | vii  |
| CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE . . . . . | xvii |

CHAP.

I. THE QUATTROCENTO AND THE BEGINNINGS OF HUMANIST EDUCATION.

|  |    |
|--|----|
| The historical method in the study of Education .    | 1  |
| The Italian Renaissance and the classical revival    | 3  |
| The motives to humanist enthusiasm . . . . .         | 4  |
| The new education . . . . .                          | 7  |
| The influence of Quintilian in the fifteenth century | 8  |
| Vittorino and the Mantuan school . . . . .           | 10 |
| His aims . . . . .                                   | 12 |
| Relation of humanist culture to Christianity . .     | 13 |
| His concept of liberal training . . . . .            | 14 |
| The instruments of instruction . . . . .             | 14 |
| Latin literature, and composition . . . . .          | 14 |
| History and its place in higher education . .        | 16 |
| The place of Greek . . . . .                         | 17 |
| The place of music . . . . .                         | 19 |
| Girls' education at La Giocosa . . . . .             | 20 |
| Study of individuality . . . . .                     | 21 |
| Physical training . . . . .                          | 22 |
| Position and personal characteristics of Vittorino   | 23 |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More information

viii

Contents

| CHAP. |  | PAGE |
|-------|--|------|
| II.   | GUARINO DA VERONA, 1374–1460.                                      |      |
|       | Early life of Guarino . . . . .                                    | 26   |
|       | His residence at Constantinople, 1403–8 . . . . .                  | 28   |
|       | Holds chair of Greek at Florence . . . . .                         | 30   |
|       | Characteristics of Florentine Society . . . . .                    | 30   |
|       | Guarino at Venice and Verona, 1414–29 . . . . .                    | 31   |
|       | Invited by Niccolò d'Este to Ferrara . . . . .                     | 32   |
|       | Professor of Rhetoric in the new University,1442–60 . . . . .  | 33   |
|       | His work as student and as teacher . . . . .                       | 33   |
|       | The method of Guarino . . . . .                                    | 36   |
|       | Physical training . . . . .  | 37   |
|       | Three stages of instruction in letters . . . . .                   | 37   |
|       | Regulae Guarini . . . . .                                   | 38   |
|       | Function of History . . . . .                                      | 43   |
|       | The teaching of Rhetoric . . . . .                                 | 45   |
|       | Vittorino and Guarino compared . . . . .                           | 46   |
| III.  | LEO BATTISTA ALBERTI AND La Cura Della Famiglia .           |      |
|       | Alberti as typifying the Florentine Renaissance . . . . .          | 48   |
|       | His life and characteristics . . . . .                             | 49   |
|       | His interest in training of youth . . . . .                        | 50   |
|       | The importance of the Family in Florentine Civiclife . . . . . | 50   |
|       | The Trattato della Cura della Famiglia . . . . .            | 51   |
|       | The educational end . . . . .                                      | 52   |
|       | Development of individuality . . . . .                             | 53   |
|       | The meaning of proportion and rhythm . . . . .                     | 57   |
|       | The Home and the first steps in training . . . . .                 | 58   |
|       | Physical disciplines . . . . .                                     | 60   |
|       | Function of Letters, of the sciences, and of thearts . . . . . | 61   |
|       | Originality of Alberti . . . . .                                   | 62   |
|       | He typifies the earlier Renaissance . . . . .                      | 63   |
| IV.   | MATTEO PALMIERI, 1406–1475.  |      |
|       | Characteristics of Palmieri . . . . .                              | 65   |
|       | The dialogue Della Vita Civile . . . . .                    | 66   |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More informationContents

ix

| CHAP. |   | PAGE |
|-------|---|------|
|       | Its humanist tendency . . . . .                     | 66   |
|       | Its contents . . . . .                              | 68   |
|       | The educational aim according to Palmieri . . . . . | 69   |
|       | His psychological analysis . . . . .                | 70   |
|       | The curriculum . . . . .                            | 70   |
|       | Importance of environment . . . . .                 | 71   |
|       | Importance of oratorical gifts . . . . .            | 72   |
|       | The place of the vernacular . . . . .               | 74   |
|       | First steps in instruction . . . . .                | 74   |
|       | Eloquence . . . . .                                 | 75   |
|       | Moral Philosophy . . . . .                          | 76   |
|       | Punishments and discipline . . . . .                | 76   |
|       | Giovanni Rucellai and civic pride . . . . .         | 77   |
|       |   |      |
| V.    | RUDOLPH AGRICOLA, 1444–1485.                        |      |
|       | The repute of Agricola . . . . .                    | 79   |
|       | His early life . . . . .                            | 81   |
|       | The Brethren of the Common Life . . . . .           | 82   |
|       | Their relation to schools . . . . .                 | 83   |
|       | Hegius at Deventer . . . . .                        | 84   |
|       | His claims to renown . . . . .                      | 84   |
|       | Humanist activity at Deventer . . . . .             | 85   |
|       | The school at Liège . . . . .                       | 86   |
|       | Agricola in Germany, Paris, and Italy . . . . .     | 87   |
|       | Goes to Ferrara . . . . .                           | 88   |
|       | His scholarly interests . . . . .                   | 89   |
|       | His artistic feeling . . . . .                      | 91   |
|       | His personality . . . . .                           | 92   |
|       | His love of music and of drawing . . . . .          | 92   |
|       | His credit at Ferrara . . . . .                     | 93   |
|       | Returns to Germany . . . . .                        | 93   |
|       | His occupations there . . . . .                     | 94   |
|       | His correspondence . . . . .                        | 94   |
|       | Invitation to Heidelberg . . . . .                  | 95   |
|       | His residence there . . . . .                       | 96   |
|       | Final visit to Italy, and death . . . . .           | 98   |
|       | The letter De Formando Studio . . . . .      | 99   |
|       | Agricola and Fine Art . . . . .                     | 103  |

a 5

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the
Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More information

x

Contents

| CHAP. |   | PAGE |
|-------|---|------|
| VI.   | ERASMUS, 1466–1536.   |      |
|       | The problem of the northern Revival . . . . .                                       | 104  |
|       | Facts of the life of Erasmus . . . . .  | 105  |
|       | Humanism at Oxford . . . . .  | 107  |
|       | Erasmus in Italy . . . . .  | 108  |
|       | At Cambridge . . . . .  | 109  |
|       | At Louvain and Basel . . . . .  | 110  |
|       | The Reformation . . . . .   | 110  |
|       | Death of Erasmus . . . . .  | 111  |
|       | His attitude to Antiquity . . . . .   | 111  |
|       | The function of classical study in modern societyas viewed by Erasmus . . . . . | 114  |
|       | The consequent importance of a new education . . . . .                              | 115  |
|       | His psychological doctrine . . . . .  | 116  |
|       | The educational end . . . . .   | 116  |
|       | An “order of the learned” . . . . .   | 117  |
|       | The place of the home in training youth . . . . .                                   | 118  |
|       | Public versus private instruction . . . . .                                  | 119  |
|       | Grammar, authors, rhetoric . . . . .  | 120  |
|       | History in education . . . . .  | 122  |
|       | The place of Greek . . . . .  | 122  |
|       | Natural and mathematical sciences . . . . .   | 123  |
|       | The education of girls . . . . .  | 124  |
|       | Moral education . . . . .   | 125  |
| VII   | GUILLAUME BUDÉ: L’Institution du Prince .                                    |      |
|       | The Renaissance in France and the wars in Italy . . . . .                           | 127  |
|       | The University of Paris . . . . .   | 128  |
|       | Francis I . . . . .   | 129  |
|       | Life of Budé . . . . .  | 130  |
|       | The Collège de France . . . . .   | 131  |
|       | The “ideal Prince” of Budé . . . . .  | 132  |
|       | Humanism: eloquence . . . . .   | 133  |
|       | History . . . . .   | 135  |
|       | Conflict with the University . . . . .  | 137  |
|       | The new school at Bordeaux . . . . .  | 138  |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the
Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More informationContents

xi

| CHAP.   | PAGE |
|---|------|
| VIII. LE COLLÈGE DE GUYENNE. MATHURIN CORDIER.                              |      |
| Humanism at Bordeaux . . . . .  | 139  |
| André Gouvéa principal of the re-organised school                           | 139  |
| The school and the Reform . . . . .   | 140  |
| Mathurin Cordier . . . . .  | 140  |
| Élie Vinet . . . . .  | 141  |
| The Jesuits at Bordeaux . . . . .   | 142  |
| The Schola Aquitanica . . . . .                                      | 143  |
| The aim of the School . . . . .   | 144  |
| Its organisation by classes . . . . .                                       | 144  |
| Its hours and studies; promotion . . . . .                                  | 145  |
| French as an instrument of instruction . . . . .                            | 147  |
| Despautère . . . . .  | 148  |
| Cicero's Letters . . . . .   | 149  |
| The Readers in Philosophy . . . . .   | 151  |
| The Reader in Greek . . . . .   | 151  |
| Mathematics . . . . .   | 152  |
| Disputations . . . . .  | 153  |
| Catholicism and the school . . . . .  | 154  |
| Cordier at Paris . . . . .  | 155  |
| His work De Corrupti Sermonis Emendatione . . . . .                  | 155  |
| Conversational Latin . . . . .  | 157  |
| His departure for Geneva . . . . .  | 159  |
| Joins Calvin's school there . . . . .                                       | 159  |
| Its curriculum . . . . .  | 159  |
| Cordier's Colloquies . . . . .                                       | 160  |
| The light they throw upon school life . . . . .                             | 161  |
| Their evangelical temper . . . . .  | 162  |
| Popularity of the Colloquies . . . . .                               | 166  |
| IX. CARDINAL SADOLETO, 1477–1547: De Liberis recteinstituentis. |      |
| The aim of the treatise . . . . .   | 167  |
| Life of Sadoleto . . . . .  | 168  |
| He realises the importance of education in themodern state . . . . .    | 169  |
| Factors of education . . . . .  | 169  |
| Influence of home example . . . . .   | 170  |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the
Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More information

| CHAP. |  | PAGE |
|-------|--|------|
|       | Need for simplicity . . . . .  | 170  |
|       | Weakness of woman's control . . . . .                                  | 170  |
|       | Power of unconscious absorption . . . . .                              | 172  |
|       | Religious and moral teaching . . . . .                                 | 172  |
|       | Learning a pleasant process . . . . .                                  | 172  |
|       | Place of Greek . . . . .   | 173  |
|       | Of grammar . . . . .   | 173  |
|       | Of composition . . . . .   | 173  |
|       | Of history . . . . .   | 174  |
|       | Choice of authors . . . . .  | 174  |
|       | Music . . . . .  | 174  |
|       | Gymnastic . . . . .  | 175  |
|       | Mathematics . . . . .  | 176  |
|       | "Philosophia" . . . . .  | 177  |
|       | The ideal end of a liberal education . . . . .                         | 178  |
|       | Sadoletto and Erasmus . . . . .  | 179  |
|   |  |      |
| X.    | JUAN LUIS VIVES, 1492–1540.  |      |
|       | Place of Vives in educational history . . . . .                        | 180  |
|       | His life and training . . . . .  | 181  |
|       | His English experience . . . . .                                       | 182  |
|       | His writings . . . . .   | 183  |
|       | The De Tradendis Disciplinis . . . . .                          | 183  |
|       | Vives' contributions to psychology . . . . .                           | 184  |
|       | Association . . . . .  | 185  |
|       | The obligation of education . . . . .                                  | 188  |
|       | The first stage . . . . .  | 189  |
|       | The choice of school . . . . .   | 190  |
|       | Vives' views upon qualifications of masters . . . . .                  | 191  |
|       | Upon their training . . . . .  | 192  |
|       | Their relations with parents of boys . . . . .                         | 193  |
|       | Observation of the mental and moral capacity ofthe pupil . . . . . | 193  |
|       | Huarte's Examination of Men's Wits . . . . .                    | 195  |
|       | School curriculum . . . . .  | 196  |
|       | The vernacular tongues . . . . .                                       | 197  |
|       | Latin grammar and classical authors . . . . .                          | 197  |
|       | History . . . . .  | 199  |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More informationContents

xiii

| CHAP.  | PAGE |
|--|------|
| Rhetoric . . . . .   | 200  |
| Imitation . . . . .  | 201  |
| Logic . . . . .  | 202  |
| The place of natural studies . . . . .   | 202  |
| Metaphysic . . . . .   | 203  |
| General scope of the curriculum . . . . .                                      | 204  |
| Education of girls . . . . .   | 205  |
| Its aim and methods not identical with those ofItalian humanists . . . . . | 206  |
| Relation of Vives to Erasmus and to Englishscholars . . . . .              | 209  |
|  |      |
| XI. MELANCHTHON, PRECEPTOR OF GERMANY, 1497–1560.                          |      |
| Early years and education of Melanchthon . . . . .                             | 210  |
| His humanism typical of the Teutonic Renais-sance . . . . .                | 213  |
| Becomes Professor of Greek at Wittenberg . . . . .                             | 214  |
| Influence of Luther upon him . . . . .   | 214  |
| The position of Melanchthon at the head ofProtestant humanism . . . . .    | 215  |
| His first-hand knowledge of schools and univer-sities . . . . .            | 215  |
| The De Miseriis paedagogorum . . . . .                                  | 217  |
| His “Schola privata” . . . . .   | 218  |
| His scheme for Eisleben . . . . .  | 219  |
| The curriculum of the school . . . . .   | 219  |
| Importance of evangelical religious training . . . . .                         | 222  |
| The invitation to Nuremberg . . . . .  | 223  |
| Earlier efforts at educational reform there . . . . .                          | 223  |
| Melanchthon’s Address on the opening of the newschool . . . . .            | 224  |
| The aim of the school . . . . .  | 224  |
| The Latin and the High schools . . . . .                                       | 225  |
| The failure of the High school to meet local needs                             | 226  |
| Melanchthon and University reform . . . . .                                    | 227  |
| The humanist and the mediaeval scholar . . . . .                               | 228  |
| Wittenberg and its faculties . . . . .   | 230  |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the
Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More information

xiv

Contents

| CHAP.   | PAGE |
|---|------|
| The student's course . . . . .  | 232  |
| The Prince and the University in ProtestantGermany . . . . .              | 232  |
| Melanchthon and criticism . . . . .   | 234  |
| His view of eloquence . . . . .   | 237  |
| His view of scientific studies . . . . .                                      | 240  |
| The function of the German humanist schools . . . . .                         | 242  |
|   |      |
| XII. THE DOCTRINE OF COURTESY.  |      |
| The new standard of manners . . . . .   | 245  |
| The Italian concept of personality . . . . .                                  | 245  |
| Influence of the City and the Court . . . . .                                 | 246  |
| Palmieri and "temperantia" . . . . .  | 247  |
| Il Cortegiano of B. Castiglione . . . . .                              | 248  |
| His life . . . . .  | 249  |
| The courts of Mantua and Urbino . . . . .                                     | 249  |
| The scene of the dialogue . . . . .   | 250  |
| The Courtier as the ideal of humanist training . . . . .                      | 252  |
| The gifts of the Courtier . . . . .   | 255  |
| His skill, his social qualities, his conversation . . . . .                   | 255  |
| His sincerity . . . . .   | 256  |
| His prowess in arms and taste for Letters and art . . . . .                   | 257  |
| The Courtier's Academie of Romei . . . . .                             | 259  |
| The Venetian ideal . . . . .  | 260  |
| Three notes of the ideal personality of the Renaissance . . . . .             | 261  |
| The Lady of the Court . . . . .   | 263  |
| Her tastes and acquirements . . . . .   | 263  |
| The position of women and the training demandedby it in society . . . . . | 264  |
|   |      |
| XIII. THE RENAISSANCE AND EDUCATION IN ENGLAND.                               |      |
| I. Thomas Elyot and The Boke named the Governour (1531) . . . . .      | 268  |
| Life of Elyot . . . . .   | 269  |
| His published works . . . . .   | 269  |
| His reading . . . . .   | 270  |

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the Renaissance 1400–1600

William Harrison Woodward

Table of Contents

More informationContents

XV

| CHAP. |  | PAGE |
|-------|--|------|
|       | The purpose of the Governor . . . . .                               | 271  |
|       | Its ideal educational, not political . . . . .                             | 271  |
|       | Beginnings of education . . . . .  | 273  |
|       | The Erasmian basis of the Governor . . . . .                        | 273  |
|       | Home training . . . . .  | 274  |
|       | The tutor . . . . .  | 276  |
|       | Music, drawing, painting, as recreative subjects . . . . .                 | 278  |
|       | First stage in systematic instruction . . . . .                            | 279  |
|       | Greek and Latin to be learned through the poets . . . . .                  | 282  |
|       | This stage ends at thirteen . . . . .                                      | 283  |
|       | Second stage, classical prose in oratory and history . . . . .             | 283  |
|       | Third stage, philosophy . . . . .  | 288  |
|       | The doctrine of "liberal education" . . . . .                              | 289  |
|       | The decay of school-masters . . . . .                                      | 290  |
|       | Games and sports . . . . .   | 291  |
|       | "Nobility" and personality . . . . .                                       | 292  |
|       | Elyot's feeling for rhythm . . . . .                                       | 293  |
|       | Backward opinion of Englishmen upon true education . . . . .               | 294  |
|       | II. The Institution of a Gentleman and Queene Elizabeth's Achademy. |      |
|       | The place of these works in English education . . . . .                    | 296  |
|       | The purport of the first of them . . . . .                                 | 296  |
|       | Relation of birth to merit . . . . .                                       | 297  |
|       | The end of education the profit of the State . . . . .                     | 299  |
|       | Sports : dress . . . . .   | 299  |
|       | The use of history . . . . .   | 300  |
|       | Dependence of the writer on Elyot and Castiglione . . . . .                | 301  |
|       | Sir Humphrey Gilbert . . . . .   | 302  |
|       | The aim of his "Academy" . . . . .   | 303  |
|       | Languages ancient and modern ; natural philosophy ; law . . . . .          | 304  |
|       | Advantages expected from a reformed education . . . . .                    | 305  |
|       | III. The Institution of a young Nobleman.                           |      |
|       | Its characteristics : the end of education . . . . .                       | 306  |
|       | Physical and mental qualities necessary . . . . .                          | 307  |

Cambridge University Press
 978-1-107-62225-8 - Studies in Education: During the Age of the
 Renaissance 1400–1600
 William Harrison Woodward
 Table of Contents
More information

xvi

Contents

|   | PAGE |
|---|------|
| The course of study desirable . . . . .                                 | 308  |
| The mother-tongue ; Latin accident . . . . .                            | 309  |
| The function of Greek . . . . .   | 312  |
| Of history . . . . .  | 313  |
| Of natural philosophy and geography ; law . . . . .                     | 314  |
| Literature and leisure : right choice of books . . . . .                | 316  |
| Duty : to God ; to parents ; to country . . . . .                       | 318  |
| Bearing in society : exercises . . . . .                                | 319  |
| Travel . . . . .  | 321  |
| APPENDIX : Colloquia of Sebaldus Heyden, excerpts from . . . . . | 323  |
| BIBLIOGRAPHICAL LIST . . . . .  | 327  |
| INDEX . . . . .   | 333  |