

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS OF VOLUME I.

PART I.

BEFORE THE CATASTROPHE.

CHAPTER I.

STEIN'S EARLY YEARS.

Ruined Castles, 3. The town-house, 4. The Schloss Nassau, 6. The Burg Stein, 7. Date of Stein's birth, 9. His education, 10. The Imperial Knighthood, 11. Its character, 13. Exhibited in Stein, 16. Antiquity of his family, 19. His brothers, 20. His sisters, 22. His purity of character, 23. Family agreement, 24. A visit from Hardenberg, 25. Louise and Hardenberg, 27. Louise and Goethe, 28. Stein at Göttingen, 29. The Göttingen School, 31. Stein studies English history, 33. His acquirements, 33. The Imperial Law Courts, 36. Life at Wetzlar, 39 . . . 3—39

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

XX

CONTENTS

CHAPTER II.

THE PRUSSIAN SERVICE.

Stein chooses the Prussian service, 40. His reasons, 41. Minister v. Heinitz, 43. The official spirit, 44. The year 1780, 46. The Mining Department, 47. The old Prussian administration, 48. His first promotion, 50. His turn of mind, 51. Letters of this time, 53. Embassy to Mainz, 54. The League of Princes, 56. Stein's family connexion with Mainz, 58. View of the old Empire, 59. Dalberg, 60. Death of Frederick the Great, 61. Steps of promotion, 62. Stein tempted into diplomacy, 63. Commencement of decline in Prussia, 65. A journey to England, 66. Jacobi and Leuchsenring, 68. Stein a provincial governor, 70. His connexion with Westphalia, 71. List of his promotions, 72. His training in government, 73 . . . . . 40—73

CHAPTER III.

PRUSSIA AT WAR WITH THE REVOLUTION.

Stein belongs not to the French but to the Anti-Napoleonic Revolution, 74. His happiness at Wetter, 77. Navigation of the Ruhr, 77. His first essay in reform, 78. His employment in the war, 79. Outline of the revolutionary wars, 81. A death-blow to the Germanic system, 82. Causes of its fall, 83. What it had lost since the 17th century, 86. The Diet on Ways and Means, 89. Treaty of the Hague, 90. A German Revolution, 91. Rise of Hardenberg, 93. He becomes Prussian Minister for the Franconian Principalities, 96; signs the Treaty of Basel, 96. Stein's share in the war, 97. Colonel vom Stein in Mainz, 98. Fall of Mainz, 99. Stein at Cassel, 100. His marriage, 100. Letters to Frau v. Berg, 101. Account of his wife, 104. Rehberg on Stein, 105. Stein's memoir of his wife, 106. Möllendorff's army in Westphalia, 107. Extracts from his letters, 108. An address of thanks presented to him, 109

74—109

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

OF VOLUME I.

xxi

CHAPTER IV.

WITHIN THE LINE OF DEMARCATION.

Stein Superior President of the Westphalian Chambers, 110. Birth of a daughter, 111. Road making, 111. Accession of Frederick William III., 112. Intercourse with Prince Louis Ferdinand, 113. Stein on Campo Formio, 114. Character of Frederick William III., 115. War of the Second Coalition, 116. Stein sells Landskron, 117. Offered office in Hannover, 117. Refuses, 118. German Revolution, 119. Acquisitions of Prussia, 120. Annexation of Münster, 121. Stein's part in it, 122. Sufferings of the inhabitants, 123. Formula of secularisation, 124. Stein to the Prince of Nassau, 125. Remarks on the letter, 127. French occupation of Hannover, 129. Death of Heinitz, 130. Stein leaves Westphalia, 131. Extracts from his letters, 132 . . . 110—134

CHAPTER V.

STEIN AS MINISTER OF FINANCE.

Prussian Administrative Departments, 135. Cabinet Ministry, 136. C. A. v. Struensee, 137. His death, 138. Alteration in his office, 139. Stein Minister of State, 140. Position of Count Schulenburg, 142. Prussian Revenue, 143; after the Seven Years War, 145. Bank and Maritime Institute, 146. Sinking Fund, 147. Stein as a Financier, 148. Schön's opinion discussed, 149. Influence of Turgot, 151. Internal free-trade, 152. Reform of the Salt Administration, 153. Westphalian notions, 154. Visit to the Eastern provinces, 155. Frauds in the Bank, 156. Niebuhr invited, 157. Expectation of War, 157. Paper money, 158. The Bank of Prussia not like the Bank of England, 160. Reception of Stein's scheme, 161. Prussia's turn has come, 162 . . . 135—163

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

xxii

CONTENTS

PART II.

THE CATASTROPHE.

CHAPTER I.

CHARACTER OF THE PRUSSIAN STATE.

The fall of Prussia unforeseen, 167. Original peculiarity in her situation, 168. Military character of the monarchy, 169. Frederick William I. its real founder, 170. Size of his army, 171. It reacts on Government, 172; and on foreign affairs, 174. Years after the Seven Years War, 175. Accession of Frederick William II., 176
167—176

CHAPTER II.

FREDERICK WILLIAM II. AND FREDERICK WILLIAM III.

Constant temptations to intervention, 177. A revolutionary age, 179. Three Constitutional struggles, 180. In Poland, 181. In Austria, 181. In France, 183. Reign of Frederick William II., 185. His unsuccessful interventions, 186. Secret decline of Prussia, 189; and of the House of Hohenzollern, 190. Corruption of manners, 191; of official life, 192. The King's character, 193. Accession of Frederick William III., 194. His unassuming character, 195. The question of his abilities, 196. Stein's account of his education, 197
177—198

CHAPTER III.

NAPOLEON AND THE EMPIRE.

Precarious greatness of Prussia, 199. Revival of France, 200. Position of Napoleon, 202. Two weapons of France in the destruction of the Empire, 203. Spoliation of the Small States, 207. The Middle States, 208. Decline of Austria's influence in Germany, 209. The Empire secularised and protestantised in 1803, 210. The Empire brought to an end by Napoleon, 212. Old and new forms of the unity of Germany, 213. Stages in the German Revolution, 213. Doom of Prussia and Austria, 216 . . . . . 199—217

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

OF VOLUME I.

xxiii

CHAPTER IV.

NEUTRALITY OF PRUSSIA.

Treaties of Reichenbach and Basel, 218. Change in the next two years, 220. Treaty of Lunéville, 221. Prussia's inaction in 1799, 221. The King's argument, 222. Prussia advised to side with France, 224. Danger of an alliance of France and Russia, 225. The army to be used defensively, 227. Prussia's loss of reputation, 229. Hardenberg on the King, 229. The Hannover Question of 1803, 230. Modified position of Prussia, 232. Ranke's view controverted, 233. War of 1805, 235. Treaty of Potsdam, 236. Stein's financial report, 237. Treaty of Schönbrunn, 238. Result of Prussia's neutrality, 239 . . . . . 218—239

CHAPTER V.

THE CATASTROPHE OF PRUSSIA.

Double foreign policy of Prussia, 240. Haugwitz and Hardenberg, 241. Prospect in the middle of 1806, 242. Negotiations of France with England and Russia, 243. The Confederation of the Rhine, 244. A North-German Confederation, 245. Haugwitz takes alarm, 246. The army mobilised, 246. Napoleon suspects a new coalition, 247. The King's prospects in war, 248. Bülow's prophecies, 249. Military catastrophe, 250. Downfall of the whole system, 251. Four Periods in the War, 251. Convention of Charlottenburg not ratified, 253. Treaty of Bartenstein, 255. Russia asked to abandon her ally, 256. Treaty of Tilsit, 257. Partition of Prussia, 258. Reduction of her army, 259. The War-indemnity to be paid, 260. Three causes of the fall of Prussia, 262. Gneisenau on the military question, 263 . . . . . 240—264

CHAPTER VI.

STEIN DURING THE WAR.

Stein to Vincke on public affairs, 265. He joins an opposition party, 266. His Representation of the Faulty Organisation of the Cabinet, 267. Does its personal composition mitigate the faultiness of the arrangement? 270. The necessary alteration, 271. How to bring it about, 272. Two versions of the Representation, 273. Not originally addressed to the King, 274. Laid before him with an apology, 275. Did the King see it? 276. The King and his two Foreign Ministers, 276. Abuse of Cabinet Secretaries, 277. The rise of the abuse, 278. The Ministers not formed into a Council, 279. Hardenberg's description of the system, 280. Character of Beyme, 281. Stein mediatised, 282. Gentz and Röchel on Stein, 283. The crisis, 284. A remonstrance addressed to the King, 285. Pressure to be put on him, 285. Stein leaves Berlin, 286. Schulenburg's announcement, 286. Henriette Herz' remarks, 287. Stein begins to attract attention, 288. Council at Osterode, 289. Foreign Portfolio offered to him, 289. His refusal, 290. Reasons alleged by him, 291. Criticism of them, 292. His relation to Hardenberg, 293. Hardenberg's grievance, 294. Struggle between the King and the Hardenberg party, 295. The King proposes a compromise, 297. Controversy between Beyme and Stein, 298. Hardenberg's ultimatum, 299. The King's new plan, 300. Zastrow Foreign Minister, 301. Stein obstinate, 302. His conduct criticised, 302. Explosion, 303. The King's autograph letter, 304. Stein's answer and resignation, 305. Remarks, 306. Opinions of Niebuhr, Hardenberg, Vincke, 306. Stein's own opinion, 309. The King misconceives Stein's character, 309 . . . . . 265—310

CHAPTER VII.

STEIN IN RETIREMENT.

He remains for a while at Königsberg, 311. Then goes to Nassau by Danzig, 312. His ill-health, 313. Essay on Administrative Reform, 313. Extracts, 314. The Essay compared with his Reforms, 316. Change in Russian policy after Friedland, 317. Napoleon's diplomacy, 318. Hardenberg's anticipations, 319. Napoleon refuses to negotiate with Hardenberg, 320. His retirement, 321. Stein mentioned by Napoleon, 322. Hardenberg urges his appointment, 323. Kalkreuth and the Treaty of Tilsit, 323. The Convention of July 12th, 324. Stein summoned from Nassau, 324. Why should he obey? 325. Relation of Stein to Prussia, 326. Niebuhr's letter, 327. Stein accepts, 327. How he was regarded, 328. The play upon his name, 331 . . . . . 311—333

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

OF VOLUME I.

XXV

PART III.

MINISTRY OF STEIN.—FIRST PERIOD.

CHAPTER I.

CONSTITUTION AND TASK OF THE MINISTRY.

Changes in the Prussian Administration, 337. Rise of a Premier, 338. Hardenberg first Premier, 340. Need of the change, 341. Hardenberg had meant to share power with Stein, 341. Meeting of Stein and the King, 342. Extent of Stein's Commission, 343. The Immediate Commission, 344. The Military Commission, 345. How Stein regarded his own position, 345. What he did not meditate, 346. The weakness of his scheme, 347. The public ruin underestimated, 348. The Treaty a snare, 349. How it was kept, 350. French pecuniary claim, 352. Prussia unable to borrow, 353. The proposal to cede Silesia, 354. Stein outstripped by the Immediate Commission, 355. His views expand gradually, 356 . . . 337—356

CHAPTER II.

STEIN'S COLLEAGUES.

General character of the Stein-Hardenberg legislation, 357. Foreign relations of the period, 358. What saved Prussia, 359. Stein becomes warlike in the middle of his term of office, 360. His colleagues, 361. A new school of politicians, 361. Scharnhorst, his birth and parentage, 362. His patron Count Lippe-Bückeburg, 363. The Hannoverian service, 364. Marriage, Campaign in the Netherlands, 364. Count Walmoden a link between Stein and Scharnhorst, 365. Scharnhorst in the Prussian service, 366. He founds a Military Society, 367. Is promoted in the Staff, 367. Compared with Phull and Massenbach, 368. The Campaign of Jena, 369. Chief of the Staff to Lestocq, 370. Quarrels with Lestocq, 371. Comparison of Stein and Scharnhorst, 371. His academic

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

xxvi

CONTENTS

character, 372. His apparent insignificance, 373. Gneisenau his coadjutor, 374. Parentage and education at Königsberg University of Schön, 374. Enters the public service and travels in Silesia, 375; also in England, 376. Is attached to the General Directory in 1800, 376. His way of thinking, 377. His criticisms on Stein, 378. Becomes a member of the Immediate Commission, 380. Niebuhr and Schön, 380. Early life of Niebuhr, 381. Grows up among the Göttingen School, 382. More scholar than statesman, 382. He illustrates ancient history from his own experience, 383. His want of self-reliance, 384. Enters the Danish service, 385. Visit to England, and marriage, 386. Becomes Director of the Copenhagen Bank, 386. Called to Berlin just before Jena, 387. On the Immediate Commission, but retires with Hardenberg, 388. His reasons, 389. Gneisenau adviser of Blücher in the War of Liberation, 390. His soldier-like character, 390. Birth and early hardships, 391. Serves in America, then enters Frederick's service, 392. Wounded at Saalfeld, 393. Attracts notice at Königsberg, 394. Is sent to New East Prussia, 394. Takes reinforcements to Danzig, 395. Defence of Colberg, 396. Beginning of the popular war in Europe, 397. Importance of the defence of Colberg, 398. Becomes a member of the Military Commission, 399. Friendship of Blücher, 399. Sketch of Blücher's early life, 400. Distinguished in the Revolutionary War, 401. Capitulation at Ratkau, 401. Lateness of Blücher's renown, 402. Scarcely any of these remarkable men Prussians, 403. The practice of drawing statesmen from abroad, 404. Prussia's power of attraction, 404. Apparent superiority of Austria in 1809, 406 . . . . . 357—406

CHAPTER III.

PREPARATION OF THE EMANCIPATING EDICT.

Reforms produced by need, 407. Prussia not wanting in political thinkers, 408. Kraus, 409. Deliberations of the Immediate Commission, 409. Memoirs by Altenstein and Hardenberg, 410. Analysis of the latter, 410. It suggests the Emancipating Edict, 412. Refers to Altenstein's Memoir, 413. Suggests a National Representation, 414. The idea originally derived from Stein, 415. What suggested it to him, 415. The whole State to be called Prussia, 416. How the King should treat Stein, 417. Hardenberg on Schön and

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

OF VOLUME I.

xxvii

Niebuhr, 418. Value of Hardenberg's Memoir, 418. Dissension in the Immediate Commission, 420. Niebuhr's discontent, 421. A definite legislative project, 422. Necessity of repairing the ruin caused by the war, 423. Minister v. Schrötter's application, 423. Report of the Commission, 424. Draught of a law, 427. Stein's comments, 428. The Edict signed, 429 . . . . 407—429

CHAPTER IV.

THE EMANCIPATING EDICT.

Reasons for calling it so, 430. Partial account of it by Stein and Schön, 431. Threefold character of the Edict, 432. Danger to the peasant class of free-trade in land, 433. The Edict provides against it, 434. Peasant-proprietorship only introduced by Stein on the Domain Lands, 434. Act of July, 1808, 435. Ambiguity of the phrase 'free-trade in land,' 436. Old Land-law of Prussia, 437. Abolition of Caste, 438. Old social divisions, 439. Military object of the old system, 440. How circumstances favoured the reform, 441. A Magna Carta to the Prussians, 442. Text of the Edict, 442. Who were the authors of it, 446. It was planned not by Stein but by the Immediate Commission, 447. Schön's pretensions, 448. Reasons for suspicion, 449. The Abolition of Serfdom universally expected, 450. Schön professes to have taken no interest in free-trade, 451; but to have been the Apostle of Abolition, 452. This is inconsistent with his own contemporary Report, 453. Stein's reputation not concerned in the controversy, 454. Nature of his contribution to the work, 455. It is not confined to alterations in the text of the Edict, 456. Rapidity of his action, 457 . . . . 430—458

CHAPTER V.

STEIN'S POSITION.

Legislation not the most pressing need, 459. Precarious position of Stein, 460. Dangers from Napoleon and from the Prussian aristocracy, 461. Stein's policy not understood at the time, 462. Ignorance and indifference of public opinion, 463. Stein compared to Chatham, 464. Did he expect to hold office long? 465. He is not mainly occupied in legislation, 466; but in bargaining with the

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62347-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume I

J. R. Seeley

Table of Contents

More information

xxviii

CONTENTS OF VOLUME I.

French, 467. His long visit to Berlin, 468. The Spanish Insurrection changes the whole prospect, 469. Misfortune of Stein in September, 1808, 469. Correspondence with Scheffner, 470. The Court arrives at Königsberg, 471. Family affairs, 471. The state of Berlin described by Niebuhr, 473. Condition of the learned world, 474. Stein's relations with the King, 475. Mediation of Queen Louise, 477. The Queen's favour precarious, 477 459—478

CHAPTER VI.

NEGOTIATIONS.

Daru, 479. Napoleon to Daru, 480. Daru's alarming proposal, 481. Napoleon's intentions, 482. His thoroughness not at once appreciated in Prussia, 483. The object should have been to pay him as little as possible, 484. The Czar's intercession, 485. The French party of Berlin, 485. Mission of Prince Wilhelm, 486. He offers himself as a hostage, 487. Stein on this act and on his projected visit to Berlin, 487. What he risked, 489. Daru's irritation, 490. Meeting of Stein and Daru, 491. Treaty signed but not ratified, 491. Stein's financial expedients, 492. Money raised on the Domains, 493. Proposed sale of the Domains, 494. This requires time, 495. Niebuhr's mission to Amsterdam, 496. Taxation, 497. Income Tax, 498. Demand for Parliamentary Institutions, 499
479—499

---