

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

---

LIFE AND TIMES

OF

STEIN.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

Stein

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

LIFE AND TIMES OF STEIN, OR
GERMANY AND PRUSSIA IN THE NAPOLEONIC AGE.

BY

J. R. SEELEY, M.A.,
REGIUS PROFESSOR OF MODERN HISTORY IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

VOLUME III.

Cambridge :
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.
LONDON. CAMBRIDGE WAREHOUSE, 17, PATERNOSTER ROW.
CAMBRIDGE: DEIGHTON, BELL AND CO.
LEIPZIG: F. A. BROCKHAUS.
1878

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

---

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town,
Singapore, São Paulo, Delhi, Mexico City

Cambridge University Press

The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 8RU, UK

Published in the United States of America by Cambridge University Press, New York

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107623507

© Cambridge University Press 1878

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 1878

First paperback edition 2013

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

ISBN 978-1-107-62350-7 Paperback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

CONTENTS OF VOLUME III.

PART VII.

RETURN FROM EXILE.

CHAPTER I.

PRUSSIA AND RUSSIA REUNITED.

Mistaken view of the effect of the Russian disaster, 3. Return to the situation before Tilsit, 5. Shall Russia assume the offensive? 6; or indemnify herself at Prussia's expense? 7. Shall Prussia remain neutral or join Russia? 7. Stein and Yorck principal authors of her new Russian alliance, 8. Stein's Memoir of November 5th, 9. The Prussian Ministers to be expelled, 11. The expelled Princes have no right to restoration, 12. A defensive policy ruinous, 13. Romanzoff to be dismissed, 13. Prussia to be forced into action, 14. He is not blind to the defects of the Russians, 15. His jealousy of Poland, 15. Charges Lord Cathcart with pedantry, 16. Faith in German unity, 17. Münster on Prussia and Hannover, 18. Stein's opinion of the effect of his own advice, 20. Russia's advance has really a defensive object, 21. Life and character of Yorck, 22. His opinion of the war-party, 24. Paulucci's advances to Yorck, 25. Yorck's position after December 8th, 26. The Czar's message to Yorck, 27. Convention of Tauroggen, 28. The sensation produced by it, 29. The uses of enthusiasm, 30. Enter Stein, 30. Chasot's death-bed, 31. Stein and Arndt at Wilna, 32. Critical situation of East Prussia, 33. The Russians in the Province, 34. Stein's Full Power, 35. Visits Schön at Gumbinnen, 37. Their conversation, 38 . . . 3—38

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

CHAPTER II.

THE ESTATES OF KÖNIGSBERG.

Yorck and Stein compared, 39. Stein's audacity, 41. His loyalty to Germany, 42. Offence taken by the King, 43. Napoleon's confidence in the King, 44. His feeling towards Stein, 44. His conception of the German character, 45. The King refuses to ratify the Convention of Tauroggen, 46. Yorck to be arrested, 47. Difficulty of the King's position, 48. His real purpose, 49. Stein's plan, 50. The Estates of East Prussia, 51. Their past history, 52. Auerswald and Schön, 53. Address of the Estates, 53. Stein's letter to Auerswald, 54. Helplessness of the officials, 55. Arrest of Captain v. d. Groeben, 56. Stein's vigorous action, 57. Schön respects the Full Power, 58. Russian paper money, 59. Better news from Berlin, 60. Yorck takes courage, 61. Who shall preside over the Estates? 61. Auerswald 'goes to bed,' 62. Schön at Königsberg, 62. Stein's letter to Yorck, 63. Brandt chosen to preside, 64. Dispute between Yorck and Stein, 64. Meeting of the Estates, 65. Appearance of Yorck, 65. Origin of the Landwehr of Prussia, 66. Stein returns to the Czar, 67. Importance of what he had done, 68. Schön's misrepresentations, 69. Where Stein may have gone too far, 70. He only gives an impulse, 71. 39—71

CHAPTER III.

THE TREATY OF KALISCH.

Conduct of the Berlin Government, 72. Mission of Natzmer, 73. Curious letter of Hardenberg to Stein, 74. Alarm at Potsdam and departure of the King for Breslau, 75. Appeal for Volunteers, 76. Abolition of Exemptions, 77. Total military reform, 77. General Order acquitting Yorck, 78. Russian attempts to hurry the King forward, 79. Knesebeck sent to the Russian Headquarters, 79. Stein's curious position at this moment, 80. His letter lately discovered, 81. Meeting of Knesebeck and the Czar, 82. Knesebeck on Stein, 83. The Czar's diplomacy, 84. Prussia to be indemnified out of future conquests, 85. Stein and Anstett sent to

OF VOLUME III. vii

Breslau, 85. Stein on Kneesebeck, 86. Stein's frankness, 87. His audacious course, 88. Its motive, 88. Inconveniences caused by it, 89. The Czar's testimonial to Stein, 89. Stein does not see the King at Breslau, 90. Did Stein want to become Minister again? 91. Hardenberg will not quit his post, 91. Stein's dangerous illness, 91. The King's coldness, 92. Alexander's arrival, 92. Beginning of the War of Liberation, 93. The King's despondency, 93. His view of Stein's conduct, 94. Stein's own view, 95. Convention between Russia and Prussia, 95. Germany and Prussia organised for war, 97. G. Jackson on the Convention, 98. He is under Hannoverian influence, 99. Münster's view, 100. F. Jackson's view, 101. What Stein achieved, 101. On what condition his conduct is to be approved, 103. Great turn of fortune in his life, 103 . . . . . 72—103

CHAPTER IV.

PROSPECTS OF LIBERATION.

Contraction of our plan, 105. Stein as 'Emperor of Germany,' 106. Reconciled with Hardenberg, 107. Kutusoff's Proclamation, 107. Hesitation perceptible in its language, 108. Central Administration, 108. Ambiguity of Stein's position, 109. Aspect of affairs in April, 109. Situation of Saxony, 109. Count Senfft, 110. The French unpopular in Saxony, 110. Stein at Dresden, 111. Modification of his views, 112. Letter to Nesselrode on the condition of Saxony, 113. The King of Prussia to the King of Saxony, 114. An evasive answer, 115. Saxony 'attaches itself to the armed mediation of Austria,' 116. The 'finessing Minister,' 116. False position of Saxony, 117. Prospects of the Central Administration, 118. Steffens on Stein, 119. Hauff; Goethe, 120. Hans v. Gagern, 121. Becomes a patriot, 122. Beginning of his correspondence with Stein, 123. They meet, 124. Gagern-Melanchthon, 126. Thielemann is no Yorck, 126. Stein's dispute with Mecklenburg-Schwerin, 128. Revival of Napoleon's power in Germany, 128. Saxony goes over to him; Senfft retires, 129. The Central Administration suspended, 130. Coldness of the King towards Stein, 131. Napoleon on Stein, 131. The Allies retire into Silesia, 132. 'The Steins, the Kotzebues, and the Cossacks,' 132 . . . 105—132

CHAPTER V.

THE ARMISTICE.

Journey of Stein and Ompteda to Reichenbach, 133. Stein's disappointment at the Armistice, 134. His policy openly renounced, 134. Distaste of the Sovereigns for it, 135. A new Coalition, 136. Decline of Stein's influence with Alexander, 137. Ompteda's testimony, 138. The Czar's negotiation with Lebzeltern, 139. Anxiety of Stein, 140. His quarrel with Niebuhr, 141. Niebuhr's correspondence with Arndt, 142. Arndt on Stein's defects, 143. His opinion modified later, 144. Stein corresponds with Münster on the German Princes, 145. Death of Scharnhorst, 146. The Marquis of Wellington, 147. Stein on finesse, 148. Niebuhr's complaints of Stein, 148. Arndt called as witness, 149. Niebuhr's irritableness, 150. Their dispute is about Hardenberg, 151. Niebuhr's sentimentalism, 152. Stein an aristocrat, 153. Breach between Stein and Niebuhr, 154. Schön returns to Gumbinnen, 155. Stein's religious tendencies, 155. Subsidy Treaty with England, 156. Hannoverian influence in England, 157. 'Great Britain's electoral States,' 158. Austria's concessions to Napoleon, 159. Napoleon's views, 160. Gentz and Caulaincourt on his conduct, 161. The Armistice runs out, 162 . . . . . 133—162

CHAPTER VI.

LIBERATION.

Threefold division of Germany, 163. Outline of the campaign, 164. Stein's account of it, 165. Future constitution of Germany, 166. Metternich's view, 167. Stein's view, 168. Plan of two federal states, 169. Austria's jealousy of Prussia, 170. The Napoleonic sovereignty, 171. Its oppressiveness, 172. Beginning of Prussia's modern greatness, 173. Treaty of Töplitz, 174. Position of Bavaria, 175. Austria steals a march, 176. Treaty of Ried and Stein's comment, 177. Short-sightedness of Austria, 178. Stein's protest, 179. The Central Administration revived, 180. Stein in favour of an enlargement of Prussia, 182. An intrigue between the

OF VOLUME III. ix

Czar and Metternich, 183. Stein's conversational power, 184. Fall of the Kingdom of Westphalia, 185. Napoleon's German Empire in extremity, 186. Character of his army, 187. Fall of the Confederation of the Rhine, 188 . . . . . 163—188

CHAPTER VII.

STEIN AND THE FALL OF NAPOLEON.

Outline of the last period of the war, 189. Stein's reflexions on the victory of Leipzig, 190. His high opinion of Alexander, 191. The Central Administration reconstituted, 192; in a somewhat different form, 193. An Administration for Saxony, 194. Stein's help courted, 195. The hospitals; Reil, 197. Jackson's description of the Sovereigns at Frankfurt, 198. Stein charged with corruption, 199; with arrogance, 200. His dealings with the German Princes, 201. The King of Würtemberg, 202. What Stein could achieve, 203. Fall of Dalberg, 204. N. Turgeneff; his opinion of Stein, 205. The army raised by Stein, 206. Behaviour of the Princes of the Rheinbund, 207. Stein as Emperor of Germany, 208. Recovers his property, 208. Stages in the fall of the French Empire, 209. The settlement of Lunéville to be disturbed, 210. The war becomes offensive, 211. A pamphlet by Arndt, 212. A War of Liberation and a War of Liberty, 213. The Prussian war-party and the Czar, 214. Napoleon's views, 215. Liberation of Holland, 217. Decision of the Czar; Stein's influence, 218. Basel and Geneva, 219. The Left Bank of the Rhine, 220. Stein's administrative divisions of France, 221. His account of the campaign in France, 222. He favours the Restoration of the Bourbons, 225. His arrival in Paris, 226. Review of this passage in his life, 226. Injustice done to him, 227 . . . . . 189—228

PART VIII.
STEIN AT THE CONGRESS.

CHAPTER I.
PARTIES AT THE CONGRESS.

End of the age of war, 231. Germany must be reconstituted, 232. Stein revisits Nassau, 233. What reforms Germany wanted, 234. Feelings of France towards Germany, 235. Inclination of a part of Germany towards France, 236. Germany nobody's business, 237. Obstacles to a federation, 238. Indemnities for Prussia, 239. Stein eager for the annexation of Saxony, 241. Anecdotes, 241. Ludwig of Bavaria; Schlosser, 242. Wrede, 243. Home-life at Nassau, 244. Stein arrives at Vienna, 245. His suggestion on German affairs, 246. Two votes given to the Rhenish Confederation, 247. Talleyrand's advantageous position, 248. Obstacles to the restoration of Prussian territories, 249. The Czar's Polish idea, 250. Reasons for the annexation of Saxony, 251. Stein argues against the Czar's idea, 253. Conversation between Stein and the Czar, 254. Outline of the history of the Congress, 256. Temporary alienation of Prussia from Russia, 257. Want of clearness in the Prussian statesmen, 258. The Czar's firmness, 260. Stein's questionable view, 260. His answer to Castlereagh, 262. Saxony put into the hands of Prussia, 262. Reconciliation of Prussia and Russia, 263. How it happened, 264. First phase of the German Question, 265. Münster and Stein on demagogues, 266. The Stein-Hardenberg scheme of Federation, 267. Spoiled by Metternich's modification, 269. George III. becomes King of Hannover, 269. Bavaria and Würtemberg against all restrictions of sovereignty, 270. Hannover in favour of liberty, 271. Stein appeals to the Czar, 271. His notion of a Jacobin, 273. Ludwig of Bavaria and Stein, 273. Altercation with a German Prince, 274. The German Question in suspense, 274 . . . . . 231—274

OF VOLUME III. xi

CHAPTER II.

THE SAXON QUESTION.

The Czar must have his way, 275. Animosity against Prussia, 276. Newspaper controversy, 277. Confusion in the public mind, 277. Prussia's case against Saxony, 279. Conservatives and Liberals unite against the Prussian claim, 280. Stein's view, 281. His Pangermanism, 282. Secret jealousies against Prussia, 282. Talleyrand sees his advantage, 284. War of pamphlets, 284. Outline of the struggle at the Congress, 285. An interview between Stein and the Czar, 286. Russian Declaration of Nov. 27th, 288. Question of entire or partial annexation, 289. Münster's course, 290. Stein against partition, 290. Hardenberg's pathetic appeal to Metternich, 292. Austrian Declaration of December 10th, 293. The Czar's interference, 293. The French Declaration, 294. Talleyrand to Castlereagh, 295. His misrepresentations, 296. Stein's answer to Talleyrand, 296. Castlereagh goes with France, 297. Gagern on the Prussian Representatives, 298. Stein's irritability, 298. Passing alarm of war, 299. Necessity of peace, 300. Liverpool to Castlereagh, 301. Talleyrand admitted to the Conference, 301. The crisis over, 302. Modern territorial settlement of Prussia, 303. Difference between the new territory and the old, 305. Henceforth Prussia confronts France, 306. What she still wanted, 307 . . . . . 275—307

CHAPTER III.

THE GERMAN QUESTION.

Return of Napoleon, 308. The German Question in suspense, 309. Stein's plan of dealing with it, 310. He proposes to revive the imperial dignity, 311. His argument, 312. His impatience to depart, 313. Opposition of Hardenberg and Humboldt to his scheme, 314. His irritation, 315. Stein and the Duke of Wellington, 316. Swiss affairs, 316. Proscription of Bonaparte, 317. Conjecture as to Stein's plan, 318. It is abandoned, 320. He comforts his wife, 320. He stays at Vienna till May, 322. The German

Question brought on and settled, 322. Stein's protest, 323. The Federation more monarchical than the old Empire, 324. Why Stein is so eager for Estates, 324. Stein leaves for Nassau, 325
308—325

CHAPTER IV.

ALSACE AND LORRAINE.

The Second Peace of Paris, 326. Stein on Napoleon's return, 327. The Czar, Stein, Metternich and the Secret Treaty, 328. The Czar's character, 329. Stein's plans for Alsace and Lorraine, 329. Blücher to Stein, 330. Second overthrow of France, 330. More sudden than Jena, 331. She is left too strong for Europe, 331. Lord Liverpool's opinion, 332. Lord Castlereagh's, 333. The Duke of Wellington's, 334. No cession of territory to be asked, 336. Opinion of Capodistrias, 337. Metternich for a cession, 339. Humboldt on the same side, 341. Hardenberg's opinion and prophecy, 343. All Germany agreed, 344. The non-German Powers magnanimous, 345. Stein goes to Paris, 345. His interview with the Czar, 346. His memoir, 346. He proposes a compromise, 347. Stein has lost his influence with the Czar, 348. Stein disappointed of Johannisberg, 349 . . . . . 326—349

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

OF VOLUME III.

xiii

PART IX.

OLD AGE.

CHAPTER I.

THE NEW PHASE OF GERMAN POLITICS.

Gradual retirement of Stein, 353. Peace leads to Reform, 354. Reform in Prussia initiated by the Government, not by the people, 355. Stein's opinion that liberty strengthens Government for war, 356. Prussian Liberalism begins to be like French, 358. Landmarks of reactionary period, 359. Meeting with Goethe, 360. Notes by Arndt and Boisserée, 362. Stein begins to have leisure for art, 364. Stein and the King of Würtemberg, 365. Wangenheim, 366. Secret and ostensible reasons of Stein's retirement, 367. Stein, Austria and Metternich, 369. Reasons for not entering Austrian service, 370; nor representing Prussia in the Diet, 371. Reorganization required in Prussia, 373. Jealousy of Hardenberg, 374. Honours conferred on Stein, 376. Exchange of estate; country life, 377. House and tower at Nassau, 378. Stein and Perthes, 380. Various constitutional struggles, 381. A Parliament destroys local parties, 381. Influence of locality on politics, and of scenery on character, 382. The French Party; Pamphlet by Schmalz, 383. Sensation produced, 386. Letter of Stein to Gneisenau, 387. Letter from Sack, 388. Stein had no taste for 'metapolitics,' 389. Stein on the Wartburg festival and freedom of the press, 389. A vein of Conservatism; Professors, 391. Stein and the Duke of Weimar, 392. Two questions; Representation and Abolition of Castes, 395. Ordinance of the King, 395. Stein's advice not taken, 396. First victory of reaction; Commission named at last, 397. Three Commissioners travel, 398. Political controversy takes shape, 399. Definition by Gentz, 400. Evasion of promise to convene General Estates, 401. Letter of Stein to Eichhorn, 402. Comments by Stein on Essay by W. v. Humboldt, 404. Constitution of Parliament, 406. Constituent body ; Stein's opinion, 407. His scheme discussed, 408. Effect of his Emancipating Edict, 410. Stein on Patrimonial Jurisdiction and Guilds, 411. On the Peasantry. His latest political creed, 412 ; compared with his earlier, 413. Why he defends Guilds, 414. He prizes unpaid service, 415. Kunth burns his letters, 415. Kunth's ill-humour at his defence of Guilds, 416. His general feeling towards Stein, 417. . . . 353—417

xiv CONTENTS

CHAPTER II.

REACTION.

Spread of reaction in 1818, 418. Stourdza's pamphlet, 419. Attack on the Universities, 420. The Czar implicated, 422. Stein's opinion, 423. Murder of Kotzebue, 424. Reaction sets in, 424. Stein's Whiggism, 425. His vain appeal to the Czar, 426. Progress of reaction, 427. Carlsbad Resolutions and Vienna Conferences, 428. New aspect of the Confederation, 429. Resignation of W. v. Humboldt, 430. His account of it, 431. Changed spirit of the Prussian Government, 432. Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle, 433. Stein turns to German History, 434. Changes of fashion in the study of German History, 435. The Monumenta Germaniæ, 438. Historical lectures to girls, 439. Designs of Leibnitz, 440. Stein's plan, 441. A view of education, 442. Formation of a Society, 443. G. H. Pertz, 444. His merits ; Stein makes him dictator, 445. He visits Nassau, 446. Pertz as a biographer, 448. Death of Frau vom Stein, 449. Her life by Stein, 450. Drift of it, 451. Swiss tour, 452. Stein in Italy, 453. Principle of Intervention, 454. Rising in Spain, 455. Stein's opinion of it, 455. Rome ; Niebuhr, 456. Visit to Naples, 457. Notice in Bunsen's Life, 458. Niebuhr's enthusiasm, 459. Niebuhr on Hardenberg, 460. Stein on bureaucracy, 461. New Committee on Provincial Estates, 462. Stein not a member, 463. Letter from the Crown Prince, 463. Stein's answer, 465. Death of Hardenberg, 466. Stein's remark, and hopes of succeeding him, 467. He is passed over, 467. His sketch of Hardenberg, 468. Perhaps too harsh, 469. The Stein-Hardenberg period, 469. Two dictators, 470. The new spirit roused by them, 471. The dictators not allowed to deal with it, 472. Unfortunate turn of public feeling, 473 . . . . 418—473

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

OF VOLUME III.

xv

CHAPTER III.

LAST YEARS.

Stein's Autobiography, 474 ; not elaborate, 475. Stein not qualified for autobiography, 476. Its conclusion, 477. The Senffts, 478. His interest in new historical works, 479. Mémoires d'un homme d'état, 479. Their account of Stein generally received, 480. Errors of the book, 481. Alison's obligations to it, 482. Stein slandered by Bourrienne, 482. Story of Sahla, 483. Fouché's ingenuity, 485. Stein's pamphlet, 487. Stein on autobiography, 488. Dahlmann withdraws from the Historical Society, 489. General indifference to it, 490. Brazilian apes, 491. Goethe made an honorary member, 491. Stein sees two volumes of the Monumenta published, 492. J. F. Böhmér and his impressions of Stein, 493. Stein a Member of the Berlin Academy, 493. Marshal of the Westphalian Estates, 494. Visit to Berlin, 495. Second and third sessions of the Westphalian Estates, 496. Stein's brusque manner, 497. Quarrel with Vincke, 497. Correspondence with Gneisenau, 498. Death of Alexander ; Stein's remarks, 501. Stein on Turgeneff's sentence, 502. Farewell to Schön, 503. Niebuhr at Bonn ; his 'disposition to melancholy,' 505 ; his political anticipations, 506. He is named a Member of the Council of State, 507. Stein preaches a sermon, 508. Niebuhr defends himself, 510. News of the July Revolution, 511. Despair of Niebuhr, 512. His fear of invasion, 513. He throws the blame on the Reaction, 515. His last letter to Stein, 516. Stein's answer, 517. Niebuhr takes offence, 519 ; unreasonably, 520 ; his vision of a return of barbarism, 521. What it means, 522. Has it been realised ? 523. 'The burden of England,' 524. Stein's view, 524. Death of Niebuhr, 525. Did he die of the French Revolution ? 526. Correspondence of Stein with Leopold of Belgium, 527. Not on Belgium, but on Greece, 528. Greek education to be founded on German literature, 529. The military system to be German, 530. His ill-humour when Leopold abandons the enterprise, 531. He underrates Leopold, 532. Westphalian disturbances, 533. A Deputy Marshal appointed, 534. The Estates propose to petition for General Estates, 535. Objections ; Stein is to report their wishes confidentially to the King, 536. The system of Provincial Estates a failure, 537. Stein's report, 538. The secret betrayed, 539. Prince Wilhelm visits Stein, 540. Marriage of Henriette, 541.

xvi CONTENTS OF VOLUME III.

Marriage of Therese, 542. Decline of Stein's health, 543. His reticence on religion, 544. He is a believer, 545. Christian and German at heart, 546. Uninfluenced by philosophy and rationalism, 547. A reformer without contempt for the past ; how? 548; feminine influences, 549. Practical failure of French principles, 550. Napoleon resisted by the countries of faith, 551. Stein sees in French principles not humanitarianism so much as conquest, 551. His religion not introspective, 552. Was he inclined to Catholicism? 553. Dislikes Rationalism, 554. 'Religious-moral,' 556. Learns faith in Providence from the fall of Napoleon, 557. Illness and death, 559. Epitaph, 560. His death little noticed, 561. 'A Baron and nothing more,' 562. True and false aristocracy, 564. Stein a genuine noble, 565. Union of antique and modern virtues, 566 . . . . . 474—566

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-62350-7 - Life and Times of Stein or Germany and Prussia in the Napoleonic Age:

Volume III

J. R. Seeley

Frontmatter

More information

---

VOLUME III.

FRONTISPIECE.

STEIN in old age.

MAP AT END OF VOLUME.

Prussia after the Peace of Vienna, 1815.