P R E F A C E

IN his preface to his work, The Social and Political Systems of Central Polynesia (Cambridge, 1924), my friend, the late R. W. Williamson, alluded to his advanced age but stated that he hoped to be able in the near future "to produce a second instalment, which will probably deal with a number of myths of creation...the religions of the people, including their beliefs as to the soul and the after-life...and their great army of gods and spirits...beliefs and ideas relating to certain sacred places and objects, and other matters." The work, as is usual, took longer than its author anticipated, with the result that when Williamson died, in January 1932, the manuscript of the present book (which covers the cosmic myths and the soul and after-life only) was still barely in Proof. The final sections—Parts vi and vii—of Chapter xxvii had only been worked out in rough, but the plan outlined was considered sufficiently definite to justify their being published in their unfinished state. Miss Muriel Campbell, Williamson's secretary, has seen the book through the Press at the request of Mrs Williamson and the Executors, and has compiled the Index.

It remains to express my personal gratitude to Miss Campbell for her devotion to the work, and to acknowledge facilities given by the President and Council of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland.
