INDEX

This index is intended to be used with the Table of Contents. The pages dealing with the principal matters in the volume can be quickly found by means of the index; this will guide the reader to the Contents where an analysis of the subject will be seen grouped under the main heading. For example, in the index will be found the entry, Charters, Anglo-Saxon, 282–324; page 282 should be sought in the Contents where (pp. xvii–xx) a concise summary of the information to be gathered from this section has been printed.

The names of the Anglo-Saxon states can be quickly found in the index, e.g. Hwiccas, rulers of, 512–518. By turning to the Contents (p. xxv) the names of these rulers will be found. The names of kings and earls, however, whose history enters into more than one part of the volume, are given in the index. The names of witnesses of charters have not been generally indexed. The persons mentioned have in most cases been indexed under their first names; the exceptions to this rule are to be identified by means of cross-references.

The figures in italics indicate that there is a note on the subject of the heading at the end of the volume.
