Acknowledgements

Many people have helped immeasurably in the production of this book. I first want to thank all those in Zaire who patiently answered my questions and supplied their own insights and comments, offered most generous hospitality and friendship, and enhanced life with their wit and humour. Circumstances in Zaire are such that it is better not to name individuals, so I can only express my gratitude and appreciation generally.

My fieldwork was helped by my affiliation as Research Associate of CRIDE (Centre de Recherches Interdisciplinaires pour le Développement de l'Éducation), Kisangani, and by a Grant-in-Aid of Research from Sigma Xi, the Scientific Research Society. For library research, I am much indebted to the unfailing helpfulness of the staff of Haverford College Library.

I am grateful to many people for their encouragement and suggestions, and for helpful discussion or comment on the manuscript or on earlier working out of my material, and particularly to Michael Schatzberg, Sandra Barnes, Keith Hart, V.Y. Mudimbe, E. Mudimbe Boyi, Gavin Kitching, and Benoît Verhaegen. I owe an especial debt to Tom Callaghy, for reading the manuscript and for his most valuable and helpful comments. Above all, I want to thank my husband, Wyatt MacGaffey, for all his help, support, encouragement and solutions to irritating problems, at all stages of this enterprise, and for many long and fruitful discussions of anthropology often far too early in the day. None of these people are responsible for the opinions expressed here; the errors are mine.

The substance of Chapters 5 and 7 have already been published in four articles. I acknowledge permission to reprint from the editors of African Affairs for parts of 'How to Survive and Get Rich Amidst Devastation: the Second Economy in Zaire' (1983, 82: 351–66); to Holmes and Meier Publishers for parts of 'Women and Class Formation in a Dependent Economy: Kisangani Entrepreneurs', in Women and Class in Africa, edited by Claire Robertson and Iris Berger (1986); to Africa World Press for parts of 'Fending for Yourself: the Organization of the Second Economy in Zaire', in The Crisis in Zaire: Myths and Realities, edited by
