CHAPTER I. SYSTEMS OF TENURE	1
Importance arises from the relation of the actual farmer to the land he utilizes—the chief forms of tenure enumerated
CHAPTER II. TRIBAL TENURE	2
Primitive forms—claims based on hunting and first clearing—right of usufruct—magical considerations—clan and family control—shifting cultivation—use of pasture—redeemable purchase—tenancy—fragmentation
CHAPTER III. FEUDAL TENURE	19
Imposition of a political system on tribal organization—the manorial system in Europe—Ashanti—Basutoland—power of chiefs varies but usually limited, at least in theory—Buganda—Bunyoro—Polynesia—India—confusion with landlordism by early British administrators
CHAPTER IV. LABOUR TENANCY	28
Term 'Squatter' leads to confusion—labour tenants in South and East Africa
CHAPTER V. SHARE TENANCY	31
Examples—Europe—New World—India
CHAPTER VI. CASH TENANCY	37
Rise in Britain—state regulation—examples in Fiji and Nyasaland
CHAPTER VII. EMPHYTEUSIS	41
Examples—India—Holland—scarcely distinguishable from ownership
CHAPTER VIII. OWNER-OCCUPATION	44
Ownership always subject to certain limitations which are, however, mainly of theoretical import
CHAPTER IX. THE PASSING OF TRIBAL TENURE	45
Agricultural drawbacks—overstocking—appearance of private ownership and trade in land
CHAPTER X. ADVOCATION OF FREEHOLDING	54
Political stability—the magic of property—sentimental attachment to land—official support

CHAPTER XI. DANGERS IN THE FREEHOLD SYSTEM	58
Basis of land values—capital required by the farmer for purchase—fluctuation in values and returns
CHAPTER XII. SUBDIVISION AND FRAGMENTATION	63
Subdivision on inheritance—dependence on secondary industry—subdivision sometimes unequal—fragmentation prevalent under owner-occupation as well as under tribal tenure
CHAPTER XIII. FARM INDEBTEDNESS—ITS EXTENT	70
Inheritance as a cause of debt—debt in Europe—the New World—the East—the tropics
CHAPTER XIV. FARM INDEBTEDNESS—ITS CONSEQUENCES	85
Rigidity of farm debt—types of mortgage—speculation in land values—overcapitalization—inability to anticipate long-term effects—prohibitive interest rates in less highly developed communities—unproductive debt
CHAPTER XV. THE WEAKNESS OF OWNER-OCCUPATION	95
Debt leads to tenancy and absenteeism—the magic of property often insufficient to prevent spoliation of natural resources
CHAPTER XVI. REMEDIES	103
Prevention of mortgaging—transactions among natives themselves often ignored—attempts at prevention often fruitless—state credit—co-operative credit
CHAPTER XVII. MODERN POLICY	109
Points of a tenancy system—cash and share tenancy re-examined—distinction between ownership and secure tenure becoming recognized in the colonies—limited freeholds—Glen Grey—British Guiana
CHAPTER XVIII. MODERN POLICY ( continued )	124
Usufructuary occupation—coupled with state control—Kingolwira scheme—the case where private rights exist—buying out native rights—the Gezira—the case where private rights cannot be bought out—local land boards in tribal areas—‘Vertical Co-operation’—The Sudan Plantations Syndicate
