PREFATORY NOTE

My object in the following lecture was to describe the intermingling of the peoples in the making of the American nation and the manner in which national unity has been attained. The lecture was delivered to students of Bedford College at Cambridge on 1 March 1944 and has been a little enlarged for publication. I am indebted to my friend Dr Dexter Perkins, at the present time Professor of American History and Institutions in the University of Cambridge, for reading through the manuscript and assisting me with valuable comments.
