TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER I

HUMBERT I WHITEHANDS

SECTION I. BURGUNDY, 888–1000 (1–7).

Jurane Burgundy under Rudolf I. Acquisition of Provence and the Aargau by Rudolf II (1–2). Name of Burgundy for the completed kingdom (3). General causes of Burgundy’s weakness (2–3). Special causes. Decay of the State and growth of feudalism. Small royal power in Provence. The ravages and expulsion of the Saracens (3–6).

Conrad the Peaceful’s reign and his dependence on Germany (6). Rudolf III attempts to coerce the greater nobles and fails (6). Power of the local Counts c. 1000 (7).

SECTION II. HUMBERT WHITEHANDS IN BURGUNDIAN POLITICS (7–41).

Rudolf III begins to confer counties on the Bishops (7–9). He resides chiefly in Jurane Burgundy (9). The Empress Adelaide effects a reconciliation between him and his vassals (9–10). Rudolf III is supported by two great families, the Anselmides and the Humbertines (10): who possess several bishoprics (11). Otto-William of “Franché Comté” (11–12). Henry II becomes King of Germany and claims the Imperial succession (12–13). He occupies Basel (13).

Rudolf III marries Ermengarde (13–14): and grants her the counties of Vienne and Sermores, etc. (14–15). Henry II renews his Burgundian schemes, and makes treaty of Strasburg (1016) with Rudolf III (15–17). Henry fails against Otto-William and the treaty of Strasburg is abrogated (17–18). Rudolf and Henry make a new treaty at Mayence (1018), but Henry fails again against the Burgundians (18). Grant of county of Vaud to the Bishop of Lausanne (18–19). Eudes II of Troyes claims the succession in Burgundy (19). The county of Vienne is granted (1023) to the Archbishop of Vienne. Supposed similar grant of Aosta to its Bishop is baseless (19–20). The Humbertine Burchard becomes Bishop of Aosta. Humbert Whitehands is Count of Aosta in 1024 (20–11). The Peace of God is reestablished in the Second Council of Arse 1025 (21–2). The oath taken there (probably by a Humbertine) (22–4). Conrad II’s accession in Germany. He shares Henry II’s conception of the Holy Roman Empire and claims to be heir of Burgundy (24–5). He seizes Basel (25). He is crowned King of Italy (1026). Rudolf’s embassy to him. Rudolf attends Conrad’s imperial coronation, agreement with Cnut re the Great St Bernard, etc. (26–7). Conrad is recognized as heir of Burgundy at Basel (27).

Deaths of Burchard II of Lyons and Burchard of Vienne; Burchard of Aosta obtains the see of Lyons (28–9). Further Humbertine Bishops (29). Foundation of Talloires (29–30). Rudolf dies, Eudes III invades Burgundy (30). Humbert
Table of Contents

Section III. The Problem of the Two Humberts (41–74).

Gingins distinguished two contemporary branches of the Humbertines (41–2). Carulli's scheme of the two branches (42–3). Count di Vesme's ditto (43). Labruzzi and de Mantey declare for the single family-tree (43–4). Method here adopted (44). Register of Humbertine documents relevant to the discussion (45–57). Data to be derived from these documents (57–65). Two Humbertine genealogies are easily derived from these data (65–7). Further fragments of Humbertine genealogies derived from these data (67). The Anselmid genealogy (67–8). Discussion of the rival Humbertine genealogies: (1) Topographical indications (68–70). (2) Chronological ditto (70–2). (3) Indications from the titles of the homonyms (72–3). (4) Is it possible to isolate the homonyms? (73–4). Conclusions (74).

Section IV. The Possessions of Humbert Whitehands (74–100).

Section V. The Ancestry of Humbert Whitehands (100–20).

Section VI. The Sons of Humbert Whitehands (120–4).

Chapter II

The Countess Adelaide of Turin

Section I. North Italy under the Ottos (125–9).

Table of Contents

Appendix: The evidence for the Ardoind possessions (157–65).

SECTION III. THE LATER ARDOINIDS (165–89).

SECTION IV. THE MARRIAGES OF COUNTESS ADELAIDE (185–213).

SECTION V. COUNTESS ADELAIDE AND HER HUSBANDS (213–23).

Table of Contents

SECTION VI. Countess Adelaide and her Sons (223–51).

SECTION VII. The Break-up of the Mark of Turin (251–60).

CHAPTER III

The Attempt to Recover the Mark of Turin

Section I. Humbert II (261–78).

Feudalism; divergences in its development in the West (261–3). Character of feudal development in Burgundy (263–4). Feudalism in Savoy (264–6). Humbert II is a Burgundian; his relations with the Empire (266–7). His secular policy in Burgundy; acquisition of Tarentaise (267–71). His ecclesiastical policy in Burgundy (271–2). Humbert II in Italy; he claims the mark of Turin, Car. Reg. ccXXVII. (271–4). Humbert’s entry into Italy; negotiation with Asti; alliance with Chiussa and Pinetoro and Fruattuaria; foundation of the mint of Susa; extent of Humbert II’s success in Italy (274–6). Humbert II’s children and death (276–8).

Section II. Amadeus III’s Early Life and Wars (278–93).

Arrangement adopted for Amadeus III’s reign; Amadeus III’s minority (278–9). The Emperor Henry V in Italy and West-Alpine policy (279–81). Amadeus III’s purely Burgundian policy; his first crusade; marriages of his sisters; Concordat of Worms and its influence on Savoy (281–3). Probable war of Amadeus III with Aymon of the Genevois; Amadeus III’s first marriage (283–4). Lothar II revives the Rectorate of Burgundy; Amadeus III invades Italy; he obtains Turin, etc. (284–7). Lothar II captures Turin and subdues Amadeus III (287–9). Amadeus III probably recovers Turin; boundaries of Turin and Maurienne dioceses (289–91). Amadeus III and France; his war with the Dauphin; his daughter Matilda marries Affonso I of Portugal (291–3).
Table of Contents

SECTION III. AMADEUS III'S GOVERNMENT AND DEATH (293–315).

Amadeus III's religious foundations; his share in that of Abbondance (293–4). He founds St Sulpine-en-Beugey; birth and marriage of his daughter Alice (294–5). He founds Hautecombe, Chêzery and Avrières (296–7). He reforms St Maurice; his relations with Tamié and the Hospice de St Bernard (297–8). Feudal jurisdictions; grant to Maurienne; St Maurice Aignave v. the d'Allinges (298–300). Amadeus III's dispute with the Bishop of Sion; he surrenders the place of Tarentaise, Aosta and Maurienne (300–7). Amadeus III's curia; the ministeriales (302–3). The Liberties of Susa (303–6). Amadeus III's entourage and residences; his titles (306–8). He joins the Second Crusade; he raises money from S. Giusto and St Maurice (309–10). His crusade and death (311–13). His children, and character; his assumption of a coat of arms. Summary (313–15).

CHAPTER IV

COUNT HUMBERT III

Characteristics of Humbert's rule (316–17). Amadeus of Lausanne becomes Tutor; Turin becomes independent; affairs of St Maurice; Humbert III's first two marriages (317–19). Frederick Barbarossa and Burgundy; the Rectorate of the Zähringen; Humbert III's attitude (319–21). Barbarossa in Italy; state of North Italy; Barbarossa in Piedmont; Dauphin Guigues V (322–3). Barbarossa acquires Franche Conté; restriction of the Rectorate; new turn of Burgundian politics (323–5). Siege of Milan; Diet of Roncaglia; Diplomas to S. Soloturo and the Bishop of Turin (325–7). The Schism; destruction of Milan (327–8). Barbarossa's power in Burgundy; Savoy is Alexandrine; Humbert III ransomed; Humbert III wars with the Dauphiné; marries Clementia of Zähringen (328–9). Decline of the Schismatics in Burgundy; Humbert III's quarrel with St Anthem of Belley (329–31). The Lombard League; Barbarossa's army is destroyed by plague (331–2).

SECTION II. HUMBERT III AS AN IMPERIAL PARTIZAN (332–46).

Barbarossa's straits; he gains over Humbert III and escapes over the Mont Cenis (333–5). Humbert III's terms; he reacquires the county of Turin; he is at war with Asti (335–7). Humbert III's alliance with England; general peace among the Burgundian seigneurs; the terms of the English treaty (337–41). Barbarossa re-invades Italy; he burns Susa; his diploma to St Anthem of Belley; Humbert III is with the Emperor; Legnano; Humbert III's wars in Piedmont (341–4). Barbarossa is crowned at Arles; Humbert III marries Beatrice of Mâcon; birth of his son Thomas; death of St Anthem; Humbert's treaty with the Bishop of Sion (344–6).

SECTION III. HUMBERT III'S LAST YEARS AND DEATH (346–52).

The Peace of Constance; Barbarossa becomes hostile to Humbert III; Milo Bishop of Turin; his war with Humbert III (346–7). Milo's legal proceedings against Humbert III; decision against Humbert III (348–9). New Piedmontese settlement; war with Humbert III; parallel case of the Genevois; Barbarossa's diploma to the Archbishop of Tarentaise; Humbert III is put to the ban of the Empire; Henry VI takes Avigliana (349–51). Humbert III dies; his character and children (351–2).
CHAPTER V

COUNT THOMAS

SECTION I. THE BURGUNDIAN PHASE (353–79).

Savoyard history becomes fuller and more continuous with Thomas; periods of his reign (353–5). Regency of Boniface of Montferrat and reconciliation with the Empire (355–7). Thomas of age; wars in progress in N. Burgundy; acquisition of Cornillon (357–9). Charter to Aosta (359–60). Death of Henry VI; state of Piedmont (360–4). The Piedmontese wars (1190–1200) of Turin and Asti and the Marquessesses; Thomas concerned (364–70). Thomas' first war with Saluzzo; close of the war of Asti and the Marquessesses (370–1). Thomas' war with the Duke of Zähringen, etc.; Combat de Chillon; acquisition of Moudon; Thomas adheres to King Philip; renewed war; Philip's murder; final peace with Zähringen and the Bishop of Lausanne; results of Thomas' N. Burgundian policy (372–7). Civil War in Val d'Aosta; Thomas' intervention; character of this period of the reign (377–9).

Appendix I. Thomas' first war with Saluzzo (379–81).

Appendix II. Thomas' war with the Duke of Zähringen (381–2).

SECTION II. COUNT THOMAS' ITALIAN CONQUESTS (383–93).

Introductory; Otto IV's march to Rome; Asti deserts the small communes (383–5). Otto IV's breach with the Pope; Thomas acquires Vigone; his second war and peace with Saluzzo (385–7). Lombard affairs; Saluzzo breaks the treaty; Thomas allies with the Lombard League; war with Montferrat and Saluzzo; new peace with Saluzzo; Thomas acquires territory south of the Po (387–90). Death of Otto IV; Thomas' Burgundian schemes; Geneva; alliances with the Dauphiné; Provence and Kyburg (392–3).

SECTION III. THOMAS' LATER YEARS AND DECLINE IN POWER (393–414).

Thomas' Italian ambitions; state of Lombardy; Thomas acquires Pinerolo, Carignano, etc. (392–5). War with his Piedmontese vassals, Turin and Saluzzo; Peace of 1223 (395–8). War and peace with Sion and Thoire (398–9). Power of Asti; Saluzzo submits to her; Thomas is again at war with the Piedmontese vassals, Turin and Pinerolo; he submits to Asti; general war in W. Lombardy; Thomas takes service under Genoa (399–403). Frederick II's breach with the Lombard League; Thomas joins the Emperor; is made Vicar of Lombardy; his Ligurian scheme and failure; his negotiation with Marseilles (404–7). William of Savoy becomes Elect of Valence; Thomas' negotiations to the Pope; his alliance with Montferrat; renewed general war in W. Lombardy; the Dauphin joins Turin; so do the Romagnano; foundation and revolt of Villafranca; destruction of Testona (407–11). The Lombard League subdues Montferrat and refunds Cuneo and Moncalieri; Thomas' share in the war; Asti and the others make peace (412–13). Thomas continues the war with Turin, etc.; his death (414).

SECTION IV. EPILOGUE; THOMAS' FAMILY (414–20).

Amadeus IV makes peace with the Dauphin, Turin, etc.; results of Thomas' Italian wars (414–15). Thomas' marriage (415–17). His sons and daughters (417–18). General results of his reign; his character and attitude to the monasteries (418–20).
Table of Contents

CHAPTER VI

THE SAVOYARD STATE UNDER HUMBERT III AND THOMAS

SECTION I. TERRITORIES (421–8).

Two main divisions of Humbert and Thomas’ lands, shown in their titles (421–2). The Counts were Princes of the Empire (423–3). The Counts of Savoy exercise the royal prerogative in their lands; they practise primogeniture (423–4). The Savoyard dominions in Burgundy; the sees of Sion, Belley and Tarentaise (424–7). The Savoyard dominions in Italy (427). New elements in Burgundian politics; the policy of the Counts of Savoy (427–8).

SECTION II. THE SAVOYARD GOVERNMENT (429–39).

The Count’s travelling court; the Count’s jurisdiction (429–31). The Count’s financial rights (431–3). Local comital officials, mestrals and castellans, missi (433–5). Chief officials of the household; special advisers of Humbert III; the court of Count Thomas (435–7). The Count’s Curia, proces and others; tendency of the Curia to be localized; probable origin of the Estates (437–9).

SECTION III. VASSALS AND TOWNS (439–51).

Classes in the Savoyard State; the nobles (439–40). The Viscounts; their powers; sub-enfeoffment; the Viscounts of Aiguebelle, Maurienne, Novalaise, Savoy, Tarentaise and Aosta (440–4). Baronial rights in general; ecclesiastical landowners (444–5). Clientes and rustici (446–7). The townsmen; their privileges and charters; Aosta and Susa; classes of townsfolk; town government (447–51).

SECTION IV. SUMMARY (452–5).

General development; personal law changes to local law; feudalism becomes fullgrown (453–5). Count’s pre-eminent and public, not merely feudal, position (453). Unity and fortunate geographical position of Savoy (453–4). Princedom of the Empire and primogeniture; ability of the Counts (454–5).

APPENDIX OF DOCUMENTS (456–79).

GENEALOGY OF THE ARDOINIDS (212).

GENEALOGY OF THE HUMBERTINES (between pp. 480 and 481).

INDEX (481).

MAP I. THE SAVOYARD LANDS c. 1080

MAP II. THE SAVOYARD LANDS c. 1180

maps available for download from www.cambridge.org/9781107650428