The British Navy may well have ceased to count its victories. It is rich beyond the wildest dreams of success and fame. It may well, rather, on a culminating day of its history, cast about for the memory of some reverses to appease the jealous fates which attend the prosperity and triumphs of a nation. It holds, indeed, the heaviest inheritance that has ever been entrusted to the courage and fidelity of armed men.

It is too great for mere pride. It should make the seamen of to-day humble in the secret of their hearts and indomitable in their unspoken resolution. In all the records of history there has never been a time when a victorious fortune has been so faithful to men making war upon the sea. And it must be confessed that on their part they knew how to be faithful to their victorious fortune. They were exalted. They were always watching for her smile; night or day, fair weather or foul, they waited for her slightest sign with the offering of their stout hearts in their hands.

JOSEPH CONRAD.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It is a pleasant duty to acknowledge the debt which this book owes to the kindness of those who have consented to contribute 'Passages'. My grateful thanks are due to the Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Winston S. Churchill, C.H., for permission to quote in full his speech at the Guildhall on 23 February 1940, 'The Navy is Here!'; to Admiral of the Fleet Lord Chatfield for permission to reprint from The Navy and Defence his account of the Battle of Heligoland; to Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch for a generous portion of Lieutenant Lapenotière from News from the Duchy; to Captain Francis Newbolt for permission to quote verbatim his father's poem Hawke from Poems New and Old by Sir Henry Newbolt [John Murray]; to the late Mrs R. E. Vernède for permission to make use of her husband's poem England to the Sea; and to the Trustees of the National Maritime Museum and the Society for Nautical Research for permission to reprint two extracts from The Story of H.M.S. Victory.

I desire also to record my obligation to Messrs Cassell and Co., Ltd. for permission to make use of Into Battle for the Prime Minister's speech on 23 February 1940; and to Messrs Wm. Heinemann, Ltd. for similar permission in respect of the Battle of Heligoland from pp. 124–126 of The Navy and Defence.

Permission has also been granted for the passage from R. L. Stevenson's essay English Admirals by Mr Lloyd Osbourne; for the passage from Froude's English Seamen in the Sixteenth Century by Messrs Longmans Green and Company; for the extracts from Thomas Hardy's The Trumpet-Major and The Dynasts by Messrs Macmillan and Co. and the trustees of the Hardy Estate; and for the extract from Swinburne's poem Trafalgar Day by Messrs Wm. Heinemann, Ltd.
