P R E F A C E.

THE lectures contained in this volume were delivered at the Summer Meeting of University Extension Students and others held at Cambridge in August, 1902.

The central design of this series of historical lectures was the treatment of recent developments in the principal countries of Europe by natives of those countries, in order that the most intimate and essential points of view might be presented. Some aspects of recent international history were also handled by lecturers who had given special study to those topics.

In order to give these essays a wider and more permanent value, the Syndics of the University Press decided to publish them, with the kind permission of the writers.

All concerned in the work of the Summer Meeting and in the production of this volume feel themselves deeply indebted to the generosity of those who delivered the lectures and consented to their publication.
