CHAPTER I.

INTELLECTUAL CHARACTER OF POSITIVISM.

	PAGE
The object of Philosophy is to present a systematic view of human life as a basis for modifying its imperfections .....	8
The Theological Synthesis failed to include the practical side of human nature.....	9
But the Positive spirit originated in practical life.....	11
In human nature, and therefore in the Positive system, Affection is the preponderating element .....	14
The proper function of Intellect is the service of the Social Sympathies...	16
Under Theology the Intellect was the slave of the Heart; under Positivism, its servant .....	18
The subordination of the Intellect to the Heart is the subjective principle of Positivism .....	21
Objective basis of the system: Order of the external World, as revealed by Science .....	22
By it the selfish affections are controlled; the unselfish strengthened.....	24
Our conception of this External Order has been gradually growing from the earliest times, and is but just complete.....	26
Even where not modifiable, its influence on the character is of the greatest value .....	28
But in most cases we can modify it; and in these the knowledge of it forms the systematic basis of human action .....	31
The chief difficulty of the Positive Synthesis was to complete our conception of the External Order by extending it to Social Phenomena.....	33
By the discovery of sociological laws social questions are made paramount; and thus our subjective principle is satisfied without danger to free thought .....	37
Distinction between Abstract and Concrete laws. It is the former only that we require for the purpose before us .....	40
In our Theory of Development the required Synthesis of Abstract conceptions already exists .....	43
Therefore we are in a position to proceed at once with the work of social regeneration .....	47
Error of identifying Positivism with Atheism, Materialism, Fatalism, or Optimism. Atheism, like Theology, discusses insoluble mysteries.....	48

Materialism is due to the encroachment of the lower sciences on the domain of the higher, an error which Positivism rectifies.....	52
Nor is Positivism fatalist, since it asserts the External Order to be modifiable .....	57
The charge of Optimism applies to Theology rather than to Positivism. The Positivist judges of all historical actions relatively , but does not justify them indiscriminately .....	58
The word Positive connotes all the highest intellectual attributes, and will ultimately have a moral significance .....	60

CHAPTER II.

THE SOCIAL ASPECT OF POSITIVISM.

The relation of Positivism to the French Revolution .....	63
The negative or destructive phase of the Revolution stimulated the desire of Progress, and consequently the study of social phenomena .....	63
The constructive phase of the Revolution. The first attempts to construct failed, being based on destructive principles .....	69
Counter-revolution from 1794 to 1830 .....	71
Political stagnation between 1830 and 1848 .....	72
The present position, 1848-1850. Republicanism involves the great principle of subordinating Politics to Morals .....	74
It gives prominence to the problem of reconciling Order and Progress ...	75
It brings the metaphysical revolutionary schools into discredit .....	78
And it proves to all the necessity of a true spiritual power; a body of thinkers whose business is to study and to teach principles, holding aloof from political action .....	81
The need of a spiritual power is common to the whole Republic of Western Europe .....	84
This Republic consists of the Italian, Spanish, British, and German populations, grouped round France as their centre .....	88
Relation of Positivism to the mediæval system, to which we owe the first attempt to separate Spiritual from Temporal power .....	91
But the mediæval attempt was premature; and Positivism will renew and complete it .....	95
The Ethical system of Positivism .....	97
Subjection of Self-love to Social love is the great ethical problem. The Social state of itself favours this result; but it may be hastened by organized and conscious effort .....	98
Intermediate between Self-love and universal Benevolence are the domestic affections: filial, fraternal, conjugal, paternal .....	100
Personal virtues placed upon a social basis.....	103
Moral education consists partly of scientific demonstration of ethical truth, but still more of culture of the higher sympathies.....	105
Organization of Public Opinion .....	107
Commemoration of great men .....	108
The political motto of Positivism: Order and Progress .....	110
Progress, the development of Order.....	111
Analysis of Progress: material, physical, intellectual, and moral.....	112

	PAGE
Application of our principles to actual politics. All government must for the present be provisional.....	116
Danger of attempting political reconstruction before spiritual .....	119
Politically, what is wanted is Dictatorship, with liberty of speech and discussion .....	122
Such a dictatorship would be a step towards the separation of spiritual and temporal power .....	126
The motto of 1830; Liberty and Public Order .....	127
Liberty should be extended to Education .....	128
Order demands centralization .....	130
Intimate connection of Liberty with Order .....	132

CHAPTER III.

THE ACTION OF POSITIVISM UPON THE WORKING CLASSES.

Positivism will not for the present recommend itself to the governing classes, so much as to the People.....	134
The working man who accepts his position is favourably situated for the reception of comprehensive principles and generous sympathies .....	136
This the Convention felt; but they encouraged the People to seek political supremacy, for which they are not fit .....	140
It is only in exceptional cases that the People can be really 'sovereign'...	141
The truth involved in the expression is that the well-being of the people should be the one great object of government .....	142
The People's function is to assist the spiritual power in modifying the action of government .....	144
Their combined efforts result in the formation of Public Opinion .....	146
Public opinion involves, (1) principles of social conduct, (2) their acceptance by society at large, (3) an organ through which to enunciate them .....	148
Working men's clubs .....	152
All three conditions of Public Opinion exist, but have not yet been combined .....	158
Spontaneous tendencies of the people in a right direction. Their Communism .....	159
Its new title of Socialism.....	162
Property is in its nature social, and needs control.....	163
But Positivism rejects the Communist solution of the problem. Property is to be controlled by moral not legal agencies .....	166
Individualization of functions as necessary as co-operation .....	168
Industry requires its captains as well as War.....	169
Communism is deficient in the historical spirit .....	170
In fact, as a system, it is worthless, though prompted by noble feelings...	171
Property is a public trust, not to be interfered with legally.....	173
Inheritance favourable to its right employment.....	175
Intellect needs moral control as much as wealth .....	175
Action of organized public opinion upon Capitalists. Strikes.....	177
Public Opinion must be based upon a sound system of Education .....	181
Education has two stages; from birth to puberty, from puberty to adolescence. The first, consisting of physical and esthetic training, to be given at home .....	184

CHAPTER IV.

THE INFLUENCE OF POSITIVISM UPON WOMEN.

Women represent the affective element in our nature, as philosophers and people represent the intellectual and practical elements.....	218
Women have stood aloof from the modern movement, because of its anti-historic and destructive character .....	220
But they will sympathize with constructive tendencies; and will distinguish sound philosophy from scientific specialities.....	222
Women's position in society. Like philosophers and people, their part is not to govern, but to modify .....	224
The united action of philosophers, women, and proletaries constitutes Moral Force .....	229
Superiority of the new spiritual power to the old. Self-regarding tendencies of Catholic doctrine .....	233
The spirit of Positivism, on the contrary, is essentially social. The Heart and the Intellect mutually strengthen each other .....	235
Intellectual and moral affinities of women with Positivism .....	239
Catholicism purified love, but did not directly strengthen it.....	241
Women's influence over the working classes and their teachers .....	243
Their social influence in the salon .....	246
But the Family is their principal sphere of action.....	248

Conditions of marriage. Indissoluble monogamy.....	252
Perpetual widowhood .....	254
Woman's mission as a mother .....	257

CHAPTER V.

THE RELATION OF POSITIVISM TO ART.

Positivism when complete is as favourable to Imagination, as, when incomplete, it was unfavourable to it .....	291
Esthetic talent is for the adornment of life, not for its government .....	294
The political influence of literary men a deplorable sign and source of anarchy .....	296

Under Positivism the conditions will all be favourable. There will be fixed principles, and a nobler moral culture .....	317
Predisposing influence of Education .....	320
Relation of Art to Religion .....	322
Idealization of historical types .....	324
Art requires the highest education; but little special instruction.....	325
Artists as a class will disappear. Their function will be appropriated by the philosophic priesthood .....	327

Women's poetry .....	321
People's poetry .....	333
