

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I. PAGE 1.

1685—1708.

Birth of Handel, 1—His names, 1—His musical tendencies, 3—His father opposes them, 3—His early studies, 5—Journey to Berlin, where he appears as a prodigy, 6—Memoirs of his Life, by Mainwaring, 7—Return to Halle and new studies, 8—Collection of his musical books bequeathed to Smith, 9—He settles at Hamburg, 10—Duel with Mattheson, 11—Almira, Nero, Daphne, Florinda, 12—Intended German edition of the works of Handel, 12—Cantata on the Passion, 13—Journey to Florence, 14—Roderigo, 14—Explanations as to dates connected with the earlier part of Handel's life, 14—Hawkins to be consulted with caution, 15—Agrippina at Venice, 17—Sacred Latin music at Rome, 18—Resurrezzione, Silla, 18—Il Trionfo del Tempo, 19—Competition with Scarlatti, 20—Cardinal Ottoboni, 20.

CHAPTER II. PAGE 22.

1708—1720.

Aci e Galathea at Naples, 22—French songs, 24—Journey to Hanover, 25—Arrival in London, 26—Commencement of the Italian Opera in England, 26—Account of the different theatres in London, 26—Addison and Steele against the Italian Opera, 28—Rinaldo, 29—Addison's critique, 30—Return to Hanover, 32—Cantatas and Chamber Duets at Hanover, 34—Reappearance in England, 34—Ode for Queen Anne's Birthday, 34—Pastor Fido, Teseo, 35—Chapel-masters of the English Sovereigns, 36—Utrecht Te Deum and Jubilate, 36—Performances on the harpsichord, 37—Thomas Britton, 38—First public concerts in England, 39—Handel settles in England, 39—Water Music, 39—Amadigi, 42—Tableaux vivants in 1710, 42—Heidegger, 43—Stay at Burlington House, 44—Journey into Germany, 44—Passion, German oratorio, 45—Anecdotes of Handel and Smith, by W. Coxe, 45—Cannons, mansion of the Duke of Chandos, 48—Handel becomes chapel-master of the Duke, 48—Chandos Te Deum and Anthems, 49—Character of Handel's sacred music, 49—The so-called true style of church music, 50—Several of the Chandos Anthems reduced for the Royal Chapels, 51—Three Hymns written for Mrs. Rich, 51.

CHAPTER III. PAGE 53.

1720—1729.

Handel directs the Italian Opera for the Royal Academy of Music, 53—Another journey to Italy and Germany, 53—Annual subscriptions at the Italian Opera, 54—French comedians at the Haymarket, 55—Radamisto, edition of this work, 56—Piratical publications, 57—Handel naturalized, 58—Esther, Acis and Galatea, 59—Institution of the Sons of the Clergy, 59—The present organ of Whitechurch, in Edgeware, has been played by Handel, 60—Cannons pulled down, 60—The Duke of Chandos buys his third wife, 61—Suites de Pièces pour le Clavecin, 63—The Harmonious Blacksmith, 65—The environs of London in 1720, 66—Muzio Scavola, 67—Bononcini and Attilio Ariosti, 67—Cabal arising against Handel, 68—Swift's epigram and Carey's answer, 69—Floridante, Ottone, 69—Sig^a. Cuzzoni, 70—Giulio Cesare, 70—Tamerlane, Rodelinda, 71—Handel's Italian airs transmuted into sacred songs, 71—The evil of such adaptations, 72—Adulteration of Israel in Egypt and other oratorios, 74—Scipio, Alexander, 75—First impression of God Save the King, 75—Exploit of Senesino in Alexander, 75—Admeto, 76—The Cuzzonists and the Faustinites, 77—Sig^a. Cuzzoni sentenced to death, 78—Ricardo 1^o, 78—Coronation Anthems, 78—Siroe, 79—Tolomeo, 80—The Beggar's Opera, 81—Its popularity even to the present day, 83—The failure of the Royal Academy of Music from the date of its commencement, 84—Sad expedients, 85—The ruin of the Italian Opera attributed to the inconstant temper of the English nation, 86—Dissolution of the Royal Academy of Music, 86—Not every opera produced with fresh costumes and scenes, 87—Danger of the present costly mise-en-scène, 88—Public indifference the only cause of the Academy's dissolution, 88.

CHAPTER IV. PAGE 89.

1729—1732.

Handel takes the Italian theatre with Heidegger, 89—Songstresses performing a man's part much in vogue, 90—Lothario, Parthenope, 90—Publishing arrangements with Walsh, 90—Twenty guineas paid for each oratorio by the publisher, 91—The labour of the intellect underrated, 92—Walsh, 93—His editions uncommonly bad, 94—His chorophobia, 95—Indifference of the composers of the last century with regard to the publication of their works, 95—Handel's French correspondence, 97—Porus, 101—Character of the Italian and French operas, 101—Great Britain infested with shepherdesses as France was, 101—Ferocity of the laws, 101—The thousands of marriages enacted every night upon the stage, 102—All the operatic heroes of Handel very sleepy, 102—Ezio, 103—Failure of all the productions of Handel, 103—Esther, the first English oratorio, 104—Origin of oratorios, 107—Acted with dances in the churches, 107—Their performance without action, 108—Composed from a theatrical point of view, 109—Prohibition of their performance with action, 112—Arrangement of the orchestra, 114—Acis and Galatea, 115—Mrs. Cibber, 116—Acis sung partly in English and partly in Italian, 117—Letter of the husband of Sig^a. Strada, 118—Alchemist Music, 119—Ben Jonson's memoranda, 119—Twelve Sonatas or Solos, opera 1^a, 120—Instrumental music of Handel, 120—Six Sonatas Trios, opera 2^a, 121—Seven Sonatas Trios, opera 5^a, 121—Orlando, 122—Violetta marina, 123—The violin family, 123—Castrucci, 125—Four lyric theatres in London in 1733, 126.

CONTENTS.

xxvii

CHAPTER V. PAGE 127.

1733.

Deborah, 127—Letter of Rolli against Handel, 128—Handel and Walpole conspirators, 131—His orchestra, 132—Monster bassoons, 133—The bellowing system, 134—Handel's choruses, 135—His employment of instruments, 135—Fifty-six wind instruments in his Fireworks Music, 136—The strength of his orchestra is unknown, 136—His band uncommonly powerful, 137—He used the side-drum, 137—His MSS. never before explored, 138—He had already done for the accompaniment of The Messiah what Mozart did, 138—He husbanded his means, 139—The abuse of great orchestras, 140—All the cotemporaries of Handel reproach him with a fondness for noise, 141—Goupy's caricature, 142—Accusation of profanity, 143—Quarrel with Senesino, 144—The latter was not a model of sweetness of temper, 144—The nobility espouse the cause of Senesino, 145—Coalition against Handel, 146—Predilection of the eighteenth century for high voices, 146—Handel shared it, 147—Bononcini and the Madrigal of Lotti, 148—Dr. Green, 149—Bononcini leaves England, 155.

CHAPTER VI. PAGE 156.

1733—1737.

Athalia at a Public Act of Oxford, 156—Doctorship of music, 159—Handel's Italian artists join the coalition, 159—Journey to Italy in 1733, 159—A rival theatre opened by the coalition, with Farinelli, 160—The revolting spectacle offered by the Royal Family of England at that time, 160—MS. of pasticcios by Handel, 161—Ariadne, 162—Jests against the two rival Italian theatres, 163—Parnasso in Festa, 163—Wedding Anthem for the Princess Anne, 165—Indomitable energy displayed by Handel, 166—Hautbois Concertos, opera 3^a, 167—Fugues for the Organ, 168—Handel becomes impressario, 168—Open war between him and the nobility, 168—Arbuthnot's satire in his favour, 169—Handel at Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre, 172—Terpsichore, 172—Masques, 174—Melancholic dances, 174—Passacaille, 175—Orestes, 175—Ariodante, 175—Mlle. Sallé, 175—Artaxerxes, by Hasse, 176—Alcina, 176—Performances of organ concertos by Handel, 177—His réclames, 177—A letter of his dated 1735, 177—Presumption about the author of the poem of Saul, 177—Alexander's Feast, 178—Preface of Hamilton to Alexander's Feast, 179—His dedication of it to Handel, 180—Publication of Alexander's Feast, 181—Dryden's good opinion of his own ode, 182—St. Cecilia, 182—Atalanta, 182—The mise-en-scène of those days, 183—The Princess Augusta very fond of kneeling 183—Wedding Anthem for the Prince of Wales, 184—Fire Music, 184—Arminius, 184—Justin, 185—Il Trionfo del Tempo, Berenice, 186—Failure of Handel, 186—Ruin of the rival opera-house, 186—Farinelli himself disregarded, 187—Artistic ignorance of that epoch, 187—Confidence of Handel's creditors in him, 188—The high prices given to great singers, 189—Extravagant sacrifices of the ancients in favour of musicians, 190.

CHAPTER VII. PAGE 191.

1737—1741.

Illness and journey to Aix-la-Chapelle, 191—Faramondo, 192—Funeral Anthem, 192—George the Second and his wife, 193—Dr. Pepusch, 194—Caffarelli, 194—Xerxes, 194—An Oratorio, 194—Vauxhall and Marybone Gardens, 196—Statue erected to Handel, 197—Roubillac, 197—All the great intelligences of the age pronounce in favour of Handel, 199—His last operas engraved by subscription, 199—The family of Brunswick were all determined Handelians, 200—Organ Concertos, opera 4^o, 201—Organ performances of Handel, 202—Saul, 203—At the present day too few of the master's works are performed, 207—Israel in Egypt, 208—Italian romances intermixed in it, 209—Its radical failure, 211—Shakspeare disregarded by England in the 18th century, 212—Dryden correcting The Tempest, 213—Patriotism of Shakspeare, 214—Israel in Egypt adulterated by arrangers in 1763, 215—New adulterations committed in 1838, 217—The composer adds names of personages in the first part of Israel, as given in 1756, 218—The present popularity of such a work proves the high state of musical education in England, 218—Many instances of imitative music in Handel, 219—Similar instances in all the greatest composers, 220—The best poets have made imitative poetry, 220—All that art can produce is acceptable, 221—Handel always makes music speaking to the mind, 222—He was compared to Cicero and Demosthenes, 223—Jupiter in Argos, 224—Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, 225—Dryden on this Ode, 226—Seven Sonatas or Trios, opera 5^a, 226—Twelve Grand Concertos, opera 6^a, 226—They seem to have become public property during the lifetime of the author, 227—Handel's dwelling, 227—Porpora's David, 228—Handel's overwhelming labours, 228—L'Allegro, Il Penseroso, and Il Moderato, 229—Charles Jennens, 230—Handel's attachment to Italian operas, 232—Imeneo and Deidamia, 233—His annual performances for the decayed musicians, 233—His playbills torn down by his enemies, 235—His prospect of leaving England, 235—Others make their market of his works, 235—He renounces Italian operas, 236—Lord Middlesex reopens the Italian Theatre, 236—His supporters employ lawyers from the Bear Gardens, 236—Lord Middlesex retires from business, 237—Failure of Dr. Croza, his successor, 237—Italian Opera in England less a taste than a fashion, 238.

CONTENTS.

xxix

CHAPTER VIII. PAGE 239.

1741—1742.

Handel's cruel position, 239—Mr. Townsend and Mr. Finlayson, 239—Aristocratic composition of the Academy of Music at Dublin, 239—The Irish Society for the Benefit of Prisoners for Debt, 240—The calendar, old and new style, 240—Verses and opinion of Pope on Handel, 241—Handel at Chester, 241—Arrival at Dublin, 242—Subscription Concerts there, 243—Handel's letter from Dublin, 244—Penelope by Galuppi, 245—List of performances at Dublin, 246—First advertisement of The Messiah, 247—The rehearsal, 247—The first performance, 248—Mrs. Cibber in The Messiah, 249—The fashion of hoops, 249—Messiah said to have failed in London in 1741, 250—Proofs that it was not given there before 1743, 251—Tale about the Hallelujah, 253—People who do not listen to the Amen finale, 253—Mainwaring, 254—Memoranda upon the MS., 255—Handel enjoys some repose in Dublin, 256—Forest Music, 256—First performance of The Messiah in London, 257—Called "A Sacred Oratorio," 257—Handel defended against the accusation of profanation, 258—The newspapers of the eighteenth century had no artistic criticism, 258—Origin of the custom of rising during the Hallelujah, 259—Unwarrantable alterations in some pieces of The Messiah, 260—The power of custom in England, 260—The Sacred Harmonic Society has broken through the bonds of a bad custom, 260—The new passion for contrast between pianissimo and fortissimo, 261—Coolness shown by cotemporaries towards The Messiah, 262—Its success dates only from 1750, 262—The author of the libretto not satisfied with the music, 263—This superhuman work written in twenty-three days, 263—Phenomenon in the productions of men of genius, 263—Five different versions of the air "How beautiful," 264—Four choruses drawn from two chamber duets, 263—Fifty Sermons preached on the oratorio, 265—Its popularity, 266—Unknown only in France, 267—It contributes to all kinds of charities, 267—Handel gave it this direction, 267—The Foundling Hospital, 267—Performances of Messiah for this Institution, 268—Handel gives them a copy of the score, 270—It brought into their funds £10,300, 271—Handel gave also a copy to the Charitable Musical Society of Dublin, 271—The first book of "Songs in The Messiah" not printed before 1763, 273—First entire edition in 1768, 273—It has now reached forty-four editions, 274—Printed handbooks of it, 275.

CHAPTER IX. PAGE 276.

1742—1752.

Letter of Handel as to his prospects, 276—His influence on the musical taste of Ireland, 277—He regrets the Italian Opera, 277—Samson, 278—Publication of, 279—Eulogium of Handel by the author of the words, 280—Copyist's bill, 280—The singer Beard and his marriage, 281—Dettingen Te Deum and Anthem, 283—Handel wrote a great deal for the trumpet, 283—Handel accused of plagiarism, 284—Dr. Crotch, 285—Praise of the composer by Miller, the author of Joseph, 286—Semele, 287—Correspondence of Handel on Belshazzar, 288—Announced under the name of Belteshazzar, 290—Allegro postillions, 290—Hercules, 290—Advertisement of twenty-four performances by subscription, 291—Handel obliged to stop on the sixteenth, 292—Opposition to his entertainments, 292—The ladies of quality against him, 293—Russell and his puppet-show, 293—Horace Walpole laughs at the music of Handel, 294—“The Roast Beef of Old England,” 294—Handel paid his performers generously, 295—His second failure, 295—Occasional Oratorio is not a compilation, 295—Analysis of it, 296—“O liberty, thou choicest treasure,” taken from Occasional Oratorio, 298—“Rule Britannia,” made out of music by Handel, 299—Date of this song, 299—Dr. Morrell, 299—“God save the King” is by Dr. John Bull, 300—Explanations about the title of Occasional Oratorio, 301—This work given only to make good the subscriptions of the preceding year, 302—Judas Macchabæus, 303—Secondary place of the poem in the collaboration of the poet and the composer, 303—Dedication of Judas Macchabæus to the Duke of Cumberland, 304—The Jews contribute to the popularity of this oratorio, 304—“See the conquering hero,” taken from Joshua, 304—Said to be intended to please the vulgar, 305—Not performed as it ought to be, 306—La Caduta de' Giganti by Glück, 306—Lucius Verus, 306—Otho given by the nobility's theatre, 307—Alessandro, as it was performed by Lord Middlesex, 308—M. Azais, 308—Alexander Bælus, 308—Joshua, 309—The flourish of warlike instruments, 309—Susannah, 310—Solomon, 311—Performance of the oratorios during the lifetime of Handel, 311—Peculiarity of the MS. of Solomon, 312—Fireworks Music, 312—Handel always careful of varying the effects of sonority, 313—The rehearsal of this work at Vauxhall Gardens, 314—Foundling Hospital Anthem, 315—Theodora, 315—Anecdotes about Theodora, 316—Last visit to Germany, 317—Choice of Hercules made out of Alceste, 318—Alceste not performed, 319.

CHAPTER X. PAGE 320.

1752—1759.

Jephtha, 320—First attack of gutta serena, 321—Blindness, 321—In the last century the first violin was leader of the orchestra, 322—Handel requires Smith to assist him in the performance of his oratorios, 322—Handel conducts his entertainments in spite of his blindness, 323—John Stanley, 323—Was Handel totally blind? 324—A conversation with him, 326—Colley Cibber, 326—Triumph of Time and Truth, 331—Handel masters age and infirmities, 331—His last performances, 332—His death, 332—An acrostic the only homage paid him by the newspapers, 333—Last manifestation of old hatreds, 333—All hostilities stilled, 334—Public homage by Garrick to Handel, 335—Large profits from 1750 to 1759, 335—The genius of Handel universally recognized, 336—His music performed everywhere in 1751, 336—Confections of it under a thousand different forms, 337—Works of his performed in 1759, 337—Smith and Stanley continue to give his oratorios for many years, 338—Pasticcio oratorios made out of his compositions, 338—The oratorio is now an English indigenous composition, 339—Emmanuel by Mr. Leslie, 339.

CONTENTS.

xxxī

CHAPTER XI. PAGE 340.

Handel's will, 340—Inventory of his household goods, 344—Handel's strange pre-occupation about his future glory, 346—New proof of his admirable honesty, 346—His funeral, 347—His monument at Westminster Abbey, 347—The date of his birth to be corrected on it, 348—Commemoration of 1784, 348—Programme of it, 349—Account of it by Burney, 350—The devotees blame the selection of Westminster Abbey to hold it in, 350—Their scruples prevail in 1836, 351—Clergymen assisting in the execution of the festival in the last century, 351—Increasing popularity of Handel after the Commemoration, 352—Smith gives his MSS. to George III., 352—"If I were the Queen," what I would do for this collection, 353—Harpsichord of Handel, 353—Marble busts of him by Roubiliac, 354—His head modelled after death, 355—Portraits by Denner, by Wolfand, and Hudson, 356—by Grafoni, 357—by Thornhill and by Kite, 358.

CHAPTER XII. PAGE 359.

The personal appearance of Handel, 359—He was extremely witty, 360—But inoffensive, 361—Very reserved, 362—Very absent, 363—His religious sentiments, 363—His liberality, 364—His contributions to the Society of Decayed Musicians, 364—Names of the founders of this society, 364—He was one of the benefactors of the Foundling Hospital, 365—His impatience of rivalry, 366—Refuses to be dependent on any one, 367—How bad Haydn was treated, 368—Mozart at table with valets, 368—Handel's dedication of Radamisto to the king, 369—Haym's dedication of Giulio Cesare to the Princess of Wales, 370—Handel's elevation of mind, 371—What was said about his noble character by all his cotemporaries, 372—A socialist by anticipation, 373—Violence of temper, 374—He repaired his faults frankly, 374—The grossness of his language, 375—Licentiousness of conversation at that time, 375—His impetuosity of temper would not make allowances for anybody, 376—Scene of violence, 377—His musical impressionability, 377—He had no habits, 378—The confusion of tongues in his MSS., 379—Too fond of good cheer, 379—His sentiments of affection not very strongly developed, 380—Love affairs, 381—He lived a retired life, 382—Connoisseur of pictures, 382—Musical genius more fertile than literary genius, 382—Handel exceedingly fruitful, 383—Examples of his astonishing powers of labour, 383—His celerity of composition, 385—Glück producing in grief, 385—Handel constantly perfecting his works, 386—Grandeur, the distinctive characteristic of his style, 387—The power of his choruses, 387—His versatility, 389—A great painter in words, 390—His works full of local colour, 391—He excels in recitatives, 392—He is constantly clear and natural, 392—His instrumental music as beautiful as his vocal music, 393—What Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven said of him, 394—Beethoven's dying request to bring the works of Handel to his chamber, 395—Handel as a performer, 395

—As a singer, 397—The keys of his harpsichord hollowed by his incessant practice, 397—He had an indirect part in the great events of his century, 397—All the serious English music is Handelian, 398—He upheld the dignity of art to the highest standard, 398.

APPENDIX. PAGE 401.

The Harmonious Blacksmith: the blacksmith has nothing to do with that piece, 403—Rolli's libel is political, 404—The clarinet used by Handel, 404—Pasticcios given by Handel, 406—The state of music in England: the English people much more musical than they are believed to be on the Continent, and the forthcoming Handelian Festival at the Crystal Palace, organized by the Sacred Harmonic Society, 407—Handel's house, 420—"How beautiful," a fifth version of it, 421—Prices of places, 422—Israel in Egypt and The Magnificat, 423—List of Handel's Works, 427.

INDEX 431