

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

VOL. I.

PART I.

LEGENDARY GREECE.

CHAPTER I.

Legends respecting the Gods.

Opening of the mythical world.—How the mythes are to be told.—Allegory rarely admissible.—Zeus—foremost in Grecian conception.—The gods—how conceived: human type enlarged.—Past history of the gods fitted on to present conceptions.—Chaos.—Gæa and Uranos.—Uranos disabled.—Kronos and the Titans.—Kronos overreached. Birth and safety of Zeus and his brethren.—Other deities.—Ambitious schemes of Zeus.—Victory of Zeus and his brethren over Kronos and the Titans.—Typhôeus.—Dynasty of Zeus.—His offspring.—General distribution of the divine race.—Hesiodic theogony—its authority.—Points of difference between Homer and Hesiod.—Homeric Zeus.—Amplified theogony of Zeus.—Hesiodic mythes traceable to Crête and Delphi.—Orphic theogony.—Zeus and Phanês.—Zagreus.—Comparison of Hesiod and Orpheus.—Influence of foreign religions upon Greece—Especially in regard to the worship of Démêtêr and Dionysos.—Purification for homicide unknown to Homer.—New and peculiar religious rites.—Circulated by voluntary teachers and promising special blessings.—Epimenidês, Sibylla, Bakis.—Principal mysteries of Greece.—Ecstatic rites introduced from Asia 700–500 B.C.—Connected with the worship of Dionysos.—Thracian and Egyptian influence upon Greece.—Encouragement to mystic legends.—Me-

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

xxii

CONTENTS.

Page

lampus the earliest name as teacher of the Dionysiac rites.—Orphic sect, a variety of the Dionysiac mystics.—Contrast of the mysteries with the Homeric Hymns.—Hymn to Dionysos.—Alteration of the primitive Grecian idea of Dionysos.—Asiatic frenzy grafted on the joviality of the Grecian Dionysia.—Eleusinian mysteries.—Homeric Hymn to Dêmêtêr.—Temple of Eleusis, built by order of Dêmêtêr for her residence.—Dêmêtêr prescribes the mystic ritual of Eleusis.—Homeric Hymn a sacred Eleusinian record, explanatory of the details of divine service.—Importance of the mysteries to the town of Eleusis.—Strong hold of the legend upon Eleusinian feelings.—Different legends respecting Dêmêtêr elsewhere.—Expansion of the legends.—Hellenic importance of Dêmêtêr.—Legends of Apollo.—Delian Apollo.—Pythian Apollo.—Foundation legends of the Delphian oracle.—They served the purpose of historical explanation.—Extended worship of Apollo.—Multifarious local legends respecting Apollo.—Festivals and Agônes.—State of mind and circumstances out of which Grecian mythes arose.—Discrepancies in the legends little noticed.—Aphroditê.—Athênê.—Artemis.—Poseidôn.—Stories of temporary servitude imposed on gods.—Hêrê.—Hêphaestos.—Hestia.—Hermês.—Hermês inventor of the lyre.—Bargain between Hermês and Apollo.—Expository value of the Hymn.—Zeus.—Mythes arising out of the religious ceremonies.—Small part of the animal sacrificed.—Promêtheus had outwitted Zeus.—Gods, heroes, and men, appear together in the mythes	1-87
---	------

CHAPTER II.

Legends relating to Heroes and Men.

Races of men as they appear in the Hesiodic "Works and Days."—The Golden.—The Silver.—The Brazen.—The Heroic.—The Iron.—Different both from the Theogony and from Homer.—Explanation of this difference.—Ethical vein of sentiment.—Intersected by the mythical.—The "Works and Days," earliest didactic poem.—First introduction of dæmons.—Changes in the idea of dæmons.—Employed in attacks on the pagan faith.—Functions of the Hesiodic dæmons.—Personal feeling which pervades the "Works and Days."—Probable age of the poem	88-100
--	--------

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xiii

Page

CHAPTER III.

Legend of the Iapetids.

Iapetids in Hesiod.—Promêtheus and Epimêtheus.—Counter-manceuvring of Promêtheus and Zeus.—Pandôra.—Pandôra in the Theogony.—General feeling of the poet.—Man wretched, but Zeus not to blame.—Mischiefs arising from women.—Punishment of Promêtheus.—The Promêtheus of Æschylus.—Locality in which Promêtheus was confined... 101-109

CHAPTER IV.

Heroic Legends.—Genealogy of Argus.

Structure and purposes of Grecian genealogies.—To connect the Grecian community with their common god.—Lower members of the genealogy historical—higher members non-historical.—The non-historical portion equally believed, and most valued by the Greeks.—Number of such genealogies—pervading every fraction of Greeks.—Argeian genealogy.—Inachos.—Phorôneus.—Argos Panoptés.—Iô.—Romance of Iô historicised by Persians and Phœnicians.—Legendary abductions of heroines adapted to the feelings prevalent during the Persian war.—Danaos and the Danaïdes.—Acrisios and Proëtos.—The Proëtides cured of frenzy by Melampus.—Acrisios, Danaë and Zeus.—Perseus and the Gorgons.—Foundation of Mycênæ—commencement of Perseid dynasty.—Amphitryôn, Alcmênê, Sthenelos.—Zeus and Alcmênê.—Birth of Hêrklês.—Homeric legend of his birth: its expository value.—The Hêrkleids expelled.—Their recovery of Peloponnêsus and establishment in Argos, Sparta, and Messênia 110-131

CHAPTER V.

Deucaliôn, Hellên, and Sons of Hellên.

Deucaliôn, son of Prometheus.—Phthiôtis: his permanent seat.—General deluge.—Salvation of Deucaliôn and Pyrrha.—Belief in this deluge throughout Greece.—Hellên and Amphiktyôn.—Sons of Hellên: Dôrus, Xuthus, Æolus.—Amphiktyonic assembly.—Common solemnities and games.—Division of Hellas: Æolians, Dôrians, Iônians.—Large extent of Dôris implied in this genealogy.—This form of the legend harmonises with the great establishments of the historical Dôrians.—Achæus—purpose which his name serves in the legend.—Genealogical diversities 132-144

CHAPTER VI.

The Æolids, or Sons and Daughters of Æolus.

Legends of Greece, originally isolated, afterwards thrown into series.—Æolus.—His seven sons and five daughters.—1. First Æolid line—Salmôneus, Tyrô.—Pelias and Nêleus.—Pêrô, Bias, and Melampus.—Periklymenos.—Nestor and his exploits.—Nêleids down to Codrus.—Second Æolid line—Krêtheus.—Admêtus and Alcêstis.—Pêleus and the wife of Acastus.—Pelias and Jasôn.—Jasôn and Mèdeia.—Mèdeia at Corinth.—Third Æolid line—Sisyphus.—Corinthian genealogy of Eumêlus.—Coalescence of different legends about Mèdeia and Sisyphus.—Fourth Æolid line—Athamas.—Phryxus and Hellê.—Inô and Palêmôn—Isthmian games.—Local root of the legend of Athamas.—Traces of ancient human sacrifices.—Athamas in the district near Orchomenos.—Eteoclês—festival of the Charîtêsia.—Foundation and greatness of Orchomenos.—Overthrow by Hêrâklês and the Thebans.—Trophônîus and Agamêdês.—Ascalaphos and Ialmenos.—Discrepancies in the Orchomenian genealogy.—Probable inferences as to the ante-historical Orchomenos.—Its early wealth and industry.—Emissaries of the lake Côpais.—Old Amphiktyony at Calauria.—Orchomenos and Thebês.—Alcyonê and Cêyx.—Canacê.—the Alôids.—Calycé.—Elis and Ætôlia.—Eleian genealogy.—Augeas.—The Molionid brothers.—Variations in the Eleian genealogy.—Ætôlian genealogy.—Cêneus, Meleager, Tydeus.—Legend of Meleager in Homer.—How altered by the poets after Homer.—Althæa and the burning brand.—Grand Calydonian boar-hunt—Atalanta.—Relics of the boar long preserved at Tegea.—Atalanta vanquished in the race by stratagem.—Deianeira.—Death of Hêrâklês.—Tydeus—Old age of Cêneus.—Discrepant genealogies 145–209

CHAPTER VII.

The Pelopids.

Misfortunes and celebrity of the Pelopids.—Pelops—eponym of Peloponnêsus.—Deduction of the sceptre of Pelops.—Kingly attributes of the family.—Homeric Pelops.—Lydia, Pisa, &c., post-Homeric additions.—Tantalus.—Niobê.—Pelops and CEnomaus, king of Pisa.—Chariot victory of

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xxv

Page

Pelops—his principality at Pisa.—Atreus, Thyestês, Chry-sippus.—Family horrors among the Pelopids.—Agamemnôn and Menelaus.—Orestês.—The goddess Hêrê and My-cênæ.—Legendary importance of Mycênæ.—Its decline coincident with the rise of Argos and Sparta.—Agamemnôn and Orestês transferred to Sparta 210-229

CHAPTER VIII.

Laconian and Messenian Genealogies.

Lelex—autochthonous in Lacônia.—Tyndareus and Lêda.—
Offspring of Leda—1. Castôr, Timandra, Clytæmnêstra, 2. Pollux, Helen.—Castôr and Pollux.—Legend of the Attic Dekeleia.—Idas and Lynceus.—Great functions and power of the Dioscuri.—Messênian genealogy.—Periêres
—Idas and Marpêssa 230-237

CHAPTER IX.

Arcadian Genealogy.

Pelasgus.—Lycaôn and his fifty sons.—Legend of Lycaôn—ferocity punished by the Gods.—Deep religious faith of Pausanias.—His view of past and present world.—Kallistô and Arcas.—Azan, Apheidas, Elatus.—Aleus, Augê, Telephus.—Ancæus—Echemus.—Echemus kills Hyllus.— Hêracleids repelled from Peloponnêsus.—Corônis and Asklêpius.—Extended worship of Asklêpius—numerous legends.—Machaôn and Podaleirius.—Numerous Asklêpiads, or descendants from Asklêpius.—Temples of Asklêpius—sick persons healed there 238-251

CHAPTER X.

Æacus and his Descendants.—Ægina, Salamis and Phthia.

Æacus—son of Zeus and Ægina.—Offspring of Æacus—Pêleus, Telamôn, Phôcus.—Prayers of Æacus—procure relief for Greece.—Phôcus killed by Pêleus and Telamôn.—Telamôn, banished, goes to Salamis.—Pêleus—goes to Phthia—his marriage with Thetis.—Neoptolemus.—Ajax, his son Philæus the eponymous hero of a dême in Attica.—Teu-krus banished, settles in Cyprus.—Diffusion of the Æacid genealogy 252-261

CHAPTER XI.

Attic Legends and Genealogies.

Erechtheus—autochthonous.—Attic legends—originally from different roots—each deme had its own.—Little noticed by the old epic poets.—Cecrops.—Kranæus—Pandiôn.—Daughters of Pandiôn—Procnê, Philomêla. Legend of Têreus.—Daughters of Erechtheus—Procris.—Creüsa.—Oreithyia, the wife of Boreas.—Prayers of the Athenians to Boreas—his gracious help in their danger.—Erechtheus and Eumolpus.—Voluntary self-sacrifice of the three daughters of Erechtheus.—Creüsa and Iôn.—Sons of Pandiôn—Ægeus, &c.—Thêseus.—His legendary character refined.—Plutarch—his way of handling the matter of legend.—Legend of the Amazons.—Its antiquity and prevalence.—Glorious achievements of the Amazons.—Their ubiquity.—Universally received as a portion of the Greek past.—Amazons produced as present by the historians of Alexander.—Conflict of faith and reason in the historical critics..... 262–298

CHAPTER XII.

Cretan Legends.—Minôs and his Family.

Minôs and Rhadamanthus, sons of Zeus.—Europê.—Pasiphaë and the Minôtaur.—Scylla and Nisus.—Death of Androgeos, and anger of Minôs against Athens.—Athenian victims for the Minôtaur.—Self-devotion of Thêseus—he kills the Minôtaur.—Athenian commemorative ceremonies.—Family of Minôs.—Minôs and Dædalus—flight of the latter to Sicily.—Minôs goes to retake him, but is killed.—Semi-Crêtan settlements elsewhere—connected with this voyage of Minôs.—Sufferings of the Crêtans afterwards from the wrath of Minôs.—Portrait of Minos—how varied.—Affinity between Crête and Asia Minor 299–315

CHAPTER XIII.

Argonautic Expedition.

Ship Argô in the Odyssey.—In Hesiod and Eumêlus.—Jasôn and his heroic companions.—Lêmnus.—Adventures at Cyzicus, in Bithynia, &c. Hêraklês and Hylas. Phineus.—Dangers of the Symplêgades.—Arrival at Colchis.—Condi-

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xxvii

Page

tions imposed by Ætêts as the price of the golden fleece.— Perfidy of Ætêts—flight of the Argonauts and Mèdeia with the fleece.—Pursuit of Ætêts—the Argonauts saved by Mèdeia.—Return of the Argonauts—circuitous and perilous.—Numerous and wide-spread monuments referring to the voyage.—Argonautic legend generally.—Fabulous geography—gradually modified as real geographical knowledge increased.—Transposition of epical localities.—How and when the Argonautic voyage became attached to Colchis.— Ætêts and Circê.—Return of the Argonauts—different versions.—Continued faith in the voyage—basis of truth determined by Strabo 316-348

CHAPTER XIV.

Legends of Thêbes.

Abundant legends of Thêbes.—Amphiôn and Zethus, Homeric founders of Cadmus and Bœôtus—both distinct legends.
—Thêbes.—How Thêbes was founded by Cadmus.—Five primitive families at Thêbes, called Sparti.—The four daughters of Cadmus—1. Inô.—2. Semelê.—3. Autonôê and her son Actæôn.—4. Agavê and her son Pentheus.—
He resists the god Dionysus—his miserable end.—Labdakus, Antiopê, Amphiôn and Zêthus.—Laius—Ædipus—Legendary celebrity of Ædipus and his family.—The Sphinx.—Eteoclês and Polynicês.—Old epic poems on the sieges of Thêbes 349-365

Sieges of Thêbes.

Curse pronounced by the devoted Ædipus upon his sons.—
Novelties introduced by Sophoclês.—Death of Ædipus—quarrel of Eteoclês and Polynicês for the sceptre.—Poly-nicês retires to Argos—aid given to him by Adrastus.—Amphiaräus and Eriphylê.—Seven chiefs of the army against Thêbes.—Defeat of the Thêbans in the field—heroic devotion of Menœkeus.—Single combat of Eteoclês and Poly-nicês, in which both perish.—Repulse and destruction of the Argeian chiefs—all except Adrastus. Amphiaräus is swallowed up in the earth.—Creôn, king of Thêbes, forbids the burial of Polynicês and the other fallen Argeian chiefs.
—Devotion and death of Antigonê.—The Athenians interfere to procure the interment of the fallen chiefs.—Second siege of Thêbes by Adrastus with the Epigoni, or sons of

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

xxviii

CONTENTS.

Page

those slain in the first.—Victory of the Epigoni—capture of Thêbes.—Worship of Adrastus at Sicyôn—how abrogated by Cleisthenês.—Alcmæôn—his matricide and punishment.—Fatal necklace of Eriphylê	366-385
--	---------

CHAPTER XV.

Legend of Troy.

Great extent and variety of the tale of Troy.—Dardanus, son of Zeus.—Ilus, founder of Ilium.—Walls of Ilium built by Poseidôn.—Capture of Ilium by Hêraklês.—Priam and his offspring.—Paris—his judgement on the three goddesses.—Carries off Helen from Sparta.—Expedition of the Greeks to recover her.—Heroes from all parts of Greece combined under Agamemnôn.—Achilles and Odysseus.—The Grecian host mistakes Teuthrania for Troy—Telephus.—Detention of the Greeks at Aulis—Agamemnôn and Iphigeneia.—First success of the Greeks on landing near Troy.—Briséis awarded to Achilles.—Palamêdês—his genius and treacherous death.—Epic chronology—historicised.—Period of the Homeric Iliad. Hectôr killed by Achilles.—New allies of Troy—Penthesileia.—Memnôn—killed by Achilles.—Death of Achilles.—Funeral games celebrated in honour of him—Quarrel about his panoply—Odysseus prevails and Ajax kills himself.—Philoctêtês and Neoptolemus.—Capture of the Palladium.—The wooden horse.—Destruction of Troy.—Distribution of the captives among the victors.—Helen restored to Menelaus—lives in dignity at Sparta—passes to a happy immortality.—Blindness and cure of the poet Stesichorus—alteration of the legend about Helen.—Egyptian tale about Helen—tendency to historicise.—Return of the Greeks from Troy.—Their sufferings—anger of the gods.—Wanderings of the heroes in all directions.—Memorials of them throughout the Grecian world.—Odysseus—his final adventures and death.—Æneas and his descendants.—Different stories about Æneas.—Æneadæ at Skêpsis.—Ubiquity of Æneas.—Antenôr.—Tale of Troy—its magnitude and discrepancies.—Trojan war—essentially legendary—its importance as an item in Grecian national faith.—Basis of history for it—possible, and nothing more.—Historicising innovations—Dio Chrysostom.—Historical Ilium.—Generally received and visited as the town of Priam. Respect shown to it by Alexander.—Successors of Alexan-

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xxix

Page

der—foundation of Alexandria Trôas.—The Romans—treat Ilium with marked respect.—Mythical legitimacy of Ilium—first called in question by Démétrius of Skêpsis and Hestiaëa.—Supposed Old Ilium, or real Troy, distinguished from New Ilium.—Strabo alone believes in Old Ilium as the real Troy—other authors continue in the old faith—the moderns follow Strabo.—The mythical faith not shaken by topographical impossibilities.—Historical Trôas and the Teukrians.—Æolic Greeks in the Trôad—the whole territory gradually Æolised.—Old date, and long prevalence of the worship of Apollo Sminthius.—Asiatic customs and religion—blended with Hellenic.—Sibylline prophecies.—Settlements from Milêtus, Mitylênê and Athens 386–459

CHAPTER XVI.

Grecian Mythes, as understood, felt and interpreted by the Greeks themselves.

The mythes formed the entire mental stock of the early Greeks.—State of mind out of which they arose.—Tendency to universal personification.—Absence of positive knowledge—supplied by personifying faith.—Multitude and variety of quasi-human personages.—What we read as poetical fancies, were to the Greeks serious realities.—The gods and heroes—their chief agency cast back into the past, and embodied in the mythes.—Marked and manifold types of the Homeric gods.—Stimulus which they afforded to the mythopœic faculty.—Easy faith in popular and plausible stories.—Poets—receive their matter from the divine inspiration of the Muse.—Meaning of the word mythe—original—altered.—Matter of actual history—uninteresting to early Greeks.—Mythical faith and religious point of view—paramount in the Homeric age.—Gradual development of the scientific point of view—its opposition to the religious.—Mythopœic age—anterior to this dissent.—Expansive force of Grecian intellect.—Transition towards positive and present fact.—The poet becomes the organ of present time instead of past.—Iambic, elegiac, and lyric poets.—Influence of the opening of Egypt to Grecian commerce, B.C. 660.—Progress—historical, geographical, social,—from that period to B.C. 500.—Altered standard of judgement, ethical and intellectual.—Commencement of physical science—Thalês, Xenophanês, Pythagoras.—Impersonal nature con-

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

xxx

CONTENTS.

Page

ceived as an object of study.—Opposition between scientific method and the religious feeling of the multitude.—How dealt with by different philosophers.—Socratès.—Hippocratès.—Anaxagoras.—Contrasted with Grecian religious belief.—Treatment of Socratès by the Athenians.—Scission between the superior men and the multitude—important in reference to the mythes.—The mythes accommodated to a new tone of feeling and judgement.—The poets and logographers.—Pindar.—Tragic poets.—Æschylus and Sophoclès.—Tendencies of Æschylus in regard to the old legends.—He maintains undiminished the grandeur of the mythical world.—Euripidès—accused of vulgarising the mythical heroes, and of introducing exaggerated pathos, refinement and rhetoric.—The logographers—Pherecydès, &c.—Hecatæus—the mythes rationalised.—The historians—Herodotus.—Earnest piety of Herodotus—his mystic reserve.—His views of the mythical world.—His defence for Egypt and Egyptian statements.—His general faith in the mythical heroes and eponyms—yet combined with scepticism as to matters of fact.—His remarks upon the miraculous foundation of the oracle at Dôdôna.—His remarks upon Melampus and his prophetic powers.—His remarks upon the Thessalian legend of Tempé.—Allegorical interpretation of the mythes—more and more esteemed and applied.—Divine legends allegorised.—Heroic legends historicised.—Limits to this interpreting process.—Distinction between gods and dæmons—altered and widened by Empedoclès.—Admission of dæmons as partially evil beings—effect of such admission.—Semi-historical and allegorical interpretation of the mythes compared.—The former essentially futile—the latter sometimes trustworthy.—Some positive certificate indispensable as a constituent of historical proof—mere popular faith insufficient.—Mistake of ascribing to an unrecording age the historical sense of modern times.—Matter of tradition uncertified from the beginning.—Fictitious matter of tradition does not imply fraud or imposture.—Plausible fiction often generated and accredited by the mere force of strong and common sentiment, even in times of instruction.—Allegorical theory of the mythes—traced by some up to an ancient priestly caste.—Real import of the mythes supposed to be preserved in the religious mysteries.—Supposed ancient meaning is really a modern interpretation.—Triple theology of the pagan world.—Treatment and use of the mythes according to Plato.—His views as to

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-00950-8 - A History of Greece, Volume 1

George Grote

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xxxi

Page

the necessity and use of fiction.—He deals with the mythes as expressions of feeling and imagination—sustained by religious faith, and not by any positive basis.—Grecian antiquity essentially a religious conception.—Application of chronological calculation divests it of this character.—Mythical genealogies all of one class, and all on a level in respect to evidence.—Grecian and Egyptian genealogies.—Value of each is purely subjective, having especial reference to the faith of the people.—Gods and men undistinguishable in Grecian antiquity.—General recapitulation.—General public of Greece—familiar with their local mythes, careless of recent history.—Religious festivals—their commemorative influence.—Variety and universality of mythical relics.—The mythes in their bearing on Grecian art.—Tendency of works of art to intensify the mythical faith 460–612

CHAPTER XVII.

The Grecian Mythical Vein compared with that of Modern Europe.

Mîthos—Sage—an universal manifestation of the human mind.—Analogy of the Germans and Celts with the Greeks.—Differences between them.—Grecian poetry matchless.—Grecian progress self-operated.—German progress brought about by violent influences from without.—Operation of the Roman civilization and of Christianity upon the primitive German mythes.—Alteration in the mythical genealogies—Odin and the other gods degraded into men.—Grecian Paganism—what would have been the case, if it had been supplanted by Christianity in 500 B.C.—Saxo Grammaticus and Snorro Sturleson contrasted with Pherecydês and Helianicus.—Mythopœic tendencies in modern Europe still subsisting, but forced into a new channel. 1. Sainly ideal; 2. Chivalrous ideal.—Legends of the Saints—their analogy with the Homeric theology.—Chivalrous ideal—Romances of Charlemagne and Arthur.—Accepted as realities of the fore-time.—Teutonic and Scandinavian epic—its analogy with the Grecian.—Heroic character and self-expanding subject common to both.—Points of distinction between the two—epic of the middle ages neither stood so completely alone, nor was so closely interwoven with religion, as the Grecian.—History of England—how conceived down to the seventeenth century—began with Brute the Trojan.—Earnest and tenacious faith manifested in the defence of this early history.—Judgement of Milton.—Standard of historical evidence—raised in regard to England—not raised in regard to Greece.—Milton's way of dealing with the British fabulous history objectionable.—Two ways open of dealing with the Grecian mythes: 1. to omit them; or 2. to recount them as mythes. Reasons for preferring the latter.—Triple partition of past time by Varro. 613–648

ERRATUM.

Vol. I. p. 615, six lines from the bottom, for word read world.

DIRECTIONS TO THE BINDER.

At the end of Vol. I. place
 The Map of Northern Greece.

- At the end of Vol. II. place
1. The Map of Peloponnesus.
 2. The Map of Bœotia, with special reference to the Lake Kôpäis.