 Calvina iii 133. Borghesi v 196–7 Iunia Calvina sister of L. Silanus son-in-law of Claudius (Sen. apoc. 8. Tac. ann. xii 4), daughter-in-law of L. Vitellius the censor (Tac. l. c.), i.e. wife of his son Lucius consul with his other son Aulus (afterwards emperor) A.D. 48. By him she must have been divorced, as at the end of his life his wife was Trifaria (Tac. h. ii 63). A.D. 48 Agrippina, who had resolved on the destruction of her brother then praetor, accused her of incest with him, a charge countenanced by Iuv. but discredited by Tacitus (xii 4, who calls Calvina decora et procaz) and as it seems by Seneca (l. c.
 Claudius, as far as in him lay, condemned Iuppiter for incest. Silvanum enim gene-rum suum occidit. propter quid? soro-rem suam, festivissimam omnium pucllarum, quam omnes Venerem vocarent, maluit Iunonem vocare. The scholiast's statement ('praetoris cuiusdam soror, quae se occidit tamquam infamis in fratre temporibus Claudii') is contradicted by Tac.

 513–6 cites a law of Augustus (DCass. II 17 § 2 B. C. 30) that no Egyptian should be a senator, first broken through in the time of Caracalla (ib. § 3. lxxvi 5 § 5 A. D. 203 where Aelius Cocranus is named as the first Egyptian senator). The schol. on iv 1 'factus est magister equitum Neronis.' Now Pomponius dig. i 2 2 § 19 says of the magistris equitum *quod officium fere tale erat, quale hodie praefectorum praetorio.
 dig. i 11 § 1 ad similitudinem magistrorum equitum praefecti praetorio a principibus electi sunt.* 10. Lydus i 14 says the Caesars gave to the magister equitum the name praefectus praetorio (ib. ii 6 he notes the slight change from ἑπάρχος to ἐπαρχος). Now Iuv. iv 31 calls Crispinus purpureus scurra palatii and Lydus (ii 13) says that one of the badges of the praefecti praetorio was a μανδύη or chlamys of purple. Iuv. iv 32 further calls him princeps equitum (see n. there. Hdn. v 7 § 3 Elagabalus placed an actor over the equestrian order.
 DCass. lxxix 4 § 1 gives the name Euty-chianus Κωμαίων and the office as praefectus praetorio. cf. Lamprid. Hellog. 12.
 Fronto also ep. ad Ant. Plum 3 p. 165 Naber calls Marcus Turbo Hadrian's praef. praet. equestris ordinis primarius).
 Now there were two praefecti praetorio (DCass. lxxvii 15 § 2), one of whom (Iuv. iv 111–2 n.) was Cornelius Fuscus. The other will be Crispinus. This explains Mart. vii 99, viii 48 I where the Tyria abolla (cf.
 2 togam) is military uniform. Again, the praefecti praetorio appointed soldiers to their field of labour; if Crispinus sent Iuv. to Egypt, the poet's hatred of him is explained.

Pompeius iv 110. Borghesi oeuvres v 524–6 identifies him with Cn. Pompeius Ferrox Licinianus cos. (fn an unknown year, probably under Domitian) with C. Pomponius Rufus (Gruter 67 3). He conjectures that in Sidon. (ep. v 7 cited on i 35) we should read Parthenus, Licinius, and that Licinius is a cognomen, as the six names foregoing are, and shews that Messala and Messallinus, Rufus and Rufinus, Clemens, Clementinus and Clementianus, are often interchanged in inscriptions; why not then Licinius with Licinianus? If so 'cosa vieta di sospettare che il console Pompeo Licin-iano sia il proceere Pompeo di Giovenale e il delatore Licinio di Sidonio?'
