

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01350-5 - The Conquest of the River Plate (1535-1555)

Edited by Luis L. Dominguez

Table of Contents

More information

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	xiii
BIBLIOGRAPHY	xli
VOYAGE OF ULRICH SCHMIDT	1
THE COMMENTARIES OF ALVAR NUÑEZ CABEZA DE VACA:—
CHAP. I.—Of the Commentaries of Alvar Nuñez Cabeza de Vaca	95
CHAP. II.—How we departed from the island of Cabo Verde	98
CHAP. III.—Which treats of how the governor arrived with his armada at the island of Santa Catalina in Brazil, and dis- embarked his troops there	100
CHAP. IV.—How nine Christians came to the island	101
CHAP. V.—How the governor hastened his journey	104
CHAP. VI.—How the governor and his people advanced into the interior	106
CHAP. VII.—Which treats of what happened to the governor and his people on their journey, and of the nature of the land	108
CHAP. VIII.—Of the troubles that the governor and his people underwent on their way, and of a kind of pine tree, and of the fruits of that land	112
CHAP. IX.—How the governor and his people found themselves starving, and appeased their hunger with worms from reeds	114
CHAP. X.—Of the fear the Indians had of the horses	117
CHAP. XI.—How the governor navigated the river Yguazú, and how, in order to avoid a cataract of that river, he transported the canoes one league by hand	119
CHAP. XII.—Which treats of the rafts that were made to carry the sick	122
CHAP. XIII.—How the governor arrived at the Ascension, where the Spaniards lived whom he had come to relieve	124
CHAP. XIV.—How the Spaniards left behind through sickness on the river Piqueri arrived at the town of Ascension	126

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01350-5 - The Conquest of the River Plate (1535-1555)

Edited by Luis L. Dominguez

Table of Contents

More information

viii

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

CHAP. XV.—How the governor, wishing to repopulate Buenos Ayres, sent reinforcements to those who had come there on the ship ‘ Capitana ’ -	127
CHAP. XVI.—How the natives kill and eat their enemies -	129
CHAP. XVII.—Of the peace which the governor concluded with the Indian Agazes	131
CHAP. XVIII.—Of the complaints addressed to the governor by the pobladores against the officers of His Majesty	134
CHAP. XIX.—How the governor received complaints against the Indian Guaycurús	135
CHAP. XX.—How the governor informed himself concerning the complaint	136
CHAP. XXI.—How the governor and his people crossed the river, and how two Christians were drowned -	139
CHAP. XXII.—How the spies, by order of the governor, went in search of the Guaycurús	140
CHAP. XXIII.—How the governor, pursuing the enemy, was informed that he was marching in front	142
CHAP. XXIV.—Of a panic among the Spaniards and Indians caused by a tiger	143
CHAP. XXV.—How the governor and his people overtook the enemy	145
CHAP. XXVI.—How the governor pursued the enemy	147
CHAP. XXVII.—How the governor and all his people returned to the town of Ascension	149
CHAP. XXVIII.—How the Indian Agazes broke the peace	150
CHAP. XXIX.—How the governor set at liberty one of the captive Guaycurús, and sent him to summon his fellow tribesmen	152
CHAP. XXX.—How the Guaycurús came and submitted to His Majesty	153
CHAP. XXXI.—How the governor, after making peace with the Guaycurús, delivered the prisoners to them	154
CHAP. XXXII.—How the Aperús came and made a treaty of peace and submitted - -	156
CHAP. XXXIII.—Of the judgment passed on the Agazes by the advice of the monks, captains, and other officers of His Majesty	158
CHAP. XXXIV.—How the governor sent relief to Buenos Ayres	159
CHAP. XXXV.—How the three Spaniards and the Indians returned from their reconnaissance - -	161

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01350-5 - The Conquest of the River Plate (1535-1555)

Edited by Luis L. Dominguez

Table of Contents

More information

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

ix

CHAP. XXXVI.—How wood was prepared for the construction of two brigantines and one caravel	- 162
CHAP. XXXVII.—How the Indians came again and offered their services	- - 163
CHAP. XXXVIII.—How the settlement of Ascension was burnt	166
CHAP. XXXIX.—How Domingo de Irala arrived	- 167
CHAP. XL.—What Gonzalo de Mendoza wrote	170
CHAP. XLI.—How the governor helped those who were with Gonzalo de Mendoza	- - 172
CHAP. XLII.—How four Christians died of their wounds during this war	- - 173
CHAP. XLIII.—How the friars took to flight	175
CHAP. XLIV.—How the governor took four hundred men on his voyage of discovery	177
CHAP. XLV.—How the governor left part of the provisions he had brought with him	- - 179
CHAP. XLVI.—How he stopped to speak with the natives of another port and land	- 180
CHAP. XLVII.—How he sent for an interpreter to treat with the Payaguás	- - - 182
CHAP. XLVIII.—How the horses were embarked in the port	183
CHAP. XLIX.—How Juan de Ayolas entered the port where he and his Christians were killed	185
CHAP. L.—How the interpreter and those who had promised to come failed to do so	188
CHAP. LI.—How the Guaxarapos spoke with the governor	192
CHAP. LII.—How the Indians come and establish themselves on the shore of the river	193
CHAP. LIII.—How they erected three crosses at the mouth of the river Yguatú	196
CHAP. LIV.—How the Indians of the port of Los Reyes cultivate the soil	199
CHAP. LV.—How the Indians of Garcia settled in this place	202
CHAP. LVI.—How they spoke with the Chaneses	203
CHAP. LVII.—How the governor sent to find out the Indians of Garcia	- 204
CHAP. LVIII.—How the governor held a council with his officers, and informed them of what was passing	- 205

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01350-5 - The Conquest of the River Plate (1535-1555)

Edited by Luis L. Dominguez

Table of Contents

More information

X

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

CHAP. LIX.—How the governor sent an expedition to the Xarayes	207
CHAP. LX.—How the interpreters came back from the Xarayes	212
CHAP. LXI.—How the governor decided on entering the country	215
CHAP. LXII.—How the governor arrived at the Rio Caliente	216
CHAP. LXIII.—How the governor sent to discover the house which was further on	218
CHAP. LXIV.—How the interpreter returned from the Indian habitation	219
CHAP. LXV.—How the governor and his people returned to the port of Los Reyes	221
CHAP. LXVI.—How the Indians would have killed those who remained at the port of Los Reyes	222
CHAP. LXVII.—How the governor sent Captain Mendoza in search of provisions	223
CHAP. LXVIII.—How he sent a brigantine to discover the river of the Xarayes with Captain de Ribera	225
CHAP. LXIX.—How Captain Francisco de Ribera returned from his exploration	228
CHAP. LXX.—How Captain Francisco de Ribera reported of his discovery	229
CHAP. LXXI.—How the governor sent for Gonzalo de Mendoza	233
CHAP. LXXII.—How Hernando de Ribera returned from his exploration along the river	236
CHAP. LXXIII.—What befell the governor and his people in the port of Los Reyes	237
CHAP. LXXIV.—How the governor, having arrived with his people at the town of Ascension, was made a prisoner	239
CHAP. LXXV.—How the population assembled before the house of Domingo de Irala	243
CHAP. LXXVI.—Of the tumults and disturbances that took place in the country	245
CHAP. LXXVII.—How the governor was kept in prison	247
CHAP. LXXVIII.—How the insurgents ravaged the land, and took possession of the property of the inhabitants	249
CHAP. LXXIX.—How the monks left the country	250
CHAP. LXXX.—How they tortured those who were not on their side	252

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xi

CHAP. LXXXI.—How they wished to kill a sheriff who had made them a requisition	- 253
CHAP. LXXXII.—How the insurgents gave the Indians permission to eat human flesh	- 254
CHAP. LXXXIII.—How the insurgents had to write to His Majesty and send him a report	- 256
CHAP. LXXXIV.—How they gave arsenic three times to the governor during the voyage	259

NARRATIVE OF HERNANDO DE RIBERA	263
INDEX	271

ILLUSTRATION.

MAP OF SOUTH AMERICA IN THE XVI CENTURY.