

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01721-3 - Pre-historic Times as Illustrated by Ancient Remains

John Lubbock

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

ON THE USE OF BRONZE IN ANCIENT TIMES.

Division of Pre-historic archæology into four periods—First discovery of metal—Copper—Tin—Iron—Allusions to bronze by ancient writers—Finds of the Iron age—Tiefenau—Nydam—Thorsbjerg—Finds of the Bronze age—Bronze and iron arms not found together—Objects characteristic of the Bronze age—Bronze celts—Modes of handling—Bronze swords—Bronze daggers, spear-heads, arrows, fish-hooks, sickles—Bronze knives—Razor knives—Bronze bracelets—Bronze pins—Gold ornaments—Character of ornamentation—Tumulus of Treenhoi—Dress in the Bronze age—Dress of a chief in the Bronze age—Mode of burial.

CHAPTER II.

THE BRONZE AGE.

Similarity of bronze implements in different countries—Bronze implements not of Roman origin—Referred by some archæologists to the Phœnicians—Phœnician voyages—Himilco—Pytheas—Thule supposed by Nilsson to be Norway—Phœnician colonies and commerce—Bronze composed of copper and tin—Tin obtained from Cornwall—Amber from German Ocean—Baal worship in Northern Europe—Question still doubtful—Bronze age civilisation—Bronze age architecture—Stonehenge—Abury—Silbury Hill more ancient than the Roman road—Stone circles—Stone circles, etc., in India—Stone circles in Palestine and Algeria.

CHAPTER III.

THE USE OF STONE IN ANCIENT TIMES.

The great abundance of stone implements—Stone used after discovery of metal—Material preferred for stone implements—Fracture of flint—Flint flakes—Stone hatchets—Scrapers—The small axes of the Shell-mounds—Chisels—Spear-heads—Daggers—Slingstones—Arrow-heads—Manufacture of flint implements—Bone implements—Danish coastfinds—Flintfinds.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01721-3 - Pre-historic Times as Illustrated by Ancient Remains

John Lubbock

Table of Contents

More information

xii

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER IV.

TUMULI.

Pre-historic tumuli—Tumuli mentioned in ancient history—Resemblance between the chambered tumuli and the dwellings of some Arctic nations—Objects buried with the dead not always intended for actual use—Tabulated interments—Models of implements sometimes buried—Barrows of different periods—Difficulty of determining the period to which a barrow belongs—Statistics—Treatment of the corpse—Description of a Danish tumulus—Of a barrow at West Kennet—Stone implements and pottery from the tumuli at West Kennet—Tumuli of modern savages—Sepulchral pottery—Bones of animals found in tumuli—Sepulchral feasts—Sacrifices—Pre-historic races of men.

CHAPTER V.

THE LAKE-HABITATIONS OF SWITZERLAND.

Lake-habitations mentioned by Herodotus—Crannoges of Ireland—Pile-dwellings in various parts of Europe—Pile-dwellings still used in various countries—Pile-dwellings found in most of the Swiss lakes—Structure of the huts—Attempt to make a census—Construction of the platforms—Description of the remains at Wauwyl—Weapons and implements of the lake-dwellers—Axes—Knives—Arrow-heads—Spindle-whorls—Flint flakes, etc.—Material used for stone implements—Bone implements—Pottery—Manufactures of the Stone period—Comparison of the piles belonging to the Stone and Bronze ages—The fauna of the Swiss lake-dwellings—Stag—Boar—Bull—Goat—Sheep—Dog—Table of the animal remains—Birds—Absence of the rat, mouse, and cat—Comparison of bones belonging to wild and domesticated races—Races of oxen—Absence of extinct species—The aurochs and elk, ibex and bear—General character of the fauna—The flora of the Pfahlbauten—Scarcity of human bones—Lake-habitations of the Bronze age—Objects of bronze—Use of pile-buildings as magazines—Sacred lakes—Inhabitants of the Pfahlbauten—Character of the objects found in different lake-villages—Statistics—Comparison of the different lake-villages—Abandonment of the lake-villages—Chronology.

CHAPTER VI.

THE DANISH KJÖKKENMÖDDINGS OR SHELL-MOUNDS.

Shell-mounds at first supposed to be raised beaches—Description of the shell-mounds—Distribution of the shell-mounds—Shell-mounds in Scotland—Shell-mounds in other countries—Flora of the shell-mounds—Fauna of the shell-mounds—Fish—Birds—Mammals—Absence of certain bones—Mutilation of certain bones—Shell-mound builders not mere summer visitors—Flint imple-

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01721-3 - Pre-historic Times as Illustrated by Ancient Remains

John Lubbock

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xiii

ments from the shell-mounds—Mode of life indicated by the shell-mounds—The Fuegians—The relation of the shell-mounds to the tumuli—The opinions of Steenstrup and Worsaae—The flint implements of the shell-mounds—The scarcity of well-made flint implements in the shell-mounds—Antiquity of the shell-mounds.

CHAPTER VII.

NORTH AMERICAN ARCHÆOLOGY.

Bibliography—Implements—The use of copper—Traces of ancient copper mines—Pottery—Ornaments—Earthworks—Defensive enclosures—Sacred and Miscellaneous enclosures—Earthworks in the Scioto valley—Earthworks at Circleville—Aztalan—Modern earthworks—Sepulchral mounds—Ancient modes of burial—Sacrificial mounds—The contents of the sacrificial mounds—The Grave Creek mound—Temple mounds—Animal mounds—General appearance—Inscriptions—Wampum—The mound-builders—Gigantic earthworks—Traces of ancient agriculture—Antiquity of the ancient remains—Condition of the bones—American Forests—Indication of four periods—Man and the mastodon—Dr. Douler's calculation.

CHAPTER VIII.

CAVE-MEN.

Cave-bear—Cave-lion—Mammoth and woolly-haired rhinoceros—Irish elk—Reindeer—Aurochs—Urus—Value of cave-evidence—Caves in the Dordogne—Absence of domestic animals—Flint implements—Absence of polished implements—Rude drawings and sculptures—Habits of the cave-dwellers—The Belgian caves—Kent's Hole—Brixham Cave—Sicilian caves—Gibraltar Cave—Aurignac—Wokey Hole—Cave-men.

CHAPTER IX.

THE ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

M. Boucher de Perthes—Messrs. Prestwich and Evans—Specimen discovered in the last century—Mr. Frere's discovery in 1800—Similar discoveries in other countries—Scepticism of geologists—The questions at issue—Evidence derivable from the flints themselves—The forgeries—Peculiarities of the drift implements—Drift implements never polished—Absence of human bones—Causes of the scarcity of human bones—Contemporaneity of the mammalian remains—The Somme valley—St. Acheul—Organic remains—Mineralogical contents of the river-drift gravels—Objections to the proposed theory—Fauna of the river-drift gravels—Climate of the river-drift period—Modes of accounting for the change of climate—Absence of marine remains—Inapplicability of cataclysms—Alteration of the river level owing to the excavation of the valley—Loëss—Fauna of the low level gravels—Peat—Recapitulation—Lapse of time.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01721-3 - Pre-historic Times as Illustrated by Ancient Remains

John Lubbock

Table of Contents

More information

xiv

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER X.

ON THE ANTIQUITY OF MAN—continued.

Varieties of man represented on ancient Egyptian sculptures—The vegetation of Denmark—The cone of the Tiniere—The valley of the Thièle—The valley of the Nile—Mr. Horner's Egyptian researches—The age of the Mississippi delta—Geological changes in the Quaternary period—The Wealden valley—Time—The Engis skull—The Neanderthal skull—Markings on bones from the Pliocene beds of St. Prest—Miocene man.

CHAPTER XI.

MODERN SAVAGES.

Modern savages—No evidence of degradation—Hottentots: Dress; houses; implements; methods of killing game; metallurgy; character—Veddahs of Ceylon—Andaman Islanders—Australians: Food; clothing; ornaments; rafts; implements; hammers; knives; spears; throwing-stick; boomerang; fire; polygamy; superstition; burial; numbers—Tasmanians—Feejeeans: Food; weapons; houses; religion; canoes; pottery; games; agriculture; women; clothes; tattoo; burial; superstition; cannibalism; murder—The Maories: Food; dress; ornaments; houses; fortifications; weapons; canoes; burial; music; character; religion; cannibalism—Tahitians: Implements; fish-hooks; nets; baskets; mats; cloth; dress; ornaments; houses; canoes; music; furniture; weapons; food; fire; cookery; ava; a chief's dinner; solitary meals; surgery; burial; burial-places; religion; character—The Tongans.

CHAPTER XII.

MODERN SAVAGES—Continued.

The Esquimaux: Dwellings; cookery; food; fire; implements; weapons; bows and arrows; spears; harpoons; modes of hunting and fishing; sledges; boats; the kajak and umiak; dress; ornaments; music; games; religion; burial; character—North American Indians: Dress; ornaments; the practice of head-moulding; religion; marriage; character; cruelty; infanticide; implements; weapons; canoes; fire; dwellings; agriculture; food; burial—The Paraguayan Indians: Weapons; huts; habits; religion; infanticide—Patagonians: Huts; dress; weapons; food; burial; religion—Fuegiens: Appearance; food and habits; cannibalism; absence of religion; ignorance of pottery; dress; fire.

CHAPTER XIII.

MODERN SAVAGES—Conclusion.

The skilfulness of savages—Arrows—Harpoons—Needles—Art—Statues—Differences in the Stone age—Different lines of civilisation—Differences in weapons—Isolation of savages—Independent inventions—Differences in habits—

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01721-3 - Pre-historic Times as Illustrated by Ancient Remains

John Lubbock

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xv

Different uses of the dog—Fire—Different methods of burial—Curious customs—Differences in prevalent sounds—Different ideas of virtue—Deification of white men by savages—Social position of women—Savages and children—Moral inferiority of savages—Intellectual inferiority of savages—Deficiencies in numeration—Absence of religion among many savage tribes—Belief in witchcraft—General inferiority of Savages.

CHAPTER XIV.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

The primitive condition of man—Unity of the human race—Natural selection applied to man—The influence of mind—Increase of happiness indicated by increase of numbers—Sufferings of savages—Self-inflicted sufferings—The blessings of civilisation—The diminution of suffering—The diminution of sin—The advantages of science—The future.