OF THE

FIRST VOLUME.

CHAPTER I.

Man is credulous because he is naturally sincere—Men of superior intellect have reduced their fellow-men to submission by acting upon their passions through their credulity—The recitals of marvels which conduced to this end are not wholly inventive—It is useful as well as curious to study the facts contained in these narrations, and their causes.

1—6

CHAPTER II.

Difference between Miracles and Prodigies—Circumstances that render marvellous Histories credible—1st. The number and agreement of the narrations, and the confidence which the observers and witnesses of them merit.—2nd. The possibility of tracing out some one or other of the principal causes that may have given a miraculous colouring to a natural event . . . . . 7—16

CHAPTER III.

Enumeration and discussion of Causes—Singular and deceptive appearances of Nature—Exaggeration of the details and duration of Phenomena—Improper terms, ill-conceived and badly explained—Figurative expressions—Poetic style—Erroneous explanations of Emblematic Representations—Allegories and Fables adopted as real facts . . . 17—62

CHAPTER IV.

Real but rare Phenomena successfully held up as Prodigies proceeding from the intervention of a Divine Power; and believed because men were ignorant that a Phenomenon could be local and periodical; because they had forgotten some natural fact, which would at once have removed all idea of the marvellous; and finally, because it was often dangerous to disabuse a deceived multitude—As the ancient authors have adhered to truth in this respect; they may be, also, depended upon in what they relate of magical operations . . . 63—96

CHAPTER V.

Magic—Antiquity and universality of the belief in Magic—Its operations attributed equally to the principle of evil and of good—It was not considered by the ancients to imply the subversion of the order of nature—Its truth was not disputed even when emanating from the disciples of an inimical religion 97—108

CHAPTER VI.

Trial of Skill between the Thaumaturgists—It was admitted that the victor derived his Science from the Deity; but it was founded on Natural Philosophy—The proofs of which are derived; 1st. From the conduct of the Thaumaturgists—2nd. From their own assertions regarding Magic, that the Genii invoked by the Magicians sometimes signified the Physical or Chemical agents accessory to the Occult Science; sometimes the men who cultivated that Science—3rd. The Magic of the Chaldeans embraced all the Occult Sciences 109—131

CHAPTER VII.

Errors mingled with the positive truths of Science—These have their origin sometimes in deliberate imposture, sometimes in the mystery in which the Occult Science is involved—Impostures exaggerated—Pretension of the Thaumaturgists; Charlatanism; Jugglery; Tricks of Legerdemain more or less palpable—Chance and the facility with which its results may be controlled—Oracles conjoined with equivocation and imposture, to insure their fulfilment by natural means, such as Ventriloquism, &c.; and by finally exact, but very simple observations 132—168

CHAPTER VIII.

Safeguards of the mystery that surrounded the Occult Sciences—Hieroglyphics, idioms, and sacred writing—Not understood by the uninitiated—Enigmatical language of the invocations—Gradual and partial revelations known in their plenitude only to a small number of priests—Oaths, and falsehoods respecting the nature of the processes, and the extent of Magical operations—Consequences of this mystery:—I. The Science of

Magic was reduced, in the hands of the Thaumaturgists, to a practice, the nature of which, devoid of theory, became in time unintelligible—II. Great errors universally prevailed, owing to ignorance of the limits that circumscribed this power; the desire to penetrate into secrets of Magic, and the habit of attributing its efficacy to the visible and ostensible processes of Science . . . . . 169—201

CHAPTER IX.

Notwithstanding the rivalry of religious sects, the spirit of a fixed form of civilization existed—Mystery in the schools of philosophy was ultimately banished by the influence of more perfect civilization—In the first epoch there was an habitual communication of the Greeks with the successors of the Magi, who were dispersed through Asia after the death of Smerdis—First the revelation of Magic—Second, the impoverishing of Egypt, after the conquest of the Romans caused priests of inferior grades, who trafficked in the secrets of the temples, to abound in Rome—Third, the polytheists who were converted to Christianity, carried into its bosom the knowledge of the magic which they possessed—In the second epoch, the remains only of the sacred science existed; first, in the schools of the Theurgian philosophy; secondly, in the possession of wandering priests, and, above all, of Egyptian priests. As successors to the former may be assigned, with much probability, the secret societies of Europe; to the latter, the modern jugglers . . . . . 201—237

CHAPTER X.

Enumeration of the wonders that the Thaumaturgists acquired the power of working, by the practice of the Occult Science. . . . . 238—243
