

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

Situation of the electorate of Hanover on the breaking out of the war—Effective force of the army—Indications of Napoleon's designs upon the electorate—His pretext for the invasion—Unaccountable incredulity of baron von Lenthe—The king's project relative to the Hanoverian army
 —How defeated—Instructions of baron Lenthe to marshal Wallmoden
 —The marshal's application to the cabinet—Their reply—Developement of the designs of France—Meaning attached by the Hanoverian ministry to the word "umbrage"—Declaration of marshal Wallmoden, urging an augmentation of the army—Ministers merely authorize a camp of instruction—Approach of a French army announced—Wallmoden again urges an augmentation of troops—Sentiments of the duke of Cambridge and the Calenbergischen Landstände—An augmentation is at last decided on..... Page 1

CHAPTER II.

Unhappy mode adopted by ministers for effecting the proposed augmentation of the army—Consequent dissatisfaction of the inhabitants—ambiguous communication from baron Lenthe—Responsibility of Wall-moden—His efforts at preparation—Failure of major von der Decken's application to the court of Prussia—Helpless situation of Hanover—Patriotic declaration of the duke of Cambridge—Impossibility of raising the required number of men—Disorderly proceedings of the inhabitants—Difficulty of procuring horses, which are at length taken from the plough—Ignorance of the force and position of the enemy—Ministers determine upon sending a deputation to negotiate—Their departure for the French head-quarters—Defensive preparations continued—Troops leave Hanover for Nienburg and Neustadt—Enemy continue to advance—Transport of recruits discontinued—Duke of Cambridge takes the command of the troops at Nienburg—Deputies return to Hanover—Mortier's appalling demand—Wallmoden's effective force—His want of confidence in it—Deputies empowered to treat with Mortier—The duke of Cambridge throws up his command and leaves

b

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Hanover for England—French army continue to advance—Affair of outposts, and spirited conduct of lieutenant Krauchenberg—General Hammerstein is obliged to retire behind the Weser, and a convention is concluded at Suhlingen Page 13

CHAPTER III.

Wallmoden takes the command of the army at Celle—Fatal omission of colonel von Bock—Honourable conduct of the Hanoverian government—Army proceed towards the Elbe—The "Lüneburger Haide"—Difficulty of providing for the troops—Strange conduct of the inhabitants—Able measures of commercial counsellor Heise—Feeling of the troops—Their frequent desertion—Precipitation of the march—Passage of the Elbe—Head-quarters established at Lauenburg—Wallmoden first informed of Mortier's qualifying clause—His consequent apprehensions—Letter of M. de Talleyrand to lord Hawkesbury—Preparations for the conveyance of the Hanoverian army to England—The transports are countermanded—Reply of lord Hawkesbury—Misinterpretation of Napoleon—Letter of Mortier to marshal Wallmoden—Programme for a new convention—Deputation to Wallmoden from the electoral provinces—He summons a council of war, who pronounce Mortier's demands inadmissible—Wallmoden's satisfaction at the decision—Position of his army—Its effective force—That of the French—Expectations of a contest—Offer of more favourable terms declined—Apparent crisis in the negotiation—Wallmoden prepares to meet the enemy..... 31

CHAPTER IV.

Mutiny of the Hanoverian heavy cavalry brigade, and report that the enemy were about to cross the Elbe—Wallmoden, disheartened, summons a council of war—They authorize him to conclude a new convention on the terms last proposed—Conference of the two commanders on the Elbe—Mortier's narrow escape—Elbe convention—An important provision omitted—Inquiry into the causes of the mutiny, and the conduct and character of marshal Wallmoden 49

CHAPTER V.

Feelings of the king during the proceedings in Lauenburg—Renewal of his majesty's design of removing the Hanoverian army to England—His majesty's wishes anticipated by Mr. Moeller—Zeal and activity of this officer—Arrangements are made for his departure with the transports—

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

XV

Project destroyed by the Elbe convention — Moeller embarks for Mecklenburg—His useful suggestion, and effective appearance among the disbanded troops — Foreign recruiting department established in London under lieutenant-colonel von der Decken—Impediments to the emigration of the troops—Their painful situation—They resolve to place themselves under British protection—Generous conduct of the king of Denmark—Tempting offer of the French—Loyalty of the Hanoverians—Letters of service to lieutenant-colonel von der Decken and major Halkett—Arrival of the first Hanoverian officers—Unfavourable commencement of the recruiting—Proclamation of the king—Four hundred and fifty men arrive, and the continuance of the levy is secured—Original plan extended, and a legion of five thousand men ordered to be raised by the duke of Cambridge—Two light infantry regiments and eight troops of cavalry formed—Uniform of the several arms — Corps first entitled the KING'S GERMAN LEGION..... Page 69

CHAPTER VI.

Rapid organization of the new corps— Cavalry brigade at Weymouth and Dorchester—Partiality of the king to the heavy regiment—Formation of four line battalions—Of the artillery—Infantry depôt established at Bexhill—Insufficiency of barracks—Huts, therefore, thrown up by the troops—State of the corps in January, 1805—Cavalry brigade and captain Hartmann's battery manœuvre with English regiments—Continental coalition—Legion ordered to embark for the north of Germany —Their enthusiasm and anticipations—Cause of the latter not being fulfilled—Fleet sail and encounter a gale of wind—Arrival of the troops at Bremen and Verden—Lord Cathcart takes the command—Part of legion sent to co-operate with Russians—Allies too late in the field—Battle of Austerlitz causes hostilities to be suspended—Army ordered to return to England—Effect upon the troops—Desertion among the legion—How brought on—Corps nevertheless augmented—Detail of augmentation—Army arrive in England—Distribution of the legion regiments—Major Röttiger's military school—Its general utility to the corps—Battalions sail for Cork, and are driven into Bantry Bay —Their dismay at the kind of provisions offered them—Distribution of the regiments in Ireland—Prussia impedes the recruiting—Satisfaction of the Germans with the Emerald isle—Parallel circumstances of that country and England—Hanoverians become popular and form near alliances—Affray at Tullamore—Loss of the legion—Opinion of the court of inquiry—Reasons assigned for the affray—Disquietude of major-general von Linsingen—Letter from sir Herbert Taylor—Part of the legion are ordered to hold themselves in readiness for foreign service 82

b 2

CHAPTER VII.

Eight thousand of the legion embark for Rügen under lord Rosslyn—
 Loss of the Northumberland transport—Arrival of the corps at Rügen —Expedition to Copenhagen under lord Cathcart—Arrival of the fleet in the Sound—Lord Rosslyn's corps ordered to join that of lord Cathcart—Brigading of the legion—Troops land without opposition—Surrender of Freiderickswerk to a squadron of the first hussars—
 Lord Rosslyn's corps land in Kiøge Bay—Distribution of the hussars —Danish outposts surprised by captain Küper—Redoubt taken by major Halkett—Parallel commenced within eight hundred yards of the placePage 103

CHAPTER VIII.

Strong sally of the enemy repulsed by a detachment of the legion under colonel von Reinboldt—Sir Arthur Wellesley sent with a corps into the interior—Detail of his force—Engagement near Kiøge—Flight of the Danes—Spirited conduct of the new levies, and consequent losses of the hussars—Flattering notice of lieutenant Jansen by sir Arthur Wellesley—General Linsingen continues the pursuit—Surrender of general Oxholm and four hundred men—Progress of the siege—Sortie under general Peymann repulsed—Copenhagen summoned, and batteries opened against the fortress—Town set on fire by the British shells —Armistice of twenty-four hours solicited, and declined—Lieutenant-colonel Murray sent to explain the basis of capitulation—Articles agreed to and ratified—British take possession of the citadel—Effort of the governor of Cronborg respecting the Hanoverians—Anecdote illustrative of German honesty—Embarkation of the legion—Imposing spectacle of the armament in passing the Sound—Fleet dispersed by a gale of wind—Continuance of the tempest and fatal consequences to the legion—Loss of the Augustus Cæsar and Salisbury transports—Entire loss of the legion in the expedition 119

CHAPTER IX.

Effects of the late gale—Re-assembly of the German regiments—Four line battalions ordered to embark for the Mediterranean—Departure of the fleet for the rock of Lisbon—They are dispersed by a gale, and part arrive at Gibraltar—From thence are ordered to Sicily—Again encounter a gale of wind—Anchor at Palermo—Ordered to Syracuse—Overtaken by another gale—Destination changed to Messina, where

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xvii

they at length land—Arrival of the other transports—State of Sicily—Duty of the troops—Expedition to Gothenburg—Cause of its failure—Sufferings of the legion cavalry—Description of a horse transport—Recreation of the officers—Fleet return to England—Expedition to Portugal under Sir Arthur Wellesley—Sir John Moore's army added, and sent off without landing—Progress of the fleet described—Troops ordered to land in Maceira Bay—Difficulties overcome by the British navy—Losses of the third hussars from confinement on ship board—Their uncomfortable bivouack—Army move towards Lisbon, and are stationed in the neighbourhood—Consequences of the battle of Vimeiro—Expedition to Spain under sir John Moore—Third hussars and light brigade form part of the army—Disappointed expectations with regard to the Spaniards—Blake's discomfited troops—British army reach Salamanca and Astorga—Feeling and intentions of sir John Moore—Defeat of Castaños—Sir John Moore decides upon falling back on Portugal—Changes this determination, and resolves to make a diversion in favour of the Spaniards—Is joined by general Hope at Salamanca and marches upon Valladolid—German light battalions formed into an independent brigade under general von Alten—Intercepted dispatch changes direction of march—Brilliant cavalry combat at Sahagun, which is occupied by the British—German regiments advanced towards Carrion—Sir John Moore resolves to surprise Soult at Saldanha—German light brigade selected to form the advanced guard—Night-march of the column from VilladaPage 140

CHAPTER X.

Column is suddenly ordered to countermarch—Cause of the retrograde movement—Commencement of the retreat—British cavalry repulse the enemy's attacks—German hussars form the rear guard—Reserve cross the Esla at Benavente—Prudent precaution of major von Linsingen—Combat of Benavente, and capture of general Lefebvre—Retreat continued, covered by the hussars—Critical situation of a picquet under lieutenant Heise—His presence of mind and successful expedient—British columns united at Astorga—Confusion produced here by the marquis of Romana—Flank brigades ordered to Vigo under general von Alten—Sir John Moore's instructions to that general—Detail of the March to Vigo—Reference to colonel Napier's observations on this subject..... 159

CHAPTER XI.

Narrative of the retreat of the main body continued—Reserve take up a position at Cacabelos, and check pursuit of the enemy—English

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

cavalry sent on to Lugo, and German hussars alone retained to cover the retreat—Their sufferings and privations—Insubordination and licentiousness of the army—Calamities of the retreat—Abandonment of part of the military chest—A small sum is brought on by lieutenant Hugo's detachment of hussars—Sir John Moore offers battle to the enemy at Lugo—French broken and pursued, and hostilities cease—Retreat resumed in the night—Loss of men, and disorder during the march—Troops approach Corunna and discipline is restored—Sir John Moore prepares to receive the enemy—Transports arrive and cavalry embarked—Wretched condition of this force—Painful duty of the German hussars—Explosion of a large magazine—Battle of Corunna, —Napier's vindication of Sir John Moore—Embarkation of the troops—Consternation among the shipping—The fleet sail for England—Progress of the flank brigades from Vigo—Difficulty in clearing the harbour—Disappearance of a transport—Fleet arrive off Cape Finisterre and await orders—General Alten decides on proceeding with the division to England—Fleet encounter stormy weather—Loss of the Small-bridge—Appearance of the hussars on landing, and the consolatory expression of an Englishman thereonPage 174

CHAPTER XII.

Success of the French in Spain after the return of sir John Moore's army—English government decide upon sending out a reinforcement under sir Arthur Wellesley—Duties of the German regiments in Portugal during the winter months—Arrival of sir Arthur Wellesley at Lisbon—He decides on attacking Soult—Army concentrated at Coimbra—Detail of the German corps—Lord Londonderry's observations on their appearance—March to Oporto—Combat of Grijon—Passage of the Douro—Battle of Oporto—March of the German line brigades in pursuit—Able retreat of Soult—Wants of the British army—They return to Abrantes, and are encamped on the left bank of the Tagus 186

CHAPTER XIII.

The first hussars of the legion join the army in Portugal—Captain Meyer's detachment returns to England—Sickness and wants of the army keep them inactive until June—March into Spain—Enemy retire behind the Alberche—Strange conduct of Cuesta—Capture by the hussars under captain von Linsingen—Disorderly retreat of Cuesta—His obstinacy—Sir Arthur Wellesley assumes the command, and places

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xix

the allies in position at Talavera—Distribution of the divisions—Skirmish with the enemy's cavalry, and awkward predicament of a squadron under captain von Linsingen—Mistake relative to the posting of the German infantry—Battle of the twenty-seventh and loss of the seventh battalion of the legion—Movements of the enemy on the following morning—Change of position of the German regiments—French renew the attack—Gallant conduct of the fifth line battalion of the legion—The enemy retire with great loss—Change of position of general Anson's brigade—The French generals hold a council of war, and the troops take rest—Their physical debility—General attack on the position by the enemy—Fatal charge of general Anson's brigade—Error of colonel Napier and general Ponsonby respecting the German hussars—Charge of the German infantry—Critical situation of the guards—The battle is decided by the forty-eighth—Loss of the legion in both days—Anecdotes illustrative of the German artillery—Eagles taken by the fifth battalion of the legionPage 200

CHAPTER XIV.

Expedition to the Scheldt under lord Chatham—Its force and object—Fleets sail from the Downs—Sir Eyre Coote lands on Walcheren without opposition—Fort der Haak abandoned by the enemy—Terveere capitulates after a brave resistance—Sir John Hope lands on South Beveland, and enemy retire from thence—Evacuation of Fort Bathz—Enemy's ships move out of the reach of the British fleet—Middleburg permitted to enter into capitulation—Enemy retire to Flushing, and are followed by the British troops—Panic caused by the fourteenth and seventy-first regiments—Siege of Flushing is determined on by the British commander—Description of the fortress and its defences—Sharp contest in gaining the batteries which commanded the south coast—Capitulation of fort Rammekens—Contrary winds prevent the fleet from entering the channel—Lord Chatham's plan of operations—Number of the enemy's troops—Their inadequacy for the defence of Flushing—Distribution and strength of the investing army—The enemy take advantage of the non-occupation of Cadzand by the British, to send over reinforcements to Flushing—Additional troops therefore landed—General von Alten's brigade join the outposts of the besieging army—Spirited sally of the garrison, under general Osten, repulsed by the British and Germans—Special approbation of first light battalion in general orders—Lord Rosslyn's and the marquis of Huntley's divisions land on South Beveland—Delay in the progress of the siege—Enemy continue to receive reinforcements from Cadzand—British frigates at length anchor off the sea front of the fortress—The sluices are opened and the dyke cut by the enemy—Navigation of the river secured to fort Lillo—Situation of the investing army—Proverb respecting Flushing—Troops begin to suffer in health—Nature of the climate and its consequences—General Monnet's haughty reply—Bombardment commenced—Effect of the cannonade—Intrenchment carried by a detachment of British and Germans under colonel Nicholls—Cannonade continued without any appearance of surrender—Place summoned without effect—Bombardment resumed and Flushing set on fire—Its horrific appearance—Battery stormed by a detachment of British and Germans under lieutenant-colonel Pack—Loss of the legion—Tribute to their gallantry by the author of "Letters from Flushing"—Bombardment continued—General Monnet requests a suspension of arms—British officers sent to negotiate—Garrison surrender as prisoners of warPage 220

CHAPTER XV.

Appearance of Flushing in the morning light—Extent of the destruction caused by the bombardment—British make arrangements for repairing the works—Ravages of disease among the troops—The pestilence described—Comparative exemption of the foreigners in the British service from its severity—Movements of the army—Languid proceedings of lord Chatham—French collect large reinforcements and take measures to inundate a great part of the country—Necessity for reducing Antwerp discovered—Increase of the epidemic, and mortality in the army—Privations of the troops—A council of war is assembled—Opinion of the lieutenant-generals, and instructions from lord Castle-reagh to lord Chatham—South Beveland evacuated by the British and immediately occupied by a French division—Lord Chatham embarks for England with the greater part of the army—General von Alten's brigade sent to St. Joostland—Their comparative healthy condition—Hesitation of the British government to abandon Walcheren—General Don takes the command of the troops—Increase of the mortality—General Don calls a council of war—Army ordered to return to England, and embark without opposition—State of the German brigade on its arrival at Bexhill barracks—Observations on the campaign 238

CHAPTER XVI.

Duties of the German regiments in Sicily—Expedition to the gulf of Policastro, under lieutenant-colonel Brysse—Against the kingdom of Naples under sir John Stuart and admiral Martin—Descent upon the island of Ischia under general Macfarlane—Battery stormed by a detachment of the legion and the English sailors and marines—Surrender of the castle of Ischia and garrison of Procida, with a flotilla

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xxi

of gun-boats—Simultaneous operations of colonel Smith in Lower Calabria—Large force assembled by Murat causes the project against Naples to be abandoned, and fleet return to Sicily—Sixth battalion of the legion sent to Trapani and the adjacent forts—Their duties here—Large French force encamp on the Calabrian coast—Consequent preparations of the Sicilian corps—Mock invasions of the enemy—A landing is at length attempted—Enemy are promptly opposed, and vainly endeavour to re-embark—Surrender of the royal Corsicans, and end of the demonstrations of invasionPage 249

CHAPTER XVII.

Condition of the British and German troops after the battle of Talavera—Sir Arthur Wellesley is raised to the peerage—General Craufurd's brigade join the army—Cuesta abandons the English sick, and follows lord Wellington to Oropesa—Critical situation of the allies—The British placed in position on the other side of the Tagus—Marshal Victor enters Talavera—His humane conduct to the British wounded—Defeat of the Spanish rear guard—Sufferings of the English troops, and disgraceful conduct of the Spaniards—Defeat of Venegas—Lord Wellington decides upon retiring into Portugal—Halts for some days at Merida, reaches Badajos, and places the troops in cantonments along the Guadiana—Sickness of the army—The seventh battalion the greatest sufferers of the legion—Spaniards meet with a series of disasters—Lord Wellington commences his march for Portugal, leaving general Hill with one corps at Abrantes—Army established in the valley of the Mondego, and health of the troops restored—Distribution of the German regiments—Responsible duty of captain Gesenius and the first battery of German artillery—Lord Wellington directs his attention to the lines of Torres Vedras, and the defence of Portugal—Advances his head-quarters to Celerico, and sends the light division across the Coa—The first German hussars join the light division, and are spread along the Agueda—Their severe duty—The French cavalry cross that river, and the hussars retire to the Azava—Captain Bergmann is engaged in a sharp skirmish—Julian Sanchez joins the light division, and the enemy, reinforced, move against Craufurd—British piquets driven across the Azava—Hussars reinforced by the sixteenth and fourteenth English dragoons—Jealousy of the French cavalry—Anecdote of Schroeder—Affair of Gallegos, and gallant conduct of captain Krauchenberg's squadron of hussars—Expressions of lord Wellington and general Craufurd on the subject.. 262

CHAPTER XVIII.

Unsuccessful attempt of general Craufurd to surprise the French marauding parties—Affair of Barquilla and fall of colonel Talbot—Surrender of Rodrigo—General Craufurd is forced back to Almeida, but takes up a position—Combat on the Coa, and retreat of the light division behind the Pinhel—Surrender of Almeida—Obscurity of the French projects—Massena at length marches to invade Portugal—Uncertainty respecting his line of march—He selects the road by Coimbra and Viseu—French rear-guard successfully opposed by the hussars under captain Aly and lieutenant von der Decken—Both corps of the allied army are united, and lord Wellington prepares to offer battle to the enemy—Successful skirmish under captain Aly—Distribution of the troops on the heights of Busaco—Sharp skirmish between the German light infantry and French tirailleurs—Battle of Busaco and defeat of the French Page 279

CHAPTER XIX.

Humanity towards a body of wounded French, by captain von Linsingen's squadron of hussars—Lord Wellington continues to retreat towards the Mondego—German outposts attacked—Critical situation of the hussars in covering the passage of the Mondego—Anecdote of a dog—Distressing appearance of the Portuguese peasantry—Cause of Lord Wellington's harsh measures towards them—German piquet at Leiria attacked and driven in—Judicious and gallant conduct of captain Cox of the sixteenth—Colonel Trant surprises Coimbra—British piquets surprised at Alcoentre—Critical situation and protracted combat between captain von Linsingen's squadron, and the enemy's advanced guard in retiring from Alcoentre—Successful charge of a squadron under captain Aly—The British cavalry are drawn within the lines of Torres Vedras—The legion light infantry are sharply engaged near Sobral—Army enter the lines—Distribution of the legion—Massena disposes his troops so as to form a blockade—Duty of the German hussars—Gallant conduct of Corporal Meyer—British and German light cavalry harass the enemy's foraging parties—Massena commences his retreat but halts at Santarem—Disappointment of Lord Wellington, who follows and remains on the defensive—Disposition of the allied army 292

CHAPTER XX.

Operations in the isle of Leon—Two squadrons of the second hussars under major von dem Bussche join general Graham—An attack upon

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xxiii

the French investing corps is arranged, and a force embarks at Cadiz—Difficulty in shipping the cavalry—British reach Tariffa, and are joined by a corps of Spaniards under La Peña—German hussars placed under general Whittingham—March to Medina—Casa Viejas abandoned by the enemy—Corps moves upon Vejer—Ludicrous incident in crossing a dam—Troops reach the heights of Barosa—Position described—La Peña takes off the greater part of the army from the key of the position—Appearance of the French under Victor—Right and rear of the allies threatened—One German squadron has to oppose the enemy's advance—Judicious movements of major von dem Bussche—Extraordinary proceeding of general Whittingham—General Graham returns and becomes engaged—Defeat of the French—Effective charge of the first squadron of hussars under captain von dem Bussche—The second squadron, retained by general Whittingham, arrives too late—Probable consequences of its timely arrival—Loss of the French—Conduct of La Peña during the action—British are withdrawn into the Isla—Loss of the hussars.....Page 305

CHAPTER XXI.

State of the armies in Portugal during the winter months—Skirmish under lieutenant Poter, and gallantry of serjeant Bergmann—Hussars suffer from sickness—Reconnaissance under Junot, who is wounded by a German hussar—Enterprising conduct of serjeant Westermann and cornet von Strenowitz—German piquet attacked by a wolf—Massena commences his retreat from Santarem, followed by Lord Wellington—French rear-guard driven in by a squadron of hussars under captain von Müller—Sharp skirmish at Pombal—Combat at Redinha—Massena passes the Ceira, and being driven from a position behind the Alva, continues his retreat—Extensive capture by captain Aly—French are placed in position behind the Coa—Combat of Sabugal 316

CHAPTER XXII.

Retreat of Massena continued—He falls back on Salamanca, and Lord Wellington invests Almeida—Failure of an attempt to intercept a French convoy—Massena determines upon relieving Almeida—Lord Wellington is resolved to abide a battle, and places his army in position near Fuentes Onoro—Anecdote of colonel B—Distribution of the British troops—Battle of Fuentes, and retreat of the French—The garrison of Almeida escape, and the greater part of the French army is withdrawn to Salamanca—Lord Wellington visits the army in the Alentejo—Light brigade of the legion join this army—Lord Wellington reconnoitres Badajos, escorted by the brigade—Sortie from the place, and serious loss of captain Bösewiel's company—Lord Wellington returns to the northern army—Operations against Badajos continued, by Marshal Beresford—The marshal receives intimation of the approach of Soult, and the allied army is placed in position at Albuera—Position and distribution of the troops—Detail of the several divisions and brigades—Battle of Albuera and defeat of the French—Lord Wellington arrives at Elvas—Badajos is reinvested—Defeat of two French cavalry regiments, by generals Lumley and Madden—The enemy retire to Llerena, and the allies are placed in cantonments—General Hill resumes the command of the right corps, and lord Wellington proceeds with the siege of BadajosPage 325

APPENDIX.

- No. I. Extracts from the proclamations issued by the Hanoverian government on the 16th and 24th May, 1803Page 345
- II. Opinion of the council of war assembled at Haidekrug 347
- III. Proclamations, &c. issued by the executive commission at Hanover, prohibitory of recruiting for the English service 348
- IV. Letter of service addressed to his royal highness the duke of Cambridge 350
- V. Document relating to the affray at Tullamore 354
- VI. General return of casualties of the king's German legion during the expedition to the Baltic in the year 1807, to follow p. 355
- VII. Documents relating to the capture of general Lefebvre Desnouettes 358
- VIII. Correspondence relative to the march of general von Alten's brigade from Astorga to Vigo 361
- IX. Documents shewing the loss of the first and second light battalions king's German legion, between Astorga and Vigo, in 1808-9 373
- X. Detail of the loss of the transport Smallbridge 376
- XI. Return of the loss of the king's German legion in the battle of Talavera de la Reyna to face page 380
- XII. Return of the loss of the king's German legion in the battle of Busaco 382
- XIII. Return of the loss of the king's German legion in the battle of Fuentes de Onoro 383
- XIV. Letter from captain Cleeves to major Hartmann relative to the loss of a German howitzer in the battle of Albuera 385
- XV. Return of the loss of the king's German legion in the battle of Albuera 387

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

XXV

List of the printed works and manuscripts to which reference is made in this Volume.

PRINTED WORKS.

- No. 1. Darstellung der Lage worin sich das Hannöwerische militair in den Monathen May, Juny, und July, 1803, befand. 1 heft 8vo. 1803.
2. Historische Berichtigungen des öffentlichen Urtheils über die durch die Französische Occupation des Kurfürstenthums Hamover daselbst veranlassten Militairischen Maasregeln. 2 heft 8vo. Niedersachsen, 1803.
3. Allgemeine Literatur-Zeitung, Nos. 55 and 57, Halle, 1804.
4. History of the reign of Geo. III., by Robert Bisset, L.L.D. 6 vol. 8vo. London, 1820.
5. The siege of Copenhagen; or, Documents comprehending an Official Detail of the Bombardment of that City, together with a Danish Narrative of the dreadful calamities suffered by the inhabitants in consequence thereof; the whole compiled from original British and Danish papers. By an Officer from Copenhagen. To which is prefixed an historical account of the City of Copenhagen. 1 vol. 12mo. London, 1808.
6. Bulletins of the Campaigns of the British troops, from 1807 to 1811, compiled from the London Gazettes.
7. History of the War in the Peninsula and in the South of France, from the year 1807 to the year 1814. By W. F. P. Napier, C.B. colonel H.P. forty-third regiment, and member of the Royal Swedish Academy of Military Sciences. Vols. 1, 2, and 3, London, 1828, 1829, and 1830.
8. Narrative of the Peninsular war from 1808 to 1813 by lieutenant-general Charles William Vane, marquess of Londonderry, G.C.B. and G.C.H. colonel of the tenth royal hussars, 2 vol. 8vo. London, 1829.
9. Letters from Flushing, containing an account of the expedition to Walcheren, Beveland, and the mouth of the Scheldt, under the command of the Earl of Chatham, with a topographical and statistical account of the Islands of Walcheren and Beveland. By an Officer of the eighty-first regiment. 1 vol. 8vo. London, 1809.
10. A short narrative of the late campaign of the British army, under the orders of the right honourable the earl of Chatham, K.G. with preliminary remarks on the topography and channels of Zealand, 1 vol. 8vo. London, 1810.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

- No. 11. Further strictures on those parts of colonel Napier's History of the Peninsular war, which relate to the military opinions and conduct of general lord viscount Beresford, to which is added a report of the operations in the Alemtejo and Spanish Estremadura, during the campaign of 1811, by major-general sir Benjamin d'Urban, 1 vol. 8vo. London, 1832.

MANUSCRIPTS.

GERMAN.

- No. 1. Narrative of general Frederick von der Decken, G.C.H. Master-general of the Hanoverian ordnance, formerly lieutenant-general and colonel-commandant of the artillery, late king's German legion.
2. Narrative of colonel Ernest von Linsingen, K.C.H. adjutant-general to the Hanoverian cavalry, formerly captain in the first hussars, and major half-pay third hussars, late king's German legion.
3. Journal of colonel Ernest von Linsingen, K.C.H. &c. &c. &c.
4. Correspondence of colonel Ernest von Linsingen, K.C.H. &c. &c. &c.
5. Narrative of colonel George Krauchenberg, K.C.H. inspector of the Hanoverian cavalry, formerly captain in the first hussars, and major half-pay third hussars, late king's German legion.
6. Narrative of sir Lewis Moeller, K.C.H. privy councillor of legation to the Hanoverian mission in London, and secretary to the royal Hanoverian Guelphic order.
7. Journal of the first light battalion, late king's German legion.
8. Narrative of colonel George Baring, K.C.H. commanding the first brigade of Hanoverian infantry, formerly captain in the first light battalion, and major half-pay second light battalion, late king's German legion.
9. Narrative of major-general sir George Julius Hartmann, K.C.B. and K.C.H. of the Hanoverian artillery, lieutenant-colonel late king's German artillery.
10. Journal of major Rautenberg, K.H. formerly captain in the first light battalion, and captain half-pay veteran battalion, late king's German legion.
11. Journal of the second regiment of hussars, late king's German legion.
12. Journal of the third regiment of hussars, late king's German legion.
13. Journal of major Heinemann, K.H. captain half-pay fifth line battalion, late king's German legion.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-05421-8 - History of the King's German Legion: Volume 1

North Ludlow Beamish

Table of Contents

More information

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

xxvii

- No. 14. Journal of major Christian Heise, captain half-pay third hussars, late king's German legion.
15. Narrative of the loss of the Augustus Cæsar transport, by major von Borstel, K.H. captain half-pay first line battalion, late king's German legion.
16. Narrative of doctor Rathje, surgeon in the Hanoverian service, and assistant surgeon half-pay second line battalion, late king's German legion.
17. Narrative of captain George Meyer, K.H. of the third Hanoverian hussars, captain half-pay third hussars, late king's German legion.
18. Journal of third line battalion, late king's German legion.
19. Narrative of lieutenant-colonel Quintus von Goeben, K.H. of the sixth regiment of Hanoverian cavalry, (lancers,) captain half-pay third hussars, late king's German legion.
20. Correspondence of the late major-general Martin, K.C.H. formerly major in the first light battalion, late king's German legion.
21. Journal of doctor Grosskopf, K.H. staff-surgeon in the Hanoverian service, and formerly surgeon in the third hussars, late king's German legion.
22. Journal of captain Schnath, adjutant, half-pay, first line battalion, late king's German legion.
23. Journal of lieutenant Tiensch, half-pay second line battalion, late king's German legion.
24. Journal of captain Stutzer, adjutant half-pay seventh line battalion, late king's German legion.
25. Notes of major von Holle, K.H. captain half-pay second line battalion, late king's German legion.
26. Narrative of lieutenant-colonel George von der Decken, K.H. of the Hanoverian hussar guards, captain half-pay first hussars, late king's German legion.
27. Notes of lieutenant-colonel William von der Decken, K.H. of the Hanoverian rifle guards, captain half-pay second line battalion, late king's German legion.
28. Guelphic Archives, being the attested memorials of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the late king's German legion, who claimed the Guelphic medal for extraordinary services during the late war.
29. Narrative of the late captain Bussman, captain half-pay king's German artillery.
30. Journal of eighth line battalion, late king's German legion.
31. Narrative of captain von Hohnstedt of the eighth regiment of Hanoverian infantry, captain, half-pay, sixth line battalion, late king's German legion.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

- No. 32. Narrative of captain George Appuhn of the Hanoverian rifle-guards, and half-pay third line battalion, late king's German legion.
33. Journal of major Cordemann, K.H. of the Hanoverian hussar guards, captain half pay first hussars, late king's German legion.
34. Correspondence of lieutenant-general baron von Löw, K.C.B. and K.C.H. formerly major-general and colonel commanding fourth line battalion, late king's German legion.
35. Narrative of major-general Augustus von dem Bussche, K.C.H. formerly captain in the third and major in the 2d hussars, late king's German legion.
36. Narrative of major Moritz von Müller, captain half-pay first hussars, late king's German legion.

ENGLISH.

- No. 1. Narrative of the late general Charles Count von Linsingen, G.C.H. formerly lieutenant-general and colonel of the first hussars, late king's German legion.
2. Narrative of major-general sir Hugh Halkett, C.B. and K.C.H. commanding the third brigade of Hanoverian infantry, lieutenant-colonel half-pay seventh line battalion, and formerly major in the second light battalion late king's German legion.
3. Narrative of major-general sir Loftus William Otway, Kt. C.B.

PLATES AND PLANS.

Nine plates illustrative of the uniforms of the several regiments of the king's German legion	to follow page	80
Battle of Talavera	to face page	218
Affairs of Gallegos and Barquilla	to face page	278
Battle of Barosa.....	to face page	314
Battle of Albuera	to face page	342