

I N D E X.

- a* or an, article, 129.
 abbreviation of words, 38, 50–55.
ablaut, or variation of radical vowel, 126, 128.
 Abyssinian group, 247.
 Accadian language, 235.
 accent, makes unity of word, 121.
 accidental correspondences of words, 170.
 accusative subject of infinitive, 93.
 Achaemenidan language, 185.
 acquisition of language by the individual, 7–31.
acre, 39.
 additions to language, 103–133.
 adjective originally identical with noun, 205; comparison, 217, 218; its inflection lost in English, 103, 104, 218; English noun convertible into, 132, 133.
 adverb, Indo-European, 208.
 Afghan language, 186.
 African languages, 254–258.
 agglutinative structure, 232.
 -ai, (French) future ending, 92.
 Albanian language, 187.
 Algonkin language, 259, 260, 263.
aller (French), 168.
 alphabetic sounds, how produced, 58–67; historical development of alphabet, 68–70.
 alternative tendency in language, 33, 34.
am, 90, 106.
America, 136.
 American languages, 259–264.
 Americanisms, 156.
 Amharic language, 247.
an or a, article, 129.
 analogy, its force in linguistic growth, 74, 75.
 analytic and synthetic structure, 211, 212.
 Anglo-Saxon, its relation to English, 33–43.
 animals, the lower, relation of their expression to ours, 2, 3, 282, 290, 291; their lack of speech, 305.
animus, 137.
 Annamese language, 239.
 antiquity of man, 192.
application, 88.
apprehend, apprehension, 88, 137.
 Arabic language and its kin, 246, 247.
 Aramaic language, 246, 247.
 archæology, its relation to linguistics, 273, 312.
 Armenian language, 186; its exchange of surd and sonant, 73.
 Armorican language, 183.
 articles, their origin, 95.
 articulate utterance, 68.
 Aryan languages, 180, 193, 194.
as and also, 129.
 aspirate mutes, 64.
 aspiration, h, 66, 67.
 assimilation of sounds, 69–72.
 Assyrian language, 246, 247.
 Athabaskan group, 263.
 attenuation of meaning of words, 90–95.
 Australian languages, 244.
 auxiliary and relational words, their production, 90–96.
 Avestan language, 185.
banana, 115.
bank, bankrupt, 77.
 Bantu family, 256.
 Bashkir language, 231.
 Basque language, 253, 275.

- be*, 90.
 Bengali language, 137.
bishop, 45–48.
blame, 55.
 Bohemian language, 182.
book, 77.
 borrowing as means of adding to language, 114–120, 170.
 Brahmī language, 244.
brother and related words, 168, 171.
 Bulgarian language, 182.
 Burmese language, 239.
 Bushman language, 267.
 butterfly, 84, 87.
- Cæsar*, 135.
 Canaanitic languages, 246.
 Canarese language, 244.
candidate, 77, 78.
 capacities involved in production and use of language, 145, 278, 279, 303, 305.
 Carthaginian language, 246. cases, 216, 217; Indo-European, 205–207; English and French, 104.
 Caucasian languages, 245.
 Celtic languages, 183.
 Chaldee language, 246, 247.
 change in language, its universality, 33–36; illustrated from Anglo-Saxon, 38–43; classification of changes, 44; change in outer form of words, 45–75; in inner content, 76–97; losses and additions, 98–152; its effect in producing dialects, 153–169.
 child's acquisition of language, 8–31.
 Chinese language, 111, 224, 225, 237–240, 301.
 class varieties of language, 155.
 classification of languages, 174, 229; its bearing on etymological processes, 313.
 Cochín-Chinese language, 239.
comedy, comic, 142.
 communication, its influence in language, 149–151, 157–159, 164–166; impulse to it the immediate motive to language-making, 149, 283–287.
 community, its part in language-making, 149, 151.
 comparative method in linguistic science, 315.
 comparative philology, 315, 316.
 composition of words, its value as element in growth of language, 121–180, 197–199.
 conjunctions, Indo-European, 209. consciousness, its different degrees in language-making, 135–137, 147, 148.
 conservative force in life of language, 32, 33.
 constraint in language-learning, 22, 23.
control, 84.
 conventionality of words, 19, 283, 288; conventional phraseology, 113.
copper, 78.
 Coptic language, 254.
 Cornish language, 183.
 correspondences, verbal, as signs of relationship, 169, 170.
cost, 55.
count, 55.
crescent, 82–84.
 Croatian language, 182.
 culture, its effect in language-history, 158, 176.
 Cymric languages, 183.
- d*, preterit sign, 42, 53.
 Dakota language, 259, 263.
 Danish language, 181.
 decimal system, its basis, 20.
 denominative verbs, 131, 132.
derivation, 89.
 derivative endings, Indo-European, 208.
develop, 88.
 dialect and language, distinction of, 177, 178.
 dialectic variation in language, 153–178.
 digamma, Greek, 72.
disaster, 99.
disciple, 40, 41.
 dissimilation, euphonic, 71.
 divarication, dialectic, law of, 163–166.
 divine origin of language, 302, 303.
do, 91.
-dom, 123.
double, 88.
 Dravidian family, 244, 245.
duplicity, 88.
- ears*, 33, 74, 75.
 ease or economy, tendency toward, as element in phonetic history of language, 49–74; its constructive effect, 53; same principle in change of meaning, 79.
 education and culture, their effect on history of language, 158.
 Egyptian language, 254–256.
electricity, 142.
 English language, a mixed speech,

- 9, 100, 117-119; its periods, 83; its change from Anglo-Saxon illustrated, 86-83; its inconsistent vowel-system, 56; loss of old words and forms, 99-106; conversion of one part of speech into another, 132, 133.
- Estonian language, 230.
- été*, etc. (French), 54.
- Ethiopian languages, 256.
- Ethiopic or Geéz language, 247.
- ethnology, bearing of language on, 265-276.
- Etruscan language, 188, 275.
- etymology, foundation of linguistic science, 312, 313; its true methods, 313-315.
- expression, various means of, 1, 2, 282, 287; conversion of emotional into intellectual, 283-289; predominance of voice, 291-294.
- extension of sphere of meaning of words, 84-96.
- families of language, 174, 228, 229, 268.
- fare*, 38, 39, 52, 74, 75.
- femina* and its derivatives, 167.
- figurative transfer of meaning, 86-89, 112.
- final part of a word most liable to change, 71, 72.
- Finnish language, 230.
- foot*, 86, 300.
- for*, fore, 94, 129.
- foreign language, its acquisition, 23-25.
- forget*, 89.
- formal expression, objects and means of, 106, 213-227; its derivation from more material elements, 89-96; learned later than material expression by children, 13, 14.
- formative elements, how obtained, 122-130, 197; their uses, 129-131.
- frater* and its derivatives, 167, 171.
- French language, 9, 183.
- fricative sounds, 61, 64, 65.
- Frisian language, 181.
- Gadhelic languages, 183.
- Gaelic language, 183.
- Galla language, 256.
- galvanism*, 142.
- gas*, 17, 120.
- gazette*, 77.
- Geéz language, 247.
- gender in language, 215, 216; in Indo-European, 39, 206, 207; loss in English, 104.
- genetic classification, its value, 277.
- genius of a language, 150.
- genteel*, gentile, gentle, 129.
- Georgian language, 245.
- German language, 181; its history, 160-162.
- German linguistic scholars, 317-319.
- Germanic languages, 181.
- gesture as means of expression, 292.
- go*, 101.
- good*, 12, 111.
- Greek language, 184, 185.
- green*, 14-17, 83, 86, 138.
- Grimm's Law of rotation of mutes, 57, 58, 73.
- growth of language, 84; its modes and processes, 45-152.
- Hamitic family, 254-256.
- harmonic sequence of vowels in Scythian, 71, 234.
- have*, 91-93.
- head*, 86, 87.
- Hebrew language, 246, 247.
- High-German languages, 181.
- Himalayan languages, 240.
- Himyaritic language, 247.
- Hindi language, 187.
- Hindustani language, 187.
- Hottentot language, 257.
- human race, its antiquity, 192; its unity or variety not demonstrable by language, 268-270.
- Hungarian language, 230.
- Huzvareh language, 185.
- Icelandic language, 181.
- ideas antecedent to their names, 137-140.
- imitative principle in language-making, 120, 282, 294-298.
- imply*, 88.
- important*, 88.
- Indian*, 78.
- Indian (Asiatic) languages, 186, 187.
- individual action on language, 144-151, 153, 163; individual varieties of language, 154-156.
- Indo-European family, its establishment, 167-174; its branches, 180-188; importance, 188-191; time and place of unity unknown, 192-194; history of its structural development, 194-212.
- influence*, 99, 102.
- inner form of language, 22.
- inorganic means of formal distinction, 127.
- inosculation*, 137.
- instincts in man, 289, 290.

- institutions composing culture, language one of them, 280, 281, 34.
 intellectual and moral terms derived from physical, 88, 89.
 interjections, 209, 210.
 internal change of vowel in Indo-European, its origin, 125-128.
 invention of new words, 120.
invest, 88.
 Iranian languages, 185, 186.
 Irish language, 183.
 Irish pronunciation of English, 156.
 Iroquois language, 259, 263.
is being, 102, 151.
 Italian language, 184.
 Italic languages, 183.
its, 75, 151.
 Japanese language, 117, 240, 241.
joyful, 81.
Julius, July, 135.
 Kalevala, 230.
 Kirghiz language, 231.
knight, 40.
 Kurdish language, 186.
 language, double sense of the term, 278-280; nature of language, 1, 2, 30, 280, 282, 304; universality as possession of man, 2, 281; limited to man, 2, 3, 281; why thus limited, 305; its discordance, 3; its acquisition by speakers, 7-30; conservative and alterative forces in its life and growth, 32-34; processes of its constant growth or change, 34-152; forces producing this, 144-151; dialectic variation, 153-178; relationships and classification of languages, 169-175; the known families of language, 179-212, 228-264; linguistic structure, 213-227; bearing of language on ethnology, 265-277; historical beginnings of language, 199-202, 226, 227, 298, 299; their origin, 278-309; the science of language, 310-319.
 Lappish language, 230.
 Latin language, 183, 184; its history, 162, 163; borrowing from it, 116, 117.
 laws of language, their true character, 146.
 learned dialects, 159.
less, 122.
 Lettish language, 182.
 Libyan or Berber language, 256.
 life of language, 32-34.
 linguistic science, or science of language, its problems, 4, 15, 16; its character and method, 5, 191, 310-315; difference of its material from that of physical science, 266, 267; its history, 5, 317-319; its relation to Indo-European study, 189-191.
 Lithuanian language, 182.
 Livonian language, 182.
 loss of material from language, 50-53, 98-107.
 Low-German languages, 181.
lunatic, 78.
-ly, 41, 52, 122.
magenta, 16, 133.
magnetism, 142.
 Mahrattim language, 187.
 Malay-Polynesian family, 241-243.
 Malayalam or Malabar language, 244.
 Malayan languages, 242.
man, men, 127.
 man, universal and sole possessor of language, 2, 3, 281, 282, 303-305; his development by means of language, 306, 307; question of his antiquity, 192.
 Manchu language, 236, 237.
 material and form in language, 213-227; material expression reduced to formal, 89-96.
 Maya language, 263.
 Melanesian languages, 242.
-ment (French), 122, 123.
 mental training and shaping in acquisition of language, 19-23.
Mercury, mercurial, 80, 81.
metaphor, 88.
methinks, 42.
 miraculous theory of language, 302, 303.
 mixture of race and language, 9, 271, 272.
 Moabite language, 247.
 modification of vowel (umlaut) in Germanic language, 71, 127, 151.
 Mæso-Gothic language, 181.
 Mongolian language, 235-237.
 monosyllabic family, 237-240.
month, 81.
moon, 80-83.
 Moravian language, 182.
 Mordwinian language, 230.
 morphology, question of a science of, 144.
mulier and its derivatives, 167.
musket, 100.
 Muskokee languages, 263.

- muslin*, 76.
 mute consonants, 61-63.
 name-making process, as part of the growth of language, 134-151, 307.
 nasal mutes, 63.
 Netherlandish language, 181.
 Norwegian language, 181.
 noun-inflection in Indo-European, 205-207.
 obsolescent material in language, 101-103.
obvious, 89.
occur, 89.
of, off, 94, 129, 138.
 Old Bactrian language, 185.
 Old Persian language, 185.
 Old Prussian language, 182.
 Old Saxon language, 181.
one, 129.
 onomatopoeia, its part in language-making, 120, 282, 294-298.
 origin of language, 278-309.
 Oscan language, 184.
 Osmanli Turkish language, 231.
 Ossetic language, 186.
 Ostiak language, 230.
 Otomi language, 262.
 Pali language, 187.
paper, 77.
 Papuan family, 243, 244.
 parts of speech in Indo-European, 209.
 Pehlevi language, 185.
perplex, 88.
 Persian language, 185, 186; its borrowing and lending, 117.
 Phœnician language, 246, 247.
 phonetic change in the growth of language, 49, 73; limit to its explanation, 73, 74.
 physical science, analogy of linguistic science with it, 311, 312.
pine-apple, 115.
planet, 79, 83.
plead, 75.
 Polabian language, 182.
 Polish language, 182.
 Polynesian languages, 242.
 polysynthetic structure, 258-262.
 Portuguese language, 184.
 position as means of formal distinction, 221.
post, 84.
 Prakrit language, 187.
preach, 55.
 prepositions in Indo-European, 94, 208, 209.
priest, 77.
 pronominal roots and pronouns in Indo-European, 201, 207.
 proper names, 79, 80.
proven, 75.
 Provençal language, 184.
 psychology, its part in connection with the study of language, 10, 15, 303, 304.
queen, quean, 168.
 Quichua language, 263, 264.
 race and language, their relations, 8, 9, 271-276.
read, rëad, 126.
 reason, relation of language to, 304, 305.
relation, 88.
 relative pronouns, 95.
 Rheto-Romanic language, 184.
right, 89.
rise, 109.
roll, rôle, 84.
 Romaic or Modern Greek language, 185.
 Romanic languages, 183; their history, 162, 163, 166.
 roots of Indo-European language, 199, 202; of other languages, 226, 227; of Semitic, 248; their value, 298, 299.
 Rumansh language, 184.
 Russian language, 182.
sabbath, 40, 41.
 Samoyed languages, 230.
 Sanskrit language, 186, 187, 117.
saturnine, 81.
savior, 40, 41.
 Scandinavian languages, 181.
 science of language—see linguistic science.
 Scythian family, 230-237; its branches, 230, 231; its structure, 232-234; its doubtful members, 235-237, 244, 245.
 Semitic family, 246-254; its locality and branches, 246, 247; structure, 248-251; question of the origin of this, 251-253; of relationship with other languages, 253, 254.
 semivowels, 65, 66.
 Servian language, 182.
 sex as ground of formal distinction in language, 215, 216.
shall, 93.
 -ship, 123.
 Siamese language, 239.
 sibilants, 64.
 silent letters, 55.
simple, simplicity, 88.

- Skipetar language, 187.
 slang, 112, 118.
 Slavonic languages, 182.
 Slovakian language, 182.
 Slovenian language, 182.
-some, 123.
 sonant and surd, distinction of, 63;
   their interchanges, 70, 71.
sooth, 41, 43.
 Sorbian language, 182.
 South-African family, 256, 257.
 Spanish language, 184.
 specialization of meaning in growth
   of language, 82-84.
 spirants, 65.
spiritus, 137.
 structure in language, 213-227.
such, 55.
 suffixes, how made, 122-130.
suggest, 89.
sun, 80, 81, 83.
 surd and sonant, distinction of, 63.
 Swedish language, 181.
 synthetic and analytic structure, 211,
   212.
 Syrian language, 246, 247.

tabu, 115.
take place, 96.
 Tamil language, 244.
 Tartar or Tatar languages, 230, 231.
 Telugu language, 244.
there is, 96.
thorough, through, 129.
 Tibetan language, 240.
 time in verbal expression, 219, 220.
to, 43, 94, 138.
tragedy, tragic, 142.
transfer, 88.
trivial, 88.
 Tungusic language, 235, 237.
 Tupi-Guarani languages, 262, 264.
 Turanian languages, 231.
 Turkish languages, 230, 231, 117.
 Turkoman language, 231.

 Ugrian languages, 230.
 Uigur language, 231.
 Umbrian language, 184.
 Ural-Altaic family, 231.
 Urdu language, 137.
 usage the law of speech, 141.
 Usbek language, 231.
utter, 129.

 variation of radical vowel (ablaut), 128.
 verb, Indo-European, 202-205; Scythian, 233; Semitic, 248-250;
   American, 260; verbal structure, 218-221; making of verbs from nouns and adjectives, 131, 132.
 vocabulary, different extent of, in individuals and classes, 25, 26.
 voice as means of expression, 287, 289, 291-294.
volume, 77.
 vowels, 61, 65, 66; relation of vowel and consonant, 68; chaotic condition of English vowel system, 55, 56.

 Wallachian language, 184.
was, were, 90.
Wednesday, 81.
 Welsh language, 183.
which, 55.
wife and its kin, 168.
will, 98.
 Wogul language, 230.
 words, are arbitrary and conventional signs for ideas, 19, 283, 288, 288, connected with meaning by a mental association only, 11, 18, 48;
   this how established, 26-30; character of the etymological reason, 143; are not definitions or descriptions, 47, 48; have each its own time, place, occasion, 16, 17, 40, 47; are class-names, 78; change form and meaning separately, 49;
   changes of form, 45-75; changes of meaning, 76-97; figurative change, 86-89; attenuation, 90-95; change
   of pregnancy or dignity, 97, 113;
   variety of meanings, 110, 111; loss
   of words from a language, 98-102;
   additions of new words, 108-133;
   principles governing addition, 134-152.
wot, 93.
 Wotiak language, 230.
wrong, 89.

 Yakut language, 231.

 Zend language, 185.
 Ziryanian language, 230.

THE END.

Woodfall and Kinder, Printers, Mitford Lane, Strand, London, W.C.