

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-07144-4 - Northward Ho!: Including a Narrative of Captain Phipps's Expedition

Albert Hastings Markham

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
DEDICATION . . . . .	vii
PREFACE . . . . .	ix

CHAPTER I.

EARLY POLAR VOYAGES.—FROM THE SIXTH CENTURY
TO THE YEAR 1613.

King Arthur sails with his fleet to Iceland, 2; Alfred the Great narrates the adventurous voyage of Othar the navigator, 3; supposed early discovery of Greenland, and communication with the Eskimos, 6; Spitzbergen discovered, 7; the voyage of an enterprising friar, 10; laws of the "yle of Auleron," 11; Master Robert Thorne submits a memorial to King Henry the Eighth, in consequence of which an expedition sails, 13; Master Hore's enterprise, 15; reduced to extremities, 16; Sebastian Cabot, 19; Burrough sails in the Serch-thrift, 19; Queen Elizabeth's hint, 21; Pet and Jackman, 22; Henry Hudson's daring voyage, 26; return of the Hopewell, 29; a mermaid, 31; the Muscovy Company, 32; Poole's voyage in the Amity, 33; his second voyage, 35; loss of two of his ships, 37; Captain Marmaduke's uncivil conduct, 39; Poole's third voyage, 40; a sleepy Cetacean, 41; an undeserved reputation, 42.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-07144-4 - Northward Ho!: Including a Narrative of Captain Phipps's Expedition

Albert Hastings Markham

Table of Contents

More information

xlii

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER II.

EARLY POLAR VOYAGES (continued), 1613 TO 1773.

Captains Joseph and Edge in joint command of an expedition, 44; the English maintain their right vi et armis, 45; Fotherby's voyage, 46; he takes possession of Spitzbergen, 47; curious antics of a dead whale, 48; Fotherby's last voyage, 49; he advocates Arctic discovery, 51; fatal disruption of an iceberg, 53; Baffin's voyage to the north-west, 54; modern want of enterprise, 57; Captain Wood's unsuccessful voyage to the north-east, 60; King Charles's Hydrographer, 60; his artless simplicity, 63; his argument, 65.

CHAPTER III.

CAPTAIN PHIPPS'S VOYAGE IN 1773.

Revival of the subject of Polar exploration, 69; Mr. Daines Barrington succeeds in getting an expedition, 70; Captain Phipps appointed to command, 71; Nelson a midshipman in the Carcass, 71; officers of the expedition, 72; special fittings of ship, 75; difficulty of procuring men, 76; Sunday neglected, 79.

CHAPTER IV.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE OF A POLAR VOYAGE, 1773.

Mr. Floyd's preface and dedication, 81; his narrative, 83; appointed to the Racehorse, 84; the ships described, 87; great care exhibited in the selection of officers, 88; prospect of war, 90; gloomy anticipations dissipated, 92; a club for seamen formed, 94; conjectures of the men, 95; the "seaman gunner" of the period, 96; bricks and mortar form a part of the ship's stores, 98; rations in the Navy, 100; a pugnacious determination, 102; arrive at Woolwich, 103.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-07144-4 - Northward Ho!: Including a Narrative of Captain Phipps's Expedition

Albert Hastings Markham

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xlili

CHAPTER V.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (continued).

Last night on shore, 106; pardonable trick played on the officials of Sheerness dockyard, 107; departure from England, 109; the Shetland fishermen hospitably entertained, 110; cheap fish, 112; use of condensed water, 113; perpetual day, 114; description of a Snow, 115; mysterious firing of guns, 116; magnetic attraction, 118; necessity of wearing warmer clothes, 121; chaffing the ice-pilots, 121; a walrus seen, 124; Spitzbergen, 125; unfavourable report of the pack given by a whaler, 127; whales seen, 128.

CHAPTER VI.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (continued).

Intelligence received of the loss of seven whalers, 130; a narrow shave, 132; the main body of ice sighted, 134; watering ship from an ice-floe, 137; beset in the ice, 139; a thick fog, 142; a severe collision with the ice, 143; tow the ship clear of rocks, 145; anchor in Fairhaven, 146; description of the anchorage, 147; rambles over the hills, 151; the doctor followed by a black dog, 152; observations determined, 153; notice of a tide, 154.

CHAPTER VII.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (continued).

Ships put to sea, 155; examining the edge of the ice, 156; aggravating irregularities of the pack, 157; an ocean of ice seen, 158; reach a high latitude, 159; unsatisfactory view of the ice, 161; rain, regarded as a nuisance, 163; some hard thumps experienced, 165; a clear sea promotes their happiness, 167.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-07144-4 - Northward Ho!: Including a Narrative of Captain Phipps's Expedition

Albert Hastings Markham

Table of Contents

More information

xliv

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER VIII.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (continued).

A bold assertion, 168 ; charts constructed only for sale, 169 ; the main body of ice never entered by whale ships, 170 ; impostors exposed, 171 ; a French Arctic Munchausen, 172 ; death of one of the crew, 175 ; boat attacked by a walrus, 178 ; unsuccessful attempt to catch fish, 180 ; a large iceberg passed, 181 ; shooting a walrus, 182 ; a ferocious attack, 183 ; Nelson to the rescue ! 184.

CHAPTER IX.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (continued).

The ships beset, 185 ; a cheerless prospect, 186 ; the ice-pilots too uneasy to indulge in merriment, 187 ; the ships drifting helplessly in the ice, 188 ; their situation critical, 191 ; preparations made to abandon the ships, 192 ; provisions insufficient for the winter, 193 ; their condition serious, 194 ; boom boats dragged over the ice, 194 ; exemplary conduct of the crew, 194.

CHAPTER X.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (continued).

Preparations continued for abandoning ships, 195 ; drifting towards the rocks, 196 ; hopes raised only to be crushed, 197 ; a well-dressed midshipman, 199 ; a change for the better, 200 ; the best bower anchor snapped, 202 ; the ships released, 204 ; anchor at Smeerenberg, 206 ; bread made on shore, 208 ; general remarks on the winds and currents, 210 ; decide to return to England, 213.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-07144-4 - Northward Ho!: Including a Narrative of Captain Phipps's Expedition

Albert Hastings Markham

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xlv

CHAPTER XI.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S NARRATIVE (concluded).

Homeward bound, 215 ; a fresh gale, 217 ; attempt to speak a Dutch Dogger, 219 ; a sharp squall, 221 ; unsettled weather, 222 ; ships met, 223 ; a furious gale, 224 ; two guns hove overboard, 226 ; dangers of shipwreck, 227 ; the end of Mr. Floyd's narrative, 228 ; its accuracy, 229 ; his good example, 231.

CHAPTER XII.

VOYAGE OF BUCHAN AND FRANKLIN, 1818.

Rewards for reaching a high latitude, 232 ; Sir John Barrow advocates Polar research, 233 ; the Dorothea and Trent, 235 ; Buchan sails from England, 237 ; a dangerous excursion, 240 ; formation of icebergs, 242 ; narrow escape of a pleasure party, 247 ; reach their highest latitude, 250 ; the ships take the pack, 251 ; reach England, 253.

CHAPTER XIII.

SIR EDWARD PARRY'S ATTEMPT TO REACH THE NORTH

POLE, 1827.

Parry's scheme, 256 ; sails in the Hecla, 258 ; start of the boats, 260 ; their equipment, 261 ; unusual fall of rain, 263 ; routine whilst travelling, 265 ; difficulties of sledging, 273 ; a southerly current, 275 ; the highest latitude reached, 277 ; return of the Hecla, 281.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-07144-4 - Northward Ho!: Including a Narrative of Captain Phipps's Expedition

Albert Hastings Markham

Table of Contents

More information

xlvi

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER XIV.

SIR GEORGE NARES'S POLAR EXPEDITION, 1875—1876.

Exertions of Osborn and Markham, 285; Nares appointed to the command, 287; the Alert and Discovery, 288; sail from Portsmouth, 290, visit the Danish settlements in Greenland, 291; enter Smith Sound, 292; separation of the ships, 295; winter quarters of the Alert, 298; autumn sledging, 299; arrangements for the winter, 302.

CHAPTER XV.

SIR GEORGE NARES'S EXPEDITION (conclusion), 1876.

Start of the sledge travellers, 306; programme of sledging, 307; comparisons between Markham's and Parry's sledge journeys, 310; Markham's journey over the frozen sea, 312; cross the eighty-third parallel, 314; reach the highest latitude ever attained, 316; deplorable condition of the party, 317; return to the ship, 319; decide to return to England, 320; released from winter quarters, 322; arrive in Portsmouth Harbour, 323; letter from Her Majesty, 324; opinions of Sir John Franklin and Sir Edward Parry, 325.

INDEX . . . . . 327