

I N D E X.

- ABBATE, Niccolo, d'Ell, protected by Francis I., ii. 200.
- Abergavenny, Lord, his puerile alarm at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 350.
- Adam, Villiers de l'Isle, his gallant defence of the Isle of Rhodes against the Turks, i. 446-7.
- Adrian, Bishop of Tortosa, withdraws his troops from Navarre into the interior of Spain, i. 376; see note, ib.; elected Pope, i. 422; his efforts to establish a peace alluded to, i. 444; he endeavours to alienate the Venetian States from France, ib.; death of alluded to, i. 512-16.
- Agnadello, Battle of, i. 63.
- Agrippa, Cornelius, a celebrated astrologer, ii. 130; enters the service of Louise de Savoie, ib.; his predictions offend the Regent, and he is obliged to fly from France, ii. 131.
- Aignes Mortes, meeting of the Emperor and Francis I. at, ii. 374-5.
- Aix, Archbishop of, summoned to Paris to devise means for the defence of the city, ii. 53.
- Alamanni Luigi, proscribed by the Emperor Charles V., finds a protector in Francis I., ii. 199; see note, ib.
- Alba, Duke of, takes possession of Pampeluna, i. 84; takes up a position at St. Jean Pied-de-port, i. 85; held in check by the Duke of Bourbon, i. 86; besieged in Pampeluna, ib.; drives the French beyond the Pyrenees, ib.; advises Charles V. to demand a ransom of Francis I. sufficient to recruit the exhausted finances of Spain and cripple France, ii. 64; see note, ib.
- Aleyat, André, a celebrated lawyer, see note, i. 271.
- Aléandro Jerômio, Chancellor of Liège, detects the treacherous conduct of Madame d'Angoulême towards his master the Prince-Bishop of Liège, i. 322.
- Alessandro Farnese. See Paul III.
- Amboise, Louise de Savoie exiled to, i. 18; arrival of the Court at, i. 21.
- Anne de Bretagne, passion of Louis XII. for, i. 6; see note, ib.; affianced to the Archduke Maximilian of Austria, i. 7; passion of the Dauphin afterwards Charles VIII. for, i. 9; proposals of marriage from Charles VIII. to, i. 13; her coronation at St. Denis, ib.; death of Charles VIII., i. 14; promises her hand to Louis XII. conditionally, i. 15; marries Louis XII., i. 16; quarrels with Louise de Savoie, mother of Francis I., i. 18; its consequences, i. 19; her household, i. 21; her ostentation, i. 22; arrives at Amboise, ib.; her influence over the King, i. 24; opposes the marriage of her daughter with the young Count d'Angoulême, i. 25; espouses the cause of the Pope, and remark of the King thereon, i. 26; forbids the attendance of the Bishops of Brittany at the Council at Pisa, ib.; her solicitude on hearing of the King's indisposition, i. 31; resolves to retire into Brittany on the demise of the King, i. 32; her anger at the attempt of the Maréchal de Gié to detain her furniture and jewels, i. 33; influences the King against the Maréchal, i. 34; her hatred to the Maréchal, i. 35; negotiates a marriage for her daughter, the Princess Claude, with the Duke de Luxembourg, i. 36; offers no opposition to the will of the King disposing of the

Anne de Bretagne, continued.

Princess Claude to Francis, Count d'Angoulême, i. 43; her motives explained, ib.; meets the King at Grenoble, i. 67; renewed hopes of, i. 68; religious scruples of, respecting the wars of Louis XII. with the Pope, encourages Julius II. to resist the French, i. 81–2; influences Louis XII. to enter into a league with the Venetian States, i. 91; her second daughter, the Princess Renée, affianced to Prince Charles of Austria, i. 92; stipulations of the Emperor thereon, ib.; death of, i. 117–18; burial of, at St. Denis, ib.

Anne de France entrusted with the guardianship of the Dauphin, afterwards Charles VIII., i. 8; her love for the Duke of Orleans, afterwards Louis XII., i. 10; imprisons the Duke of Orleans, i. 11; withdraws herself from Government on the release of the Duke of Orleans, ib.; death of alluded to, i. 415–16.

Anne de Pisseleu, see D'Heilly, Mademoiselle.

Annebaut, Admiral, his defence of Turin alluded to, ii. 341; see note, ib.; relieves Têrouenne, ii. 354; taken prisoner, ib.; increasing power of, ii. 425; commands an army in Piedmont, ii. 436; his errors at the siege of Roussillon alluded to, ii. 438; supersedes Du Bellay-Langei, ii. 439; appointed Admiral of France, ii. 441; military operations of, at Landrecies, ii. 456–7; advises the King not to allow the Count d'Enghien to engage the Imperialists, ii. 433; despatched to Brussels by Francis I. to conclude a treaty of peace with the Emperor, ii. 511; sails with the French fleet, ii. 530; engages the English fleet at St. Helen's, ii. 533; sinks the Mary Rose, ii. 534; lands at Brighton, and the Isle of Wight, ii. 535; returns to Havre, ii. 536.

Arles, siege of, abandoned, ii. 328.

Army, French, amount and distribution of, previous to crossing the Alps to recover the Milanese, i. 170; the difficulty of the passage of the Alps overcome by a Piedmontese peasant, i. 171; vanguard of the, forces the Durance, i. 172–3;

Army, French, continued.

the passage of the Alps described, i. 173; perseverance of the troops, i. 174; the vanguard enters Italy, ib.; capture of Prosper Colonna, i. 175–6–7; taking of Villa Franca, i. 178; Alessandria and Tortona taken, i. 179; head quarters of the King at Marignano, i. 183; the junction of the Swiss and Spanish armies prevented by an accident, ib.; General d'Alviano at Lodi, i. 184; the battle of Marignano, i. 186–192; loss of the French at Marignano, i. 192–3; marches upon Milan, i. 197; the King disbands the, i. 210; the Emperor Maximilian compels the French to shut themselves up in Milan, i. 211; arrival of reinforcements, ib.; refusal of the Swiss mercenaries to act with the French against their own countrymen, i. 212; siege of Milan raised, i. 213; Brescia again taken, i. 214; Bayard defends the city of Mézières, i. 385–393; part of, disbanded, i. 396; exists by plunder in Italy, i. 399; critical position of, i. 400; critical position of Marshal Lautrec at Milan, i. 405–6; the army retires to Milan, i. 408; retreats to Como, i. 409; takes up its winter quarters at Cremona, ib.; attacks Milan but repulsed, i. 425; takes Novarra, but repulsed before Pavia, ib.; arrears of pay of, i. 426; demand to be led against the enemy, ib.; attack Colonna at Bicocca, i. 427–8–9; retires to Cremona, ib.; invested at Cremona by Colonna, i. 431–2; evacuates Lombardy, i. 433; excesses of the troops for want of pay, i. 442–3; relief of Fontarabia by, i. 458–9; the Duke de Vendôme ordered to relieve Têrouenne, i. 467; assembles at Lyons previous to again invading Italy, i. 469; command of the army against Italy given to Bonnivet, i. 491; paralysed by the defection of the Constable of France, i. 507; the Duke de Guise repulses the Germans at Franche-Comté, i. 508; the Spaniards are driven back upon Fontarabia by Marshal Lautrec, ib.; Marshals Tremouille and Vendôme compel the retreat of the Duke of Norfolk, i. 510; Bonnivet commands the army in Italy, i. 511; discontent of the troops at the appointment of Bonnavet, ib.; the French force in Italy, i. 512; defence of Cremona by M. d'Herbouville, ib.; Bonnavet compels the Imperialists to retreat to Milan, i. 513; blockades Milan, i. 514; raises the siege of Milan, i. 515; Bonnavet detaches Renzo de Ceri to besiege Arona, i. 517; repulsed, i. 518; Bayard detached to Rebec, but attacked by Pescara with a superior force, and compelled to retreat, i. 518-19-21-2; Bonnavet retreats to Novara, pursued by the Duke de Bourbon, i. 523; Bonnavet wounded, i. 525; Count de Vandenesse and Bayard assume the command of, ib.; death of Vandenesse and Bayard, i. 526-7; grief of the soldiers at the death of Bayard, i. 530; the Duke de Lorraine and Richard de la Pole harass the imperial army under the Duke de Bourbon, ii. 6; Maréchal de Chabannes occupies Avignon, ib.; siege of Marseilles, ii. 4-9; Milan captured, ii. 13; encamps at Mirabelle, assaults Pavia and is repulsed, ii. 15-16; position of the army before Pavia, ii. 18; Duke d'Aubigny commands 9,000 men against the Spaniards, ii. 19; thinned by sickness and desertions before Pavia, ii. 21; the Swiss and Italians desert from, before the battle of Pavia, ii. 22; castle of Chiavenna taken, ib.; 4,000 Italians surprised by the Imperialists and destroyed, ii. 23; Palavicino defeated by the Imperialists, ib.; position of at Pavia, ib.; battle of Pavia fatal to, ii. 27-35; loss of the French at the battle of Pavia, ii. 39-40-1; evacuates Italy, ii. 41; the annihilation of, after the battle of Pavia alluded to, ii. 50; return of the remnant of the, from Italy, ii. 54; success of Marshal de Lautrec in the Milanese, ii. 183; Pavia retaken, ib.; Naples besieged, ii. 184; the plague attacks the, ii. 185; death of Marshal Lautrec, ib.; retires from Naples, and deaths of Navarra and Saluzzo, ib.; Italy again evacuated by, ib.; reorganized by Francis, ii.

Army, French, continued.

Army, French, continued.

277; defence of Fossano by, ii. 316; manœuvres of, in Provence, ii. 325-6-7; reinforced by 20,000 Swiss and 6,000 Germans, ii. 328; Francis heads the army in person, ii. 329; pursues the Imperialists, ii. 332; siege of Turin raised, ii. 337; at St. Rignier and Peronne, ii. 338-9; Hesdin taken by siege, ii. 351; St. Pol defended by, ii. 352; Annebaut relieves Téroouenne, ii. 354; mutiny of, in Piedmont, ii. 356; the Pas-de-Suze forced by, ii. 359-60; commences a campaign in the Low Countries, ii. 435; disposition of, ii. 436; the Maréchal de Gueldres ravages the Low Countries, ii. 437; the Duke of Orleans takes Luxembourg, ii. 439; defeats the Imperialists at Sittard, ii. 456; besieges Binche, ii. 457; takes Luxembourg, ii. 463; the Count d'Enghien defeats Marquis del Guasto, ii. 487-8; enters Picardy, ii. 513; attacks Boulogne and repulsed, ii. 514-15; retrospect of the campaign of 1544, ii. 515; enters Picardy, ii. 530-1; invades the Terra d'Oye, ii. 541-2.

Army, Imperialist. Prosper Colonna strengthens the army of the empire, i. 399; threatens Parma, i. 406; a quarrel between the generals neutralises the efforts of the, i. 407; Prosper Colonna crosses the Po, ib.; drives the French out of Milan, i. 408; retakes Como, i. 409; repulses the French before Milan, i. 425; surrenders Navarra, ib.; Prosper Colonna defends Pavia, ib.; Prosper Colonna at Bicocca, i. 426; defeats Marshal Lautrec, and compels him to retreat to Cremona, i. 427-8-9; Colonna invests Cremona, i. 431; drives the French out of Lombardy, i. 432-3; Genoa taken by treachery, and cruelty of the Imperialist generals, i. 434; advances within eleven leagues of Paris, i. 491; defeated by the Duke de Vendôme, ib.; jealousy amongst the Imperialist generals prevents a simultaneous attack upon France, i. 508; the command of the papal troops entrusted to the Duke of Mantua, i. 512; compelled to retreat to Milan before Bonnavet, i. 513; Milan

- Army, Imperialist, continued.
 blockaded by the French, i. 514; the French retire from Milan, i. 515; death of Colonna, ib.; Marquis de Pescara attacks Bayard at Rebec, and compels him to retreat, i. 521; the Duke of Bourbon compels Bonnivet to retreat, i. 523-4-5; position of the Duke de Bourbon at the siege of Marseilles, ii. 6; retreats from Marseilles, ii. 9; surrenders Milan, ii. 13; repulses the French at the siege of Pavia, ii. 16; position of, at Pavia, ii. 18; mutinous state of the garrison of Pavia, ii. 19-20-1; joined by the Duke de Bourbon at the head of a German force, ii. 21; the main body of the Imperialists march upon Pavia, ii. 22; 4,000 Italians surprised and destroyed by, ii. 23; Palavacino taken prisoner at Casal-Maggiore, ib.; battle of Pavia, ii. 26-7-8-9; loss of the Imperialists at the battle of Pavia, ii. 41; oppression of the Imperial soldiers in Italy, ii. 63; mutiny for pay, ii. 65; oppresses the Italian people, ii. 101; excesses of, at Milan, alluded to, ii. 115; march against Rome, and sack the city, ii. 118-19; defence of Naples, ii. 184; the French again expelled from Italy by, ii. 185; Charles V. takes Tunis, and releases 20,000 Christian slaves, ii. 278; invades Provence, ii. 317; progress of, ii. 325; pillages Aix, ii. 326; sufferings of, ii. 328; retreat of, ii. 331; slaughter of, ii. 332; quartered in the Milanese, ii. 333; enter Picardy, ii. 338; checked at St. Rignier, ib.; takes Guise, ib.; besieges Peronne, and repulsed, ii. 339; retreats from Provence, ii. 340; invests St. Pol, ii. 352; at Téroouenne, ii. 353-4; takes Carmagnole, ii. 357; fortifies the Pas-de-Suze, ii. 359; raises the siege of Pignerol, and encamps at Moncalier, ii. 360; lands in Africa, under Charles V., ii. 434; dispersed by a tempest, ii. ib.; returns to Spain, ib.; relieves Roussillon, ii. 438; defeated at Sittard, ii. 456; re-organized by the Emperor, ii. 460; operations of the, in the duchy of Cleves, ii. 461; Landrecies, Guise, and Luxembourg, besieged by, ii. 464-5-6; takes Cambray, ii. 466; defeated at Carmagnola, ii. 487-8; invades France under Charles V. and Henry VIII., ii. 493-4-5; besieges St. Dizier, ii. 498; operations of, at Chalons, ii. 507; revictualled through the agency of Madame d'Etampes, ii. 509; advance of, on Paris, ii. 510; retrospect of the campaign of 1544, ii. 515.
- Army, Imperialist, continued.
- Army, English, under the Earl of Surrey, destroys several towns on the coast of Normandy and Brittany, i. 465; besieges Hesdin, i. 468; compelled to retreat, ib.; commits wanton cruelties, i. 469; advances within eleven leagues of Paris, i. 491; driven back by the Duke de Vendôme, ib.; alarm of Francis at the advance of the, i. 508; amount of, under the Duke of Norfolk, ib.; retreats to Calais, and sails for England, i. 510.
- Arona, siege of, alluded to, i. 517-18.
- Asola, occupation of, by Marquis of Mantua, alluded to, i. 65.
- Ast, countyship of, ceded by the Emperor to the Duke of Savoy, ii. 213; citizens of, refuse admittance to the Imperialists, ii. 490.
- Astrologers, influence of the, upon the people, ii. 130-1.
- Baglioni, Jean Paul, hereditary sovereign of Perousá, i. 51; attacked by Pope Julius II., ib.
- Baillet, M., detects the gasconnade of M. de Brion Chabot, i. 509.
- Barbarossa, King of Algiers, defeated by Charles V. before Tunis, ii. 278; ordered by Solyman to cooperate with the French, ii. 455; anchors at Calabria, ii. 467; burns the city of Reggio, ib.; joined by Count d'Enghien, attacks Nice, and repulsed, ii. 469; burns Nice, ii. 470; enormities perpetrated by, ii. 471.
- Barbesieux, Seigneur de, entrusted with the defence of Marseilles, ii. 310; see note, ib.
- Baudemanche, Gilbert, his arrest and trial alluded to, i. 490; acquitted by the Parliament of Paris, i. 492.
- Bayard, Chevalier de, valour of, at the height of Belvidere, near Genoa, i. 54; see note, ib.; one of the leaders in Louis XII's army against Venice, i. 62; skilful movement of, at the battle of Agnello, i. 63; joins the Marquis de la Palice, against the Venetians, i. 67; wounded at Brescia, i. 72; reconnoitres the enemy's position at Ravenna, i. 74; at the battle of Ravenna, i. 75; attacks Henry VIII.'s army, and carries off a gun, i. 101; taken prisoner by the English, and wins his ransom, i. 103-4-5-6-7; proceeds to Flanders; appointed lieutenant-general of Dauphiny, i. 171; position of, in the army for the recovery of the Milanese, ib.; surprises and captures Prosper Colonna, i. 175-6-7; solicits permission from the King to attack the enemy, i. 182-3; bravery of, at the battle of Marignano, i. 189; nearly taken prisoner, i. 190; supplied with a third horse by the Duke de Lorraine, ib.; advises Francis not to pursue the Swiss after the battle of Marignano, i. 192; acknowledged the hero of Marignano, i. 194; confers knighthood on Francis I. on the field of battle, i. 195; description of the ceremony, and the speech of, i. 196; requests permission from Francis I. to defend the town of Mézières, i. 385; compels the sheriff of the town to take an oath never to advise a surrender, i. 387; summoned to surrender by the Imperial commanders, i. 388; his heroic reply, i. 389; by a ruse de guerre he causes a misunderstanding between the Imperial generals, i. 390-1; makes a successful sortie, i. 392; the ruse of the bottle of wine, ib.; causes the Count de Nassau to raise the siege of Mézières, i. 393; Francis I. confers the order of Philip Augustus upon, ib.; gratitude of the citizens of Mézières to, ib.; joins the French army in Italy, i. 425; detached to Vigevano, i. 515; detached to Rebec to intercept provisions to Milan, i. 518; his interview with Bonnivet thereon, i. 519; defends Rebec, i. 520; demands reinforcements from Bonnivet, ib.; suspects Bonnivet of placing him in an ambush, i. 521; his vigilance, ib.; attacked by Pescara with an overwhelming force, and compelled to fly, i. 522; his gallantry, ib.; accuses Bonnivet of treachery, i. 523; entrusted with the command of the troops by Bonnivet, i. 525; wounded in the loins, i. 526; his last moments, ib.; grief of the soldiers for, i. 527; visited by the Imperial general, ib.; homage of the Imperialist general to, i. 528; visited by the Duke de Bourbon, ib.; dying rebuke of, to Bourbon, ib.; death of, i. 529; his funeral, ib.

Bayard, continued.

Bayard, continued.

Beaurain, Count de, his visit to the Duke de Bourbon, i. 439; induces the duke to revolt, i. 440; visits England and negotiates with Henry VIII, i. 441; joins the English army under the Duke of Norfolk at Calais, i. 508; bears the conditions of the Emperor to Francis I, ii. 66; see note, ib.
Beaujeu, Madame de, see Anne de France.

— Sire de, entrusted by Louis XI. with the keeping of the Dauphin, afterwards Charles VIII, i. 8; see note, ib.

Bédier Noël, a celebrated syndic, his power over the minds of the Parisians alluded to, ii. 132.

Bellay, Jean du, Bishop of Bayonne, ambassador of Francis I, at the Court of England, ii. 174; Bishop of Paris, delivers a Latin oration to the Pope, ii. 253-4; provisions Paris, ii. 340-1.

— Guillaume du, his family alluded to, ii. 201; see note, ib.; arranges a meeting between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 228.

— Martin du, intercedes for the Duke of Wirtemberg with Francis I., ii. 249; taken prisoner, ii. 353; appointed Counsellor to the Duke of Orleans, ii. 358; Lieutenant-General in Piedmont, ii. 427; accuses the Marquis del Guasto of murdering two French ambassadors, ii. 428-9; superceded by Annebaut in Piedmont, ii. 439; death of, ii. 440; exclamation of Charles V. on hearing of his death, ib.

Bentivoglio, Jean, attacked by Pope Julius II, retires from Bologna to Milan, i. 51-2.

- Berquin, Louis de, his re-arrest and trial alluded to, ii. 207; see note, ib.; burnt for heresy, ii. 208.
- Biagrasso, evacuated by Bonnivet, i. 524; besieged and taken by Sforza, ib.
- Bibbiena, Cardinal de, letter from the Pope, Leo X, to, alluded to, i. 302.
- Bicocca, Battle of, i. 426–7–8.
- Bier, Sire du, his gallant resistance to the Earl of Surrey at the siege of Hesdin, alluded to, i. 468.
- Biez, Maréchal de, his operations against Boulogne, ii. 539; invades the Terra d'Oye, ii. 541.
- Binche, siege of, ii. 457.
- Black Bands, forces of the Duke de Gueldres; see note, i. 187.
- Bohemia, King of, votes for Charles V. at the diet of Frankfort, i. 333.
- Boissy, Adrian de, receives a Cardinal's hat, i. 209.
- Gouffier de, appointed Grand Master, i. 145; attached to the embassy of Admiral de Bonnivet, to the English Court, i. 290; death of, i. 329; his death a serious loss to Francis I, ib.; his influence over Francis I. alluded to, i. 338–9.
- de M., one of the witnesses to the secret protest of the King when a prisoner, ii. 92.
- Boleyn, Sir Thomas, one of the witnesses to the betrothal of the Dauphin to the Princess Mary of England, i. 294; officiates as proxy for Henry VIII, at the baptism of the second son of Francis I., i. 335.
- Anna, one of the maids of honour to the Princess Mary of England, at her marriage with Louis XII, at Abbeville, i. 126; her thirst for admiration, alluded to, ib.; attracts the attention of the Princess Claude, ib.
- Boncar, M. de, volunteers with the Chevalier Bayard to defend the city of Mézières, i. 335.
- Bonnivet, Admiral; see Gouffier Guillaume.
- Bontems, Pierre, his works in the palace of Chambord alluded to, ii. 126–7.
- Bossut, Nicholas de, Sire de Longueval, position of, in Brabant, ii. 436; instigated by the Duchess Bossut, Nicholas de, continued.
- d'Etampes, betrays the designs of Francis to the Emperor, ii. 438.
- Boulogne, taken by Henry VIII, ii. 510; attack upon, by the Dauphin, ii. 514–15; military operations before, ii. 539.
- Bourbon, Duke de, see Montpensier, Charles de.
- , Suzanne de, one of the suite of Anne de Bretagne, i. 22.
- , François de, killed at the battle of Marignano, i. 192.
- , Antoine de, Duke de Vendôme, his marriage with Jeanne de Navarre alluded to, ii. 463; see Vendôme, Duke de.
- Bourg, Antoine du, President of the Parliament of Paris, appointed to the Chancellorship, ii. 288; death of, ii. 365.
- Boutières, M. de, assumes the command of the army at Turin, ii. 440; see note, ib.; superseded in his command in Piedmont by the Count d'Enghien, ii. 472; joins the army under the Count d'Enghien, ii. 487.
- Boyer, Bishop of Bourges, created a Cardinal, i. 322.
- Brancas, Madame de, Comptroller of the Household of Louise de Savoie, ii. 106–7.
- Brandenbourg, Albert de, Archbishop of Mayence, one of the Electors of Germany, i. 299; see note; his speech at the Electoral Diet at Frankfort, in favour of Charles V, i. 331.
- , Joachim, Marquis de, one of the Electors of Germany, i. 300; votes for Charles V. at the Diet of Frankfort, i. 333.
- Brantôme, quoted as the panegyrist of Marguerite de Valois, i. 41; his remarks upon the position of the Princess Claude and Mary of England alluded to, i. 129–30; his heinous slander on Queen Mary alluded to, i. 136; his description of the Court circle of Queen Claude, i. 149; observations of, respecting the intrigue of Admiral de Bonnivet and the Countess de Châteaubriand, i. 258.
- Brescia, taken by Louis XII, i. 64; taken by the French, under Gaston de Foix, i. 71; given up to pillage, i. 72; siege of, raised by the Emperor Maximilian, i. 211 ;

- Brescia, continued.
 again captured by the French,
 i. 214.
- Bretons, the discontent of, at the cession of Brittany to Francis I,
 i. 135-6.
- Breuil, Pierre du, a Protestant preacher, burnt by order of Charles V., ii. 517-18.
- Brézé, Louis de, Seneschal of Normandy, informs Francis of the treason of the Duke de Bourbon,
 i. 469 ; marries Diana of Poitiers,
 i. 494 ; his jealousy, ib. ; his pedigree, i. 495 ; endeavours to persuade his wife not to attempt to save the life of her father, i. 496-7 ; his reason for not accompanying his wife to Court, i. 498.
- , Madame de ; see Diana of Poitiers.
- Briandas, a Court jester, betrays the private conversation of the Dauphin to the King, ii. 526-7.
- Bricot, Thomas, a canon of Notre Dame, speech of, at the Assembly of the States-General, i. 45.
- Brindici, cession of, to the King of Spain, alluded to, i. 65.
- Brion, Bertrand, his arrest and trial alluded to, i. 490 ; despatched by Francis I. to Paris as attendant to the Dauphin, ii. 91 ; one of the witnesses to the secret protest of the King when a prisoner, ii. 92.
- Brittany, efforts of Francis to annex the duchy of, to the Crown of France, ii. 219 ; the Bretons resist the claim, ib. ; Louis des Desserts undertakes to secure their consent, ii. 220 ; the duchy united to the French throne, ii. 221.
- Brosse, Count Jean de, his impoverished condition alluded to,
 ii. 148 ; marries Mademoiselle
 de Heilly, and is created Duke d'Etampes, ii. 149.
- Bruto, a Florentine historian, protected by Francis I, ii. 200.
- Bucet, Charles de, Count de Sancerre, his death alluded to, ii. 351.
- Budée, Guillaume, sent by Francis I.
 as ambassador to Rome, i. 158 ;
see note, ib. ; advises Francis I. to invite Erasmus to France, i. 272.
- Buren, Count de, invests Saint-Pol, and carries it by assault, ii. 352-3 ;
see note, ib. ; destroys Saint-Pol,
ib. ; marches upon Téroouenne, ib. ;
- Buren, Count de, continued.
 at the siege of Téroouenne, ii.
 354-5 ; joins the Earl of Surrey upon the French frontier, i. 466.
- Burgundy revolts against Louis XII,
 i. 112 ; States of refuse allegiance to the Emperor Charles V., ii. 99.
- , herald to the Emperor
 Charles V., detained by Francis I.
 in Fontarabia, i. 179 ; pretexts of the King of France to evade an interview with, i. 180 ; follows Francis to Paris, ib. ; refuses to remove his coat-of-mail, ib. ; Francis grants him an audience, but refuses to let him deliver the hostile message of the Emperor, ii.
 181-2 ; leaves France, ib.
- Burie, M. de, taken prisoner at Casal, ii. 341 ; see note, ib.
- Cadamosto, Carlo, taken prisoner at Villa Franca, i. 178.
- Cesar Borgia, delivers to Louis XII.
 the Pope's Bull dissolving his marriage with Jeanne de France, i.
 15.
- Calais, conference at, between the Ministers of France and Germany,
 i. 382 ; second conference at,
 between the Ministers of Charles and Francis, i. 409.
- Calvimont, M. de, his withholding the message of Charles V. to Francis I. alluded to, ii. 176 ;
 his explanation, ib.
- Calvin, tenets of, promulgated through France, ii. 278-9.
- Cambray, treaty of, alluded to, i.
 61-2 ; ii. 157-210.
- Camilla, Julio, an Italian impostor,
 i. 271 ; attempts to teach Francis I.
 Latin and Greek in one month,
 i. 272.
- Cardona, Raymond de, avoids giving battle to Gaston de Foix, i. 73 ;
 description of, by Pope Julius II, see note, ib. ; flight of, from the battle of Ravenna, i. 74 ; stigmatized by Colonna as the ' Miscreant Moor,' i. 75 ; position of, in the neighbourhood of Verona, i. 179 ; refuses to pass the Po, and by his delays prevents the co-operation of the Swiss, i. 184.
- Carignano, battle of, ii. 488-9.
- Carmagnole, besieged and taken by the Marquis del Guasto, ii.
 357.
- Carraquon, burning of the, ii. 531-2.

- Caravaggio, taken by assault by Louis XII, i. 64.
- Castelnau, M. de, death of, in a street brawl, ii. 290.
- Castiglione, Balthasar, applied to, by the Emperor Charles V, to become his second in his anticipated duel with Francis I, ii. 179; insulted by one of the lacqueys of Maraviglio, ii. 244; his death, ii. 246.
- Castille, Constable of, at the ratification of the treaty of Cambrai, and exchange of the French princes, ii. 189.
- Catherine de' Medici, her reception by the Queen of France, ii. 251-2; preliminaries of her marriage with the Duke of Orleans alluded to, ii. 255; remark of Philippe Strozzi respecting her dower, ii. 256 the Emperor endeavours to prevent her marriage, ib.; her marriage described, ii. 257-8; her position at the Court of Francis, ii. 263; state of the French Court, on her marriage, ii. 265; her personal appearance, ii. 266; character of, alluded to, ib.; becomes the friend of Diana of Poitiers, ii. 267; her Court ladies, ii. 269; suspected of poisoning the Dauphin, ii. 324-5; her dissimulation alluded to, ii. 346-7; her policy towards Diana of Poitiers, ii. 442; her Court described, ii. 443; her power over Francis, ii. 444-5; her extraordinary self-command alluded to, ib.
- Cellini, Benvenuto, arrives in France, ii. 421.
- Céri, Renzo de, besieges Arona, but is repulsed, i. 517-18; impedes the mining operations of the Imperialists at the siege of Marseilles, ii. 8.
- Cervia, capture of, alluded to, i. 65.
- Chabannes, Maréchal de, joins the French army in Italy with supplies, i. 425; attacks the rear of the Imperialists on their retreat from France, ii. 9.
- Chabot, Philippe, Sire de Brion, affection of Francis I. for, alluded to, i. 146; see note, ib.; his exaggerations of the criminal intentions of the Bourbon conspiracy alluded to, i. 491; his gasconade, on being sent to assure the citizens of Paris that Marshal Ven-
- Chabot, continued.
dôme was marching to their aid, i. 509; despatched by the King to assure the Marseillaise of relief, ii. 4; created an admiral, ii. 106; invested with the Order of the Garter by Henry VIII, ii. 229; overruns the Duchy of Savoy, ii. 285; fortifies the frontier of France ii. 309-10; arrest of, ii. 403-4; condemned to death, ii. 406; pardoned by the King, ib., ii. 407; attributes his disgrace to Montmorenci, ii. 408; his death, ib.
- Challon, Claudine de, her marriage with Count Henry de Nassau alluded to, i. 152.
- Chalnav, hunting seat of, alluded to, ii. 222.
- Chalon de Philibert, see Orange, Prince of.
- Chambord, palace of, description of, ii. 125; palace of, alluded to, ii. 222.
- Chambre Ardente, members of the, their duties described, ii. 131.
- Champdivers, Odette de, introduces cards to amuse Charles VI, i. 236.
- Champion, Clermont, M., betrays the intended flight of the French King to Charles V, ii. 86.
- Charles V. sends ambassadors to congratulate Francis on his accession, i. 150; is promised the hand of the Princess Renée, ib.; accession of, to the throne of Spain, i. 214; his early application to state affairs, i. 217; his prospects, i. 218; forms an alliance with Francis, i. 220; conditions of the peace of Noyon, i. 221; promises to espouse the infant daughter of Francis I., ib.; induces the Emperor Maximilian to accede to the treaty of Noyon, i. 222; his increasing power induces Francis to form an alliance with England, i. 287; aspires to be Emperor of Germany, i. 299-300-1-2; his diplomatic talents alluded to, i. 303; his pretensions for the empire contrasted with those of Francis I., i. 309; personal appearance of, i. 310; his position at the death of Cardinal Ximènés, i. 311; unostentatiously strengthens his party, i. 313; secures the votes of the Marquis of Brandebourg and the Bishop of Mayence, i. 314; Robert de la

Charles V. continued.

Mark and the Prince-bishop of Liège join the cause of, i. 323; Seckingen takes part with the King, i. 325; attacks and disperses some Turkish galleys, i. 326; proclaimed Emperor of Germany, i. 333; invited to proceed to his new dominions, i. 334; fails to fulfil his engagement relative to the kingdom of Navarre, i. 341; misunderstanding between the Courts of France and Spain, i. 342; the critical position of Spain alluded to, ib.; visits England, i. 344; his interview with Henry VIII, i. 345; embarks for Flanders, ib.; secures the interest of Cardinal Wolsey, i. 346; appoints Wolsey Bishop of Badajoz and Valencia, i. 366; his meeting with Henry VIII. at Gravelines, ib.; accompanies Henry VIII. to Calais, i. 367; departs for Aix-la-Chapelle, where he is crowned King of the Romans and Emperor of Germany, i. 368; convokes a diet of the empire at Worms, to suppress the doctrines of Luther, i. 370; his bad faith with Francis I. alluded to, i. 372; quarrels with Robert de la Mark, ib.; defied by him, i. 374; enters into a league with the Pope to drive the French out of Italy, i. 375; his Spanish subjects revolt, i. 376; accuses Francis I. of sheltering his enemies, ib.; despatches the Count de Nassau to ravage the territories of Robert de la Mark, i. 380; his appeal to the English king to mediate between him and Francis I. alluded to, ib.; his duplicity, i. 381-2; disregards the treaty of Noyon, i. 383; betrothed to the Princess Mary of England, ib.; joins his retreating army near Valenciennes, i. 394-6; his formidable power alluded to, i. 423; visits England and induces Henry VIII. to ratify the betrothal of the Princess Mary, and to land 40,000 men in France, i. 424; induces the Duke de Bourbon to rebel against Francis I, i. 439; promises the Duke the hand of his sister, the widowed Queen of Portugal, i. 440; averse to act in concert with Francis I. against the Turks, i. 446; lands at Dover,

Charles V. continued.

his reception by Henry VIII, i. 460-1; his politic conduct with Cardinal Wolsey, ib.; invested by Henry VIII. with the Order of the Garter, ib.; his bad faith to the Duke de Bourbon, i. 507; causes the defeat of Cardinal Wolsey for the popedom, i. 517; illness of, alluded to, ii. 19; refuses to restore the ecclesiastical ornaments taken from the churches of Pavia to pay his troops, ii. 21; his hypocrisy on receiving the intelligence of the capture of Francis I, ii. 45; his crafty policy with Henry VIII, ii. 61-2; concludes a truce with France, ii. 63; the ransom of the French king discussed in the council of, ii. 64; Louise de Savoie endeavours to ingratiate herself by betraying her allies to the Emperor, ii. 64-5; terms imposed by Charles upon Francis I. for his release from captivity, ii. 66-7; exultation of Charles on hearing that the French king was in a Spanish fortress, ii. 70; rewards the Viceroy of Naples for bringing Francis I. to Spain, ib.; visits the sick-bed of the French king, ii. 72; Charles's hypocrisy, ii. 73; warned of the secret league against him, ii. 75; a sobriquet, ii. 76; his evasive reply to Louise de Savoie on receiving her warning of the secret league against him, ib.; receives Marguerite de Valois at the gates of Madrid, ii. 78; his bad faith alluded to, ii. 79; removes the dowager Queen of Portugal to Guadaloupe to avoid her meeting with Marguerite de Valois, ii. 80; grants an audience to Marguerite de Valois, ii. 80-2-3-4; receives intelligence of the intended flight of Francis I, ii. 86; meditates the arrest of Marguerite de Valois, ii. 87; demands of the Emperor for the release of the French King, ii. 92-3-4; indignation of, on hearing of the breach of faith of Francis I, ii. 100; summons Francis to return to Madrid as his prisoner, ii. 101; his army oppresses the Italian people, ii. 101; his position in Italy, ii. 117; disclaims the responsibility of the sack of Rome, ii. 139; the remonstrances of his

Charles V. continued.

council prevent the removal of the Pope to Spain, ii. 140; his power in Italy threatened by the armies of England and France, ii. 140; the Kings of France and England declare war against, ii. 174; his reply to the heralds of France and England, ii. 175; accuses Francis I. of basely violating his pledge given at Madrid, ii. 176; defies the French king, ib.; his letter to Francis I. challenging him to single combat, ii. 179; applies to Balthasar Castiglione to become his second, ib.; Francis I. refuses to allow Burgundy, the herald, to deliver his challenge, i. 180-2; the exhausted state of his treasury alluded to, ii. 185-6; ratifies a treaty of peace with the Pope, ii. 186; concessions of, at La Paix des Dames, ii. 187-8; advised to invest Francisco Sforza with the duchy of Milan, ii. 210; meeting between the Pope and the Emperor, ii. 211; concludes a treaty with the Pope, ib.; coronation of, at Bologna, ii. 212; restores the Milanese to Sforza, ib.; indifference of the Emperor to the claims of the French crown, ii. 213; appoints the Queen-Dowager of Hungary Governante of the Low Countries, ii. 224; proceeds to Flanders, ib.; persuades the Pope to refuse to sanction the divorce of Henry VIII. and Katherine of Aragon, ii. 225; convenes a diet at Spires, and enforces the observance of church ceremonies, ib.; his contempt for the German Protestants, ii. 226; his diet at Augsburg, ib.; summons Francis to send an army against the Turks, ii. 231; takes the field against Solyman and compels him to retreat, ii. 232; his advice to the Pope respecting the marriage of his niece Catherine de' Medici with the Duke of Orleans, ii. 233; meets the Pope at Bologna, ii. 234; the dismissal of Maraviglia from the Court of Milan, demanded by, ii. 243; bestows the hand of his niece Christina on the Duke of Milan, ii. 248-9; endeavours to prevent the marriage of Catherine de' Medici with the Duke of Orleans, ii. 256; makes propositions of friendship and alliance to Francis, ii. 276; takes Tunis, and releases 20,000 Christian slaves, ii. 278; popularity of the Emperor, ib.; applied to by the Duke of Savoy for protection against France, ii. 285; restores Alessandro de' Medici to the sovereignty of Florence, ii. 286-7; offers to concede the Duchy of Milan to the Duke d'Angoulême, ii. 299; requests the Duke d'Orleans to accompany him to Algiers, ii. 302; secures the fealty of Alessandro de' Medici by marriage, ib.; renews his alliance with the Venetians, ib.; renews his negotiations with Francis respecting the Milanese, ii. 301; makes overtures to the Pope and Henry VIII, ib.; proceeds to Rome, and accuses Francis before the Conclave, ii. 302; he temporises with the French ambassadors, ii. 303; repents of his accusation against Francis, ii. 304; his address to the Conclave is garbled and despatched to France, ii. 305; interview of, with the Cardinal de Lorraine on the affair of the Milanese, ii. 306-7; his superstition, ii. 307; excites the German Protestants against Francis, ii. 308; declares himself Suzerain of Provence, ii. 310-11; despatches da Leyva to besiege Turin, ii. 315; determines to invade Provence, ii. 317; surprises a French force at Tourbes, ib.; accused of promoting the death of the Dauphin by poison, ii. 323; indignation of, ii. 324; enters Aix and destroys the town, ii. 326; sufferings of his troops and death of his general, Antonio da Leyva, ii. 328; abandons the siege of Arles, ib.; death of his general, De la Vega, ii. 332; embarks at Genoa for Spain, ii. 333; is overtaken by a violent storm, ib.; his failure alluded to, ib.; the invasion of France by, causes the Italian princes to form a league, ii. 337; cited by Francis I. to appear before the French tribunals, ii. 351; disregards the summons, ib.; truce between France, Picardy, and the Low Countries, proposed by, ii. 356; endeavours to effect a general peace throughout Europe, ii. 363; offers the hand of his niece to the Duke of Orleans, ib.; the Pope arranges an interview between Francis and the Emperor, ii. 369; the Pope mediates between the two potentates, ii. 372; concludes a truce for ten years with Francis, ii. 373; returns to Barcelona, ib.; the Emperor invites Francis to a personal interview, ii. 374; meets Francis at Aignes Mortes, ii. 375; his admiration of the beauties of the French Court, ib.; the city of Ghent revolts against the Emperor, ii. 380; requests permission to traverse France, ii. 381; arrives at Bayonne and refuses to receive hostages for his safety while in France, ii. 393; meets Francis I. at Châtelleraut, ii. 394; triumphant reception of, at Poitiers, ii. 395; distrust of the Emperor at the hospitality of the French King, ii. 396; accident to, ii. 397; unfortunate coincidences, ib.; his retinue, ii. 397; Francis informs the Emperor of the advice of the Duchess d'Etampes, ii. 399; reply of, ib.; his politic conduct to the Duchess, ib.; his entry into Paris, ii. 400; proceeds to Valenciennes, ii. 401; refuses to ratify the cession of the Milanese, ii. 402; tergiversation of, ii. 403; proposes an alliance between his son Philip and the Princess of Navarre, ii. 410; offers the hand of the Princess of Spain to the Duke of Orleans, ib.; disappointment of the Emperor at the refusal of Francis, ii. 411; invests his son, Dom Philippe, with the Duchy of Milan, ii. 425; alarm of, at the treaty between the Venetians and the Turks, ii. 426-7; his reply to Francis on being summoned to make reparation for the murder of two French ambassadors, ii. 431; desires to become the champion of Christendom, ib.; his interview with the Pope at Lucca previous to his campaign against the Turks, ii. 432; enters into a truce with the Protestant princes, ii. 433; conducts an expedition against the Algerines, ib.; dispersion of his fleet, ib.; returns to Spain, ii. 434; effects a rupture between England and France, ii. 459; reorganizes his army, ii. 460-1; ravages the duchy of Cleves, ib.; pardons the Duke of Cleves on condition of his renouncing the Reformed religion and his allegiance to France, ii. 462; his army, reinforced by the English, besieges Landrecies, Guise, and Luxembourg, ii. 464; takes Cambray, ii. 466; position of, in 1544, ii. 477; invades France in conjunction with Henry VIII. ii. 492-3; plan of the campaign, ii. 494; takes Luxembourg, ii. 495; besieges St. Dizier, ib.; takes St. Dizier, ii. 498; his distrust of Henry VIII. prevents co-operation of the allied forces, ii. 501-5; endeavours to conclude a peace with Francis, ii. 506; marches on Chalons, ii. 507; determines on a retreat, ii. 509; re-victuals his army through the treachery of Madame d'Etampes, ib.; advance of the Emperor, ii. 510; concludes a treaty with Francis, ii. 511; conditions of the treaty, ii. 512; withdraws his troops from the English army, ii. 513; resolves to bestow the hand of his daughter upon the Duke of Orleans, ii. 516; determines to subjugate the league of Smalkalden, ii. 517; endeavours to conciliate the Pope, ib.; persecutes the Flemish Reformers, ib.; refuses to cede the duchy of Milan to Francis, ii. 544; makes war upon the Protestant Princes, ii. 546.

Charles V. continued.

Charles V. continued.

Charles V. continued.

Charles VIII. betrothed to Marguerite of Austria, i. 7; his hand declined by the Princess Maria and Elizabeth of England, i. 8; educated in seclusion by Louis XI, ib.; his romantic passion for Anne de Bretagne, i. 9; releases the Duke of Orleans from prison, i. 11; influenced by Anne de France, ib.; refuses to marry Marguerite of Austria, i. 12; reconducts her to Flanders with great honour, ib.; marries Anne de Bretagne, i. 13; his death, i. 14.

Châteaubriand, Count de, marries Françoise de Foix, i. 229; fears to trust his beautiful Countess at the Court of Francis, i. 230; his strata-gem to detain her in Brittany defeated, i. 231; accuses his Countess of dissimulation, i. 233-4; annoyed at the attentions of Francis to his wife, i. 236; anxiety of, to attach his wife to the circle of Queen Claude, i. 236-7; his mistaken violence, i. 238; departs from Court on finding himself dishonoured, i. 240; his vengeance to his wife on her return from Court, ii. 58-9; his alleged treatment to his wife on her return from Court, ii. 159.

- Châteaubriand, Count de, continued.
- Chateaubriand, Countess de, her birth and childhood, i. 229; her marriage, ib.; the story of the three rings, i. 230-4; summoned to Court and her meeting with Francis I., i. 235; welcomed to the Court of Louise de Savoie, i. 238; her liaison with the King, i. 239; her increasing power over the King alarms Louise de Savoie, i. 250; the intrigues of her brothers alluded to, i. 251; induces Francis to recall the Connétable of France from Milan, i. 252-3; her conduct towards the Duke de Bourbon, i. 257; her profligacy, ib.; her intrigue with Admiral de Bonnavet, i. 258; her unbounded favour with the King, i. 277; maintains her influence over the King notwithstanding her liaison with Bonnavet, i. 278; obtains for her second brother the bâton of Maréchal, i. 284; increasing favour of the King for, i. 400; the enamelled gems, ib.; advises her brother not to return to Milan without supplies, i. 404; her influence insufficient to induce the King to grant an audience to her brother, Marshal Lautrec, i. 448; applies to the Duke de Bourbon for assistance, i. 449; the King reconciled with her brother, i. 455; her faction, of whom composed, i. 456; her misunderstanding with Francis, i. 480-1; the Duchess d'Alençon attempts a reconciliation, i. 482-3; banished from Court, ii. 57; her reception by her husband, ii. 58; confined by the Count in a chamber hung with black; ii. 59; her reflections, ii. 64; on hearing of the return of Francis I. makes her escape and joins the Court at Bayonne, ii. 96-7; the increased affection of the King for, ii. 102; scheme of Louise de Savoie to supplant the Countess in the affection of the King, ii. 103-4-5; her person described, ii. 105; her alarm at the King's admiration of Mademoiselle de Heilly, ii. 109; waning influence of, ii. 128; her remonstrance to Francis, ii. 144; her last interview with Francis, ii. 153-4-5-6-7; retires from court to her husband in Brittany, ii. 159; the King demands the return of her jewels, ii. 161; her rebuke to the King, and its consequences, ii. 162; reconciled to her husband, ii. 221; the King presents her with two valuable estates, ib.
- Châteaubriand, Mad., continued.
- Châteaufort, Seigneur de, charged with despatches from the Constable of France to Cardinal Wolsey, i. 441.
- Châtellerault, Duke de, serves in the vanguard of the army for the recovery of the Milanese, i. 170.
- Châtillon, Duke de, indignation of, at the stipulations of the Earl of Worcester on the surrender of Tournay, i. 295-6; death of, on his march to Fontarabia, i. 458.
- Odet de, created a Cardinal in his thirteenth year, ii. 258.
- Chaumont, M. de, Lieutenant-General, marches on Bologna, i. 52; see note, ib.; commands first division of Louis XII.'s army against Venice, i. 62; death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 40.
- Cheyne, Sir Thomas, desired by Henry VIII. to remonstrate with Francis I. on his interference in Scotland, i. 463; dignified reply of the French King to, 464-5.
- Chiavenna, castle of, taken by Gian Giacomo de' Medici, ii. 22.
- Chièvres, M. de, instigates the Archduke Charles to preserve a peace with France, i. 150; his reply to the French ambassador on the early application of Charles of Spain to business, i. 217; induces Charles to form an alliance with Francis, i. 218; his jealousy of the power of the Cardinal Ximènes, i. 219; his death alluded to, i. 333.
- Christina, Princess, her marriage with Lorenzo Sforza, ii. 248-9; see note, ib.

- Claude, afterwards Queen of Francis I, daughter of Louis XII. and Anne of Bretagne, betrothed to the Duke de Valois, i. 46; marriage of with the Duke de Valois, afterwards Francis I, i. 118; evil omen at her nuptials, ib.; peculiar position of, at the Court of Louis XII, i. 129; becomes Queen of France and cedes her estates to Francis I. her husband, i. 135; the purity of her Court contrasted with that of Madame D'Angoulême, i. 148; her Court described by Brantôme, i. 149; gives birth to a Princess, ib.; her farewell reception of the nobles, on their departure to recover the Milanese under Francis I, i. 166; her Court, i. 227; her interview with Madame de Châteaubriand, i. 237; gives birth to a Dauphin, i. 243; meekness and resignation of, i. 245; her forbearance alluded to, i. 251; gives birth to a third daughter, i. 278; gives birth to a second son, i. 335; her interview with the Queen of England at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 358-9; her position at Court during the rival factions, i. 456; urges the marriage of the Princess Renée with Bourbon, ib.; her death, ii. 10; heartlessness of the King, ii. 11; her amiable character, ib.
- Clement VII, his election to the Popedom alluded to, i. 517; secretly favours the League, and is desirous for the expulsion of the French from Italy, ib.; undertakes to furnish Francis I. with supplies for carrying on the war in Italy, ii. 14; alarm of, ii. 16; declares his neutrality, ib.; endeavours to establish a truce between France and Spain for five years, ii. 17; enters into a secret treaty with Francis I, ib.; warns the Emperor of the secret league against him, ii. 76; enters into a treaty with France, known as the Holy League, ii. 99; its object, ii. 100; enters into a league with Pompeo Colonna, ii. 113; disbands his forces in Romagna, ib.; attacked by Cardinal Colonna, takes refuge in the castle of St. Angelo, ii. 114; taken prisoner by the Prince of Orange, ii. 119; his captivity causes a general indignation throughout Europe, ii. 134-5; makes terms with the Emperor, ii. 186; meeting between the Pope and the Emperor Charles V, ii. 211; concludes a treaty with Charles V, ii. 212; refuses to sanction the divorce of Henry VIII. and Katherine of Aragon, ii. 225; indignation of Henry VIII. against, ii. 230; incredulity of the Pope at the offer of the hand of the Duke of Orleans to Catherine de' Medici, ii. 233; consults Charles V. thereon, ib.; meets the Emperor at Bologna, ii. 234; two French Bishops are sent by the Kings of France and England to threaten, ib.; anxious to secure the friendship of Francis I, ii. 239; his ruling passion, ii. 240; a meeting is arranged between the Pope and Francis, ii. 241; proceeds to Marseilles to meet the French King, ii. 250; his reception, ii. 251-2; homage of Francis I. to, ii. 253; the Emperor endeavours to prevent the marriage of his niece with the Duke of Orleans, ii. 256; his exultation on the marriage of his niece, ii. 257; creates four new French Cardinals, ii. 258; leaves France and returns to Italy, ib.; excommunicates Henry VIII, ii. 275; death of, ib.
- Clerc, Jean de, burnt alive at Meaux for heresy, ii. 206.
- Clermont, Count de, destroys the bridges in his way through Piedmont, after the battle of Pavia, ii. 41.
- Cleves, Duke de, his marriage with the Princess of Navarre, ii. 412-13; see note, ib.; his marriage annulled, ii. 415; leaves France, ib.; declared the enemy of the Empire, ii. 433; his territory ravaged by the Emperor Charles V, ii. 461; throws himself on the mercy of the Emperor, ii. 462; degrading concessions of, ib.
- Coligny, Gaspard de, at the siege of Binche, ii. 458.
- College, Royal, efforts of Francis I. to establish a, ii. 199; Francis dissuaded from founding the, by the insinuation of the Chancellor Duprat, ii. 202.
- Colonna, Fabrizio, commands in the combined army of the Pope and

- Colonna, Fabrizio, continued.
 Ferdinand of Spain at the battle of Ravenna, i. 73; see note, ib.; his bravery at the battle of Ravenna, i. 75; taken prisoner, ib.
- Marco-Antonio, his military abilities at Verona, i. 214; see note, ib.
- Prosper, entrusted with the passes of the Alps against Francis I, i. 174; note, ib.; his arrogance, i. 175–6–7; captured and surrenders to Bayard, i. 178; profits by the discontent in the French army, i. 399; quarrels with the Marquis of Pescara about precedence, i. 406; its consequences, ib.; crosses the Po unimpeded, i. 407; takes up his quarters at Bicocca, i. 426; defeats the French under Marshal Lautrec, and compels them to retreat to Cremona, i. 427–8–9; invests Cremona, and compels M. de Lescun to capitulate, i. 431–2; appointed General of the Italian League, i. 469; defends the Milanese, i. 512; his able defence of Milan, i. 514–15; his death, i. 515.
- Pompeo, Cardinal, enters into a league with Clement VII, ii. 113; see note, ib.; marches on Rome and compels the Pope to take refuge in the castle of St. Angelo, ii. 114.
- Commines, Philippe de la Clite, Sire de, see note, i. 12.
- Concordat, the, see Pragmatic Sanction, i. 208; signed, i. 209; recognition of, urged forward by Francis, i. 260; see Parliament.
- Constable of France, see Montpensier, Charles de, and Montmorenci, Anne de; office of, alluded to, i. 143–4.
- Coni, fortress of, ii. 315.
- Cop, Guillaume, an eminent physician, i. 270; see note, ib.
- Court of Francis I. described, ii. 2–639.
- Cousin, Jean, his works in the palace of Chambord alluded to, ii. 127; see note, ib.
- Crema, taken by Louis XII, i. 64.
- Cremona, citadel of, surrendered to Louis XII, i. 64; gallant defence of, by M. d'Herbouville, i. 512.
- Crote, Seigneur la, one of the captains in Louis XII's army at the battle of Agnadello, i. 62.
- Croy, Guillaume de, a letter from Louis XII. seeking to excuse his treaty with the Austrian Court on the subject of his daughter's marriage, alluded to, i. 47; see note, ib.
- Créqui, Antoine de, defends Têrouenne against the Earl of Shrewsbury and Lord Talbot, i. 99.
- D'Abila, Diégo, assists at the capture of Francis I. at Pavia, ii. 35.
- D'Aerschott, Duke, scheme to entrap the, i. 466–7.
- Daillon, Jacques de, Seigneur de Lude; his defence of Fontarabia, i. 457; see note, ib.; arrives at Court, i. 459.
- D'Alarçon, M., Francis I. consigned to the custody of, after the battle of Pavia, ii. 43; succeeds to the command of the Spanish infantry on the death of Prosper Colonna, ib.; his alarm at the anger of Francis I. on his reading the terms proposed by Charles for his release from captivity, ii. 66; ordered by Charles V. to attend Francis I. during his captivity, ii. 70.
- D'Albret, Jean, throws himself into Pampeluna, i. 84; forced to retire beyond the Pyrenees, ib.
- , Henry, King of Navarre, marries Marguerite of Valois, ii. 162; his character alluded to, ii. 163; his issue, ib.; improves the condition of his people, ii. 164; his Court of Bearn, ib.; suspects the fidelity of his Queen, ii. 168; the King is partially converted to Lutheranism, ib.; his claims upon Navarre alluded to, at the treaty of Noyon, i. 220; invited by the Navarrese to claim his crown, i. 376; supplied with troops by Francis I, i. 377; taken prisoner at the battle of Pavia, ii. 40; effects his escape, ib.; his interests abandoned by France at the treaty of Cambray, ii. 188; intrusted with the defence of Guienne, ii. 310; appointed governor of Guienne and Languedoc, ii. 358; disappointment of, at the refusal of Francis to accept the hand of Philip of Spain, for the Princess of Navarre, ii. 411.
- D'Alençon, Duke, one of the suite of Louis XII, i. 23; his marriage with the sister of Francis I. alluded to, ib.; description of, i. 39; observations on his union with Marguerite de Valois, i. 40; commands the rear-guard of the army for the recovery of the Milanese, i. 170; successfully resists a charge of the Swiss at the battle of Marignano, i. 191; at the baptism of the second son of Francis I, i. 335; appointed to the government of Champagne, i. 381; approaches within three leagues of Mézières, i. 392; retakes Mouzon, i. 394; commands the van-guard of the French army, i. 305; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28; his cowardice, ii. 32; his claims as a candidate for the throne alluded to, ii. 51; his interview with the Duchess, ib.; his death alluded to, ii. 52.

- D'Alençon, Duke, continued.
- , Duchess, see Marguerite de Valois.
- D'Alviano, General, insolence of, to Louis XII, i. 5; defeated by Louis XII. at the battle of Agnadello, i. 63; restored to liberty by Louis XII, and placed at the head of the Venetian army, i. 92; at Lodi, i. 184; at the battle of Marignano, i. 186; pursues the Swiss after the battle, i. 192; his death, ib.
- D'Amboise, Cardinal, Louis XII. instigated by, to make a will, directing the Princess Claude to marry Francis, Count d'Angoulême, i. 42; see note, ib.; his death, i. 70.
- D'Amboise, Bussy, slain at the battle of Marignano, i. 193.
- , Clermont, death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 29.
- Dammartin, Count de, death of, at Peronne, ii. 339.
- Dampière, M. de, commands the rear-guard at Carmagnola, ii. 487; see note, ib.
- D'Andelot, Chevalier, unhorsed by Francis I. at the battle of Pavia, ii. 34.
- Dané, Pierre, see note, i. 270.
- D'Angoulême, Mademoiselle, see Marguerite de Valois.
- Charles Duke, son of Francis I., distinguishes himself at a tournament, ii. 288; his resemblance to his father alluded to, ii. 289; engaged in a street brawl, ii. 290; his grief at the death of M. de Castelnau, ii. 291; his open and ardent nature alluded to, ii. 525; death of, ii. 541.
- Danois, Count de, warns the Duke of Orleans against the blandishments of Anne de France, i. 16.
- D'Ars, Sire, Louis, at the battle of Ravenna, i. 75.
- D'Aubigny, Duke, jealousy of Henry VIII. alluded to, i. 154; see note, ib.; at the capture of Prosper Colonna, i. 175; his attempt to create a war between England and Scotland alluded to, i. 462; his presence in Scotland made a pretext by Henry VIII. to declare war against France, ib.; commands 9,000 men against the Spaniards, ii. 19; escorts Catherine de' Medici to Marseilles, ii. 251.
- D'Augsbourg, Longman, Captain of the lansquenets at the battle of Pavia, death of, ii. 32.
- D'Aumale, Count, seriously wounded at Boulogne, ii. 540.
- Dauphin, the, birth of, i. 243; the Pope invited to become sponsor to, i. 244; baptism of, i. 245-6; betrothed to the Princess Mary of England, i. 294, note; sent as a hostage to Spain, by Francis I, as a guarantee for the fulfilment of a treaty with Charles V, ii. 94-5; removed to Old Castile, ii. 101; restored to France, ii. 189; proclaimed Duke of Brittany under the title of François III, ii. 221; his death, ii. 319; the Count de Montecuculli suspected of poisoning the, ii. 320-1-2; Catherine de' Medici suspected of poisoning the, ii. 324.
- D'Autun, Bishop of, despatched by the Constable of France, with his offers of allegiance to Francis I., i. 488; seized by the King's troops near Lyons, i. 489; acquitted by the Parliament of Paris, i. 492.
- De Heilly, Mademoiselle, introduced by Louise de Savoie to the notice of the King, to supplant the Countess de Châteaubriand, ii. 103; becomes an apt pupil, ii. 104; her personal appearance, ii. 105; introduced to the King, ii. 108; effects of her appearance, ib.; her increasing power over the King, ii. 143; takes up her abode at the palace of the Tournelles, ii. 145; description of her apartments, ib.; Francis proposes to marry her to a noble of his Court, ii. 146-7;

- De Heilly, Mademoiselle, continued. marries Duke d'Etampes, ii. 149; her arrogance, ib.; her jealousy of Diana of Poitiers, ii. 150; receives a jewel casket from the King, ii. 160; her interview with Francis thereon, ib.; instigates Francis to demand the return of the jewels he had presented to the Countess de Châteaubriand, ii. 161; her disappointment, ib.; her presentation to Queen Eleonora, ii. 192; her arrogance and rapacity, ib.; provides for her family, ii. 193; she protects men of letters, ib.; ostentation of, ii. 195; her profligacy, ii. 264-5; dangerous position of the royal favourite, ii. 266-7; her ostentation and profligacy alluded to, ii. 288; her jealousy of Diana of Poitiers, ii. 297; demands the dismissal of Diana from Court, and is refused by Francis, ii. 298; feud between, and Diana of Poitiers, ii. 346-7; virulence of, ii. 348; the King's infatuation for, ib.; her apprehensions at the King's declining health, ii. 349; her passion for Montmorenci alluded to, ib.; plots the ruin of Montmorenci, ii. 383-4; advises Francis to arrest Charles V. on his progress through France, ii. 386-7; Charles V. presents her with a diamond ring, ii. 400; her stolen interview with Christian de Nancy, ii. 416-18; surprised by the King, ii. 420; clever stratagem of, ii. 421; betrays the designs of Francis I. to the Emperor, ii. 437-8; her hatred for Diana of Poitiers alluded to, ii. 442; her selfish treachery causes the loss of St. Dizier, ii. 501; induces the King to enter into negotiations with the Emperor, ii. 506; her treachery alluded to, ii. 508; enables the Emperor to revictual his army, ii. 509; her exile alluded to, ii. 555.
- D'Enghien, Count, takes command of the war galleys at Marseilles, ii. 467; surprised by Andrea Doria, ii. 468; humiliating position of, ii. 469; joins the King at Landrecies, ii. 470; appointed to the command of Piedmont, ii. 472; blockades Carignano, ii. 479; requests the King to allow him to give battle to the enemy, ii. 480;
- D'Enghien, Count, continued. attacks Du Guasto, ii. 485-6; defeats Du Guasto, ii. 487-8; concludes a truce for three months, and retires from Piedmont, ii. 491.
- Derby, Earl, attends in the retinue of Cardinal Wolsey, during his mission to France, ii. 136.
- D'Esse, Sire, one of the governors of the citadel of Luxembourg, ii. 464-5; see note, ib.
- Desserts, Louis des, undertakes to obtain the consent of the Bretons to annex their duchy to the throne of France, ii. 220-1.
- D'Este, Alphonso, takes Fabrizio Colonna prisoner at the battle of Ravenna, i. 75; see note ib.
- D'Estourmel, M., his devotion at the defence of Peronne, ii. 339.
- D'Etampes, Duke, see Brosse, Count Jean de.
- — — Duchess, see De Heilly, Mademoiselle.
- D'Herbouville, M., his gallant defence of Cremona alluded to, i. 512.
- D'Humières, M., entrusted with the defence of Dauphiny, ii. 310; appointed to the command of the French army in Italy, ii. 537.
- Diana of Poitiers, see Poitiers.
- Diesbach, Jean de, a leader of the Swiss mercenaries, i. 180.
- Dijon, treaty signed at, between M. de Tremouille and the Swiss, i. 113-14-15.
- D'Imbercourt, Marquis, joins the French army at Blangy, i. 99; see note, ib.; slain at the battle of Marignano, i. 193.
- D'O, the Count, taken prisoner at Téroienne, ii. 355; see note, ib.
- Doria, Andrea, his attack of the imperial flotilla at the siege of Marseilles alluded to, ii. 7; conveys the remnants of the French army from Civita Vecchia to Marseilles, ii. 54; see note ib.; enters the service of the Emperor Charles V, ii. 184; revictuals Naples, ib.; escorts the Pope from Marseilles to Civita Vecchia, ii. 258; Toulon taken by, ii. 325; supplies the Emperor's camp with provisions, ii. 331; rescues the Emperor from his position on the coast of Africa, after the destruction of his fleet by tempest, ii. 434; surprises the galleys of the Count D'Enghien, ii. 468.

- Dorset, Marquis, lands in Spain with 50,000 men, i. 83; disgusted with the perfidy of Ferdinand, withdraws his troops, i. 84; present at the meeting on the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 351.
- D'Orval, Albert, despatched by Francis I. to Frankfort, to secure the votes of the Electors, i. 303.
- Du Châtel, Pierre, observations of Francis I, respecting, i. 271; see note, i. 270.
- Duelling, observations on, ii. 183.
- Dueren, city of, attacked and destroyed by Charles V, ii. 460-1.
- Duprat, Antoine, created Chancellor of France by Francis I, i. 145; observations on his appointment, ib.; prompts Francis to issue several edicts, which are unpalatable to his subjects, i. 215; encourages the libertine propensities of Francis, i. 279; present at the interview between Francis and Henry VIII, i. 350; at the conference at Calais, between the ministers of Francis I. and Charles V, i. 382; assists Louise de Savoie in persecuting the Constable of France, i. 437; Parliament refuses to ratify the decision of the Judge against the Constable, i. 438; enters into holy orders, takes possession of the Abbey of St. Benoit, ii. 120-1; assists Louise de Savoie, in ruining M. de Semblançay, ii. 122-3; endeavours to defraud the Emperor Charles V. in giving false weight and value to the specie, for the ransom of the French princes, ii. 189; dissuades Francis from founding the Royal College, ii. 202; persecutes the reformers, ii. 209; secures the confidence of Louis des Desserts, and annexes Brittany to the throne of France, ii. 220-1; death of, ii. 287.
- D'Urbiéta, Juan, assists at the capture of Francis I. at the battle of Pavia, ii. 35.
- D'Urbino, Duke, marches against Romagna, and takes Rimini, Ravenna, and Cervia, i. 65; see note, ib.; Francis I. stipulates, during his conference with the Pope, for the restoration of the domains of the Duke, i. 207; Francis I. is induced to withdraw his protection from the Duke, on the marriage of Lorenzo de' Medici with Madelaine de la Tour-d'Auvergne, i. 247; refuses to attack the Spanish army without the aid of the Swiss, ii. 113-17.
- D'Usez, Duchess, her position at the Court of Louise de Savoie, ii. 106; her wit, alluded to, ii. 124-5.
- Electoral Diet, convened at Frankfort, i. 329; proceedings opened by the Archbishop of Mayence, i. 331; speech of the Archbishop of Treves, i. 332; electors offer the throne to Frederick Duke of Saxony, i. 333; elect Charles V. as Emperor, ib.
- Eleonora of Austria, her hand offered by Ferdinand of Spain to Louis XII, i. 120; see note, ib.; her marriage with Francis I, described, ii. 189-90; her melancholy position at Court, ii. 191; her reception of Anne of Pisseleu, the King's mistress, ib.; attachment of the young Princes for, ii. 194; her dignified retirement, ii. 195; alarmed at the prospect of a war between Francis and the Emperor, endeavours to effect a meeting between the two sovereigns, ii. 214; her reception of Catherine de' Medici, at Marseilles, ii. 252; neglect of Francis I. to, ii. 264; her resignation attracts the notice of the Maréchal de Montmorenci, ii. 270; the Maréchal declares his love for the Queen, and is repulsed, ii. 271-2; her compact with the Maréchal, ii. 273; accident to, at Villa Franca, ii. 372; her joy at the reconciliation of the Emperor and Francis, ii. 375; presents M. de Montmorenci with an enamelled chain, ii. 388; its consequences, ii. 389; induces Francis to enter into negotiations with the Emperor, ii. 506.
- Ely, Bishop of, one of the witnesses to the betrothal of the Dauphin to the Princess Mary of England, i. 294.
- Erasmus, the Prince of Wales, afterwards Henry VIII, educated by, i. 272; efforts of the Pope to retain him in Florence, ib.; his declaration that England was the most honourable and advantageous sojourn for men of genius, alluded to, i. 273; created an honorary counsellor by the Princess Regent Marguerite, ib.; invited by Francis I. to become a President of the Royal College of France, ib.; declines the offers of the French King, ib.; urged by Henry VIII. to establish his abode in England, ib.; inconsistency of his conduct respecting the Romish Church alluded to, ii. 205.

- Erasmus, continued.
- Este, capture of, alluded to, i. 65.
- Europe, state of literature and science in, ii. 200-1.
- Fabri, Jacques, saved from the Inquisitors by Marguerite de Valois, ii. 57.
- Farel, Guillaume, saved from the Inquisitors by Marguerite de Valois, ii. 57.
- Farnese, Pietro Luigi, meets Charles V. at Genoa, ii. 460; see note, ib.
- Ferdinand the Catholic, of Spain, the hand of Germaine de Foix demanded by, i. 43; terms of the marriage treaty, i. 44; obtains by cession Brindici and Otranto, i. 65; undertakes the siege of Trani, ib.; enters into a league with the Pope, after the treaty of Cambrai, i. 69; designs of, upon Navarre, i. 83; disgusts the Marquis of Dorset by his perfidy, i. 84; demands a guarantee from the Navarrese sovereigns not to assist the French King against the Holy League, ib.; joins the cause of the Pope against France, i. 94; offers the hand of Eleonora of Austria to Louis XII, i. 120; endeavours to alarm the Pope and the Emperor Maximilian on Francis marching his troops towards Burgundy, i. 156-7; efforts of, to excite the jealousy of Henry VIII. against France, i. 210; death of, i. 214; he bequeaths his kingdom to the Archduke Charles, ib.
- _____ of Austria, brother of Charles V, elected King of the Romans, ii. 225-6; his quarrel with the Duke of Wirtemberg alluded to, ii. 249; enters into a treaty with the league of Smalkalden, ii. 250.
- Feronnière, La Belle, intrigue of Francis I. with, ii. 376-9.
- Ferrara, Duke of, captures Polésina de Rovigo, Este, Montagnana, and Monselica, i. 65; joins the army of Gaston de Foix, near Bologna, and commands the vanguard in conjunction with the Marquis de la Palice, i. 73; at the battle of Ravenna, i. 75; his forfeiture of the territories of Modena and Reggio alluded to, i. 207.
- Field of the Cloth of Gold, description of, i. 347; the arrangements for the reception of the Queens of France and England, i. 348; meeting of the two Kings of England and France, i. 349-52; the banquet, i. 353-4; the Tournay, i. 355; the King of France throws the King of England in a wrestling match, i. 359; good feeling of the French and English at the, i. 360; inutility of the business transacted at the, i. 365; exhausts the treasury of both nations, ib.
- Fiennes, Marquis de, ordered to make a demonstration before Têrouenne, i. 467; extricates himself from the Duke de Vendôme, i. 468.
- Fleuranges, Marquis de, by reconnoitring the enemy, brings on the battle of Marignano, i. 185; knighted by Francis I, i. 196; despatched by Francis I. to secure the votes of the Electors, i. 303; his services alluded to, i. 316; besieges Vireton, i. 374; engaged in the scheme to entrap the Duke d'Aerschott, i. 467; repulses the Imperialists at Peronne, ii. 338-9; death of, ii. 340.
- Flumieres, M. de, establishes his head-quarters at Pignerol, ii. 358.
- Foix, Adet de, Sire de Lautrec, gallant efforts of, to save the life of Gaston de Foix, i. 77; appointed Governor of Guienne, i. 144; see note, ib.; compelled to raise the siege of Brescia and retire to Milan, i. 211; appointed Governor of Milan, i. 256; disgusts the Milanese by his extortions, i. 281; his treatment of the Maréchal de Trivulzio, ib., i. 282; suspects the sincerity of the Pope, and advises Francis I. to delay the ratification of the League, i. 375-6; arrives in France to negotiate a marriage with the daughter of Count d'Orval, Foix, Adet de, continued.

i. 399; demands supplies, i. 400; returns to Milan, i. 404-5; his tyranny, ib.; the Swiss troops desert, i. 406; his critical position alluded to, ib.; imprudently refuses to attack the Imperialist army, and permits Prosper Colonna to cross the Pô unimpeded, i. 407; disgusts his troops by his inactivity, i. 408-9; driven out of Milan, ib.; takes up his winter-quarters at Cremona, ib.; despatches his brother to France, i. 409; receives supplies from France, and attacks Milan, i. 425; joined by Novarra and Bayard, ib.; his critical position alluded to, i. 426; compelled by the Swiss mercenaries to give battle, is defeated, and retreats to Cremona, i. 427-8-9; departs for Paris, i. 431; arrives at Court, i. 447; refused an audience, i. 448; his interview with Francis leads to the discovery of the appropriation of the public money by the King's mother, i. 449-50-1-2-3; reconciled with the King, i. 455; forwards proofs to the King of the treason of the Duke de Bourbon, i. 488; compels the Spaniards to fall back upon Fontarabia, i. 508; appointed to the command of the confederated army of England and France in Italy, ii. 140; his success in the Milanese alluded to, ii. 183; besieges Naples, ii. 184; his death, ii. 185.

— Germaine de, one of the suite of Anne de Bretagne, i. 22; her marriage with Ferdinand of Castile described, i. 43-4; her hauteur to the French nobility at Savona, i. 57; after the death of Ferdinand applies for permission to return to France, i. 313; her marriage with the Marquis de Brandebourg secures to Charles V. the suffrages of the Elector Joachim and the Bishop of Mayence, i. 314.

— Gaston de, one of the captains in Louis XII.'s army against the Venetians, i. 62; appointed general of the forces in his 23d year, i. 71; saves Bologna, ib.; takes Brescia from the Venetians, and puts the population to the sword, i. 72; advances upon Ravenna, ib.; joined by the Duke of Ferrara at Bologna, i. 73; meets the combined armies of the Pope and the King of Spain at Castel St. Piero, ib.; sends the Chevalier Bayard to reconnoitre the enemy's position at Ravenna, i. 74; death of, i. 76-7; burial of, i. 78.

Foix, Gaston de, continued.

— Françoise de, see Château-briand, Countess.

— Maréchal de, see Lescun, M. de. Follebray, pavilion of, alluded to, ii. 222.

Fontainebleau, palace of, alluded to, ii. 222.

Fontarabia, relieved by M. de Palice, i. 458; sufferings of the garrison of, i. 459.

Fontrailles, Sire Imbaud de, joins the French army at Blangy with his Albanian light horse, i. 100; see note ib.; gallantry of, at the siege of Téroouenne, i. 101-2.

Forbins, Louis de, despatched by Francis I. to open negotiations with the Helvetic body, i. 223.

Fossano, fortress of, betrayed to the Imperialists by the Marquis de Saluzzo, ii. 315-16.

France, critical position of, after the Battle of Pavia, ii. 50; discontent of the people, ii. 50-1.

Francis I, King of France, his extreme beauty alluded to, i. 3; misgivings of Louis XII. respecting, ib.; born at Cognac, i. 17; see note, ib.; loses his father in his second year, ib.; becomes the ward of the Duke of Orleans, ib.; Maréchal de Gié appointed governor to, i. 19; rapid improvement of the Prince under his tuition, ib.; his taste for martial exercises alluded to, i. 20; his affection for his sister Marguerite, i. 28; challenges M. de Montpensier to single combat, i. 29; his matrimonial prospects with the Princess Claude alluded to, i. 36; at the assembly of the States-General, when the subject of his marriage with the Princess Claude is alluded to, i. 45; betrothed to the Princess Claude, i. 46; meets Louis XII. at Grenoble, i. 67; invested with the command of the army of the Milanese, i. 85; sends a challenge to the Spanish general, ib.; gives earnest of his future prowess, i.

Francis I. continued.

86; his liaison with the advocate's wife, i. 87-8-9; again entrusted with the command of the army, i. 111; marries the Princess Claude, i. 118; invested with the administration of the Duchy of Brittany, i. 119; receives the Princess Mary of England at Abbeville, i. 125; attracts the attention of the Princess Mary, i. 128; declares his passion to the Queen, i. 129; warned by M. de Grignaud against the consequences of an intimacy with the Queen, i. 130; at the death of Louis XII, i. 132; proclaimed King of France as Francis I, i. 135; the estates of the Queen in Brittany, Nantes, Blois, Etampes, and Montfort, ceded to him, ib.; discontent of the Bretons thereat, i. 136; enthusiasm of the French nation at his accession to the throne, i. 136; crowned at Rheims by the Archbishop of Paris, ib.; his interview with the widow of Louis XII, i. 137; his caution to the Duke of Suffolk, ib.; his anger with Suffolk for privately marrying the Dowager-queen Mary of France, i. 138-9; the marriage of the Queen and Suffolk supposed not to be unwelcome to, ib.; makes his public entry into Paris, i. 140; his profusion exhausts the treasury, ib.; his taste for chivalrous romances, i. 141; attaches an undue value to personal prowess, ib.; ambitious to become a preux chevalier, i. 142; redeeming qualities of, ib.; bestows the title of Duchess upon his mother, i. 143; bestows the office of Constable of France upon Charles de Montpensier, ib.; forms his government, i. 143-4-5; retires to Amboise to celebrate the marriage of Mademoiselle de Bourbon with the Duke de Lorraine, i. 146; his combat with the wild boar, i. 147; his licentious taste at the Court of his mother alluded to, i. 148; endeavours to replenish his treasury by arbitrary and impolitic measures, i. 149; resolves to recover Milan, i. 150; the Archduke Charles sends an embassy to, ib.; promises the hand of the Princess Renée to the Archduke,

Francis I. continued.

ib.; state of Europe in 1515, i. 152; his frankness wins the good-will of Henry VIII, i. 153; the Pope and the Swiss his only formidable enemies, ib.; treaty between England and France, i. 154; the Swiss threaten to invade France, i. 155-6; organizes his army and marches towards Burgundy, i. 157; secretly induces the Doge of Genoa to put himself under the protection of France, ib.; amount of his forces concentrated in Dauphiny, ib.; sends an embassy to Rome, i. 158; its object, i. 159; replenishes his treasury by the sale of judicial offices, i. 167; appoints the Duchess d'Angoulême regent during his absence in the wars in Italy, i. 168; the Pope alarmed at the success of the French arms, sends a messenger to Francis to assure him of his neutrality, i. 179; endeavours to conciliate the Swiss but fails through the agency of the Cardinal of Sion, i. 180-1; leaves Lyons for Turin, i. 183; joined by the Duke de Gueldres with 6,000 lansquenets, ib.; establishes his head-quarters at Marignano, ib.; the junction of the Swiss and Spanish armies prevented by an accident, ib.; the King is anxious to attack the Swiss, i. 184; at the battle of Marignano, i. 186; advances to the attack at the head of "The Black Bands," i. 187; furious charge of, i. 188; nearly taken prisoner, ib.; the King sleeps on a gun-carriage, i. 190; the action is renewed in the morning and the Swiss defeated, i. 191-2; wounded, i. 193; his letter to his mother after the battle, ib.; receives knighthood from the Chevalier Bayard on the field of battle, i. 195; marches upon Milan, i. 197; his generosity to Maximilian Sforza, i. 198; enters Milan and receives the oath of allegiance from the authorities, i. 199; the Pope enters into a treaty with the King at Viterbo, i. 203; the King proceeds to Bologna to meet the Pope, i. 204; fascinated by the sophistry of Leo X, i. 205; enters into a league with the

Francis I. continued.

Pope, i. 206; its conditions, ib.; the Pope induces the King to abandon his designs upon Naples, i. 207; the question of the Pragmatic Sanction is discussed by commissioners, i. 208; his treaty with the Pope gives offence to the University of Paris, ib.; the Pope endeavours to persuade the King to undertake a crusade against the Turks, i. 209; disbands his army, and arrives in France, i. 210; exultation of the French people at the success of the King, ib.; the death of Ferdinand and the accession of the Archduke Charles favourable to the views of the King, i. 214-5; prompted by the Chancellor the King issues several ordinances, unpalatable to his subjects, i. 215; his parliament refuses to register his ordinance purporting to protect his forest rights, i. 216; enters into an alliance with Charles V. of Spain, i. 220; conditions of the peace of Noyon, ib., i. 221; the hand of his infant daughter promised to the King of Spain, ib.; the peace of Noyon secures no real advantages to the French, i. 222; the King concludes a treaty of amity with Switzerland, i. 223; the Swiss recognise the claim of the King to the Milanese, ib.; domestic life of the King, i. 227; resolves to form a Court of his own, i. 228; his licentiousness alluded to, ib.; fails to attract the Countess de Châteaubriand to his Court, ib.; his meeting with the Countess, i. 235-6; his liaison with the Countess, i. 239; forms projects for the embellishment of France and the encouragement of literature, i. 243; invites the Pope to become sponsor to the Dauphin, i. 244; his cruelty to the Queen, i. 245; festivities of the King and his Court on the marriage of Lorenzo de' Medici, and Madelaine de la Tour-d'Auvergne, i. 248-9; his interview with the Countess de Châteaubriand in the forest, i. 252-3-4; instigated by the Countess de Châteaubriand, the King recalls the Duke de Bourbon from Milan, i. 256; appoints the Maréchal de Lautrec, brother to the

Francis I. continued.

Countess, governor of Milan, ib.; jealousy of Francis, i. 258; his increasing dislike for the Connétable alluded to, ib.; the Connétable's affection for his sister known to Francis, i. 259; efforts of the King to effect the recognition of the Concordat, i. 260-1; his interview with the president of parliament thereon, ib.; threatens to throw the two delegates from parliament into the castle moat, i. 263-4; compels the parliament to register the Concordat, ib.; unpopularity of, i. 265; invites Leonardo da Vinci to his Court, i. 269; encourages talent, ib.; devotes a portion of his time to the society of learned men, i. 270-1; his interview with Julio Camilla, an Italian impostor, i. 272; invites Erasmus to France, ib.; efforts of the King to found the Royal College, i. 272-3; the unbounded influence of Madame de Châteaubriand over the King, i. 277-8; permits his mother to take an active part in his government, ib.; arrogance of, i. 279; his profusion, i. 280; his ingratitude to the Maréchal de Trivulce, i. 282; bestows the bâton of Maréchal upon M. de Lescun, i. 284; the increasing popularity of Charles V. of Spain, induces the King to form an alliance with Henry VIII, i. 287; sends Bonnavet on a mission to England, i. 288; objects of the mission, ib.; offers the hand of the Dauphin to the Princess Mary of England, ib.; his anxiety to secure the good-will of Henry VIII, i. 296; fortifies Tournay, Têrouenne, and Havre, i. 297; endeavours to conciliate Charles of Castile, ib.; offers to undertake a crusade against the Turks, i. 298; his jealousy of Charles V. alluded to, i. 300; his advice to the Pope, on the Emperor Maximilian demanding the Crown of Rome, i. 301; despatches Bonnavet to Frankfurt to purchase the votes of the Electors, i. 303; distributes 400,000 crowns among the Electoral Princes, i. 305; his pretensions for the Empire contrasted with those of Charles V, i. 309-11; wily policy of the Pope

Francis I. continued.

to, during his contest for the empire, i. 312; duplicity of Henry VIII. to, ib.; discourages the return of Queen-dowager of Spain to his Court, and loses the votes of two Electors, i. 313-4; offends the Flemings by his impolitic conduct towards the citizens of Tournay, i. 315; offends Robert de la Mark, i. 316; his interview with Seckingen at Amboise, i. 318; offends Seckingen by concealing from him that he aspired to the empire, i. 319-20; accused by Robert de la Mark of a breach of good faith, i. 322; loses the services of Robert de la Mark, and the Prince-bishop of Liege, i. 323; bold reply of Seckingen to, i. 324; loses the services of Seckingen, i. 325; neglects to attack some Turkish corsairs, which influences the votes of the Electors against the King, i. 326; death of M. de Boissy a serious loss to, i. 329; Leonardo da Vinci dies in the arms of, i. 330; mortification of Francis I. at the elevation of Charles V. to the imperial throne, i. 334-5; his self-command, ib.; instructs Sir Richard Wingfield to solicit Henry VIII. to stand sponsor for his second son, i. 335; purchases the Tuileries for his mother, i. 337; resolves to rebuild the Louvre, ib.; his amusements alluded to, i. 338; Bonnivet excites the King to commence a new war, i. 338-9; endeavours to secure the friendship of Henry VIII. of England, i. 340; bribes Wolsey, ib.; the Navarrese question is revived between the King and the Emperor Charles, i. 341; misunderstanding between the Courts of France and Spain, i. 342; the preparations for the interview between the King and Henry VIII, i. 343; the visit of Charles V. to the King of England at Dover, excites the apprehensions of, i. 346; ceremony of the meeting of the King with Henry VIII. at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 349; his appearance at the meeting with the English King, i. 350-1-2; his courteous bearing to Henry VIII. described, i. 353; the tourney at the Field of the Cloth of

Francis I. continued.

Gold, i. 355; Francis annoyed at the restraints upon the free intercourse between the two Courts, visits the English King unattended, i. 356; mutual pledge of friendship, i. 357; exchange of visits between the two Kings, i. 358; the King of France throws Henry VIII. in a wrestling-match, i. 359; gives a grand banquet to the English King, i. 360; at the parting mass, i. 361; returns to France, i. 362; serious accident to, i. 368; his generosity, i. 369; reluctance of Francis to commence the war against the Emperor, i. 371; his attachment to Madame de Châteaubriand, ib.; receives the allegiance of Robert de la Mark, i. 373; enters into a treaty with the Pope, to expel the Spaniards from Naples, i. 375; supplies Henri d'Albret with troops, to recover his territories from Charles V, i. 377; his appeal to the English King to mediate between him and the Emperor Charles alluded to, i. 380; agrees to a conference at Calais, ib.; fortifies his frontiers, and prepares for war with the Emperor, i. 381; sends Bonnivet with an army into Navarre, ib.; his indignation at the bad faith of Henry VIII, i. 384; his self-reliance, ib.; confides the defence of the city of Mézières to Bayard, i. 385; overtakes the army of the Count de Nassau, but neglects to fight, i. 386; his grief at his error, i. 387; departs for Flanders, ib.; confers the Order of Philip Augustus upon Bayard, i. 393; his letter to his mother, on the relief of the city of Mézières, i. 394; influenced by the Maréchal de Châtillon, the King neglects to attack Charles V, i. 395; confers the command of the vanguard upon the Duke d'Alençon, and offends the Constable Bourbon, ib.; disbands a portion of his army, i. 396; the exhausted state of his treasury, i. 400; his increasing affection for the Countess Châteaubriand, ib.; presents her with costly ornaments, ib.; the Pope declares war against France, i. 406; becomes convinced of the bad faith of

Francis I. continued.

Henry VIII. and Wolsey, i. 410 ; his indignation on hearing of the reverses of the French army in Milan, ib. ; his remark to the Constable Bourbon, on the magnificence of Bonnivet, i. 419 ; the hand of the Princess Renée demanded by the Constable Bourbon, i. 421 ; resolves to reconquer the Milanese, i. 423 ; his prospects alluded to, ib. ; anticipates a war with England, ib. ; levies a tax on the states of Languedoc, i. 424 ; forwards supplies to Marshal Lautrec in Italy, i. 425 ; his improvidence, i. 442 ; insulted, in his palace of the Tournelles, i. 443 ; neglects to defend the frontiers at Champagne and Picardy, ib. ; his pleasures alluded to, i. 445 ; the Venetian states enter the League against France, ib. ; averse to act in concert with Charles V. against the Turks, i. 446 ; irritation of Francis on the arrival of Marshal Lautrec at Court, i. 447 ; at the request of the Duke de Bourbon, grants an interview with Lautrec, i. 449 ; his interview with the marshal leads to the discovery of the appropriation of the public moneys by Louise de Savoie, i. 450-1-2-3-4 ; reconciled with Marshal Lautrec, i. 455 ; orders troops to the relief of Fontarabia, i. 457 ; writes to Henry VIII, respecting the Duke d'Aubigny's presence in Scotland, i. 462 ; his dignified reply to Sir Thomas Cheyne, the English ambassador, previous to the declaration of war, i. 463-4-5 ; returns to Lyons, ib. ; coins a silver screen, erected by Louis XI. round the tomb of St. Martin, to pay his troops, i. 466 ; by his vanity prevents the capture of the Duke d'Aerschoff, i. 467 ; prevents the Duke de Vendôme from attacking the Marquis de Fiennes, i. 468 ; pursues his measures for reconquering Milan, i. 469 ; informed of the treason of the Constable of France, i. 470 ; accuses the Constable, but suffers him to escape, i. 471 ; his suspicions against the Constable increase, i. 475 ; visits the Constable at his palace at Moulins, i. 476 ; the dissimulation of the Constable removes the King's suspicions, i. 477 ; takes the precaution of sending M. de Wartz to watch the Constable, ib. ; gives a hunting-party in the forest of Bussy, i. 479 ; misunderstanding between the King and Madame de Châteaubriand, i. 480-1 ; the King orders the arrest of the Count St. Vallier, a partisan of the Duke de Bourbon, i. 487 ; indignation of the King at the treason of the Duke de Bourbon, i. 488 ; sends an expedition against the Duke, ib. ; gives the command of the army against Italy to Bonnivet, i. 491 ; confiscates the estates of the Duke de Bourbon, ib. ; his anger at the leniency of the Parliament of Paris to the Bourbon conspirators, i. 493-4 ; his interview with Diana of Poitiers, who arrives at Court to intercede for the life of her father, i. 498-9-500 ; Francis commutes the sentence of Jean de Poitiers, i. 500 ; makes overtures to the Duke de Bourbon to return to his allegiance, i. 505 ; recalls the Duke de Vendôme to the defence of Paris, i. 508-9 ; reaps no benefit from the elevation of Clement VII. to the papedom, i. 517 ; assured of the immediate safety of his kingdom, gives himself up to pleasure, ib. ; his observation on hearing of the death of Bayard, i. 529 ; Milan lost to France, ii. 3 ; despatches Brion Chabot to assure the Marseillaise of relief, ii. 4 ; endeavours to regain the affections of his people, ii. 5 ; regulates the taxes, ib. ; rouses himself from his selfish indulgences, and levies a force to oppose the advance of the Duke de Bourbon, ii. 5-6 ; resolves to make another attempt to regain the Milanese, ii. 9-10 ; persists in heading the army in person, ib. ; his heartlessness on hearing of the death of Queen Claude, ii. 11 ; the King and Mademoiselle de Voland, ii. 12 ; takes Milan, ii. 13 ; imprudently suffers the Imperialists to condense their forces, ii. 14 ; enters into a treaty with the Pope, ii. 14 ; hangs the garrison of a fort, ii. 15 ; encamps at Mirabello, assaults Pavia, and is repulsed, ii. 15-16 ;

Francis I. continued.

Francis I. continued.

refuses the Pope's mediation to establish a truce with Spain for five years, ii. 17; enters into a secret treaty with the Pope, ii. 18; position of his army before Pavia, ii. 18; gives the command of nine thousand men to the Duke d'Aubigny, ii. 19; his army is reduced by sickness and desertion before Pavia, ii. 21; the imperial generals endeavour to bring the King to a general engagement, ii. 23-24; his charge before Pavia, ii. 25; evil influence of Bonnivet on the councils of the King, ii. 25-6; advised by his ablest generals to raise his camp, but overruled by Bonnivet, ii. 27; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28-30-1-2-3; kills the Marquis de St. Angelo, ii. 34; unhorses the Chevalier d'Andelot, ib.; his horse shot under him, ib.; endeavours to escape from the field of battle, ii. 34-5; taken prisoner, ii. 35; is saved from violence by M. de Pompérant, the friend of the Duke de Bourbon, ib.; refuses to surrender his sword to the Duke de Bourbon, ii. 36; claims the hospitality of Marquis del Guasto, ii. 37; his wounds are dressed, ii. 38; delivers his sword to Lannoy, the Viceroy of Naples, ib.; refuses the homage of the Duke de Bourbon, ib.; summoned by Pescara to set forth for Pavia, ii. 39; his celebrated letter to his mother alluded to, ib.; his capture causes a powerful sensation in the Imperialist camp, ii. 41-2; imprisoned in the citadel of Pizzighittona, ib.; his interview with Bourbon, ib.; discusses the battle of Pavia with Pescara, ii. 43; pardons M. de Pompérant, ib.; accepts the services of M. de Montpezat, ii. 44; ransoms M. de Montpezat, ii. 45; writes to the Emperor Charles V. to decide upon his future destiny, ib.; a double guard upon the King's person, ii. 65; indignation of the King on receiving the conditions of the Emperor for his release, ii. 66; rejects the Emperor's conditions, ii. 67; is persuaded by the Viceroy of Naples to trust to the clemency of the Emperor, and proceed to Madrid,

Francis I. continued.

ii. 68; lands in Spain, ii. 69; mutiny in the royal guards of Spain suppressed by the King, ib.; Francis is kept a close prisoner, ii. 70; indignities offered to the royal captive, ii. 71; illness of, alarms the Emperor, who visits Francis, ii. 72; the interview between the two monarchs, ii. 73; visited by Marguerite de Valois in prison, ii. 79; his act of abdication alluded to, ii. 84; the King attempts to escape from his prison, but fails in consequence of the treachery of a servant, ii. 85-6; recalls his act of abdication, ii. 91; his vanity alluded to, ii. 92; signs a secret protest, declaring his intention not to fulfil the conditions imposed upon him by the Emperor Charles V, ib.; concessions imposed upon France by the Emperor, ii. 93-4; betrothed to Eleonora, Dowager-queen of Portugal, ii. 95; departs for France, ii. 95; his meeting with his two sons, ib.; meets the Court at Bayonne, ii. 96; his delight on meeting the Countess de Châteaubriand, ii. 97; illness of the King, ib.; his evasive reply to the envoys of the Emperor, who urge the ratification of the treaty of Madrid, ib.; writes to Henry VIII, ii. 98; receives the ambassadors from the Pope and the Venetian states, and complains of the harsh measures of the Emperor, ib.; replaces the generals who fell at Pavia, ib.; receives a fall while hunting, which endangers his life, ib.; convokes an assembly of the Princes of the kingdom and the Burgundian deputies, ii. 99; the assembly declares allegiance to France, in defiance of the treaty extorted from the King when a prisoner to Charles V, ib.; signs a treaty with the Pope, Henry VIII, Francisco Sforza, and the Venetians, ib.; its object, ii. 100; his breach of faith with the Emperor, ii. 100-1; neglects to assist his allies, ii. 101; endeavours to negotiate with the Emperor, offers an equivalent in specie for the duchy of Burgundy, ii. 102; his triumphant reception in the south of France alluded to, ib.; his increased affect-

Francis I. continued.

tion for Madame de Châteaubriand, ib.; Mademoiselle de Heilly introduced to, ii. 108; effects of her appearance upon the King, ii. 109; suspected by the Italian states, ii. 114; accepts the services of Pietro da Navarro, ii. 115; his consternation on hearing of the fall of Rome, ii. 119–20; visits Paris, ib.; forbids the parliament to interfere in matters of state or ecclesiastical preferment, ii. 121–2; his injustice to M. de Semblançay, ib.; notices the Duchess d'Uzez, ii. 124; builds the Palace of Chambord, ii. 125–6; retires to Chambord, ii. 127; the Court beauties alluded to, ii. 128; his inattention to business alluded to, ib.; his prolonged absence from the capital renders the citizens disorderly, ii. 129; his inactivity alluded to, ii. 133; sends envoys to Spain to negotiate for the liberation of Clement VII, ii. 134; enters into a treaty with Henry VIII. against Spain, ii. 134–5; his interview with Cardinal Wolsey respecting the captivity of Clement VII, ii. 136; refuses the hand of Marguerite of Valois to Henry VIII, ii. 137; refuses to bestow the hand of his sister-in-law on the English King, ii. 139; Francis and Henry VIII. send a combined army against Italy, ii. 140; rivalry between the two favourites, the Countess de Châteaubriand and Anne de Pisseleu, at the Court of, ii. 143, his interview with the Countess, ii. 144; selects a husband for Mademoiselle de Heilly, ii. 146–7; his last interview with the Countess de Châteaubriand, ii. 156–7–8; presents Anne de Pisseleu with a jewel-casket, ii. 160; demands the jewels he had presented to the Countess de Châteaubriand to be returned to him, ii. 161; cites his sister to Paris on her being accused of seceding from the Romish Church, ii. 168; sends Anne de Montmorenci as ambassador to England, ii. 173; accused by the Emperor Charles V. of breaking his pledge, ii. 176; anger of Francis I, ii. 176–7; arrests Perrenot de Grandeville, the Imperial

Francis I. continued.

ambassador, ii. 177; his intemperate reply to the challenge of the Emperor Charles V, ii. 178; evades the Imperial herald, ii. 179–80; grants an audience to the Imperial herald, but refuses to let him deliver his message, ii. 181–2; the King forfeits his claim to be the most chivalrous monarch in Christendom, ib.; bad example of duelling upon the French nobility, ii. 183; the exhausted state of his treasury alluded to, ii. 185; negotiates with Charles V. for the release of his sons, ii. 186; undignified concessions of, at La Paix des Dames, ii. 187; he abandons his allies at the treaty of Cambray, ii. 188; consents to marry Eleonora, Queen of Portugal, ii. 187; his interview with her, ii. 190; his infatuation for Madame d'Etampes, ii. 192, 348; his efforts to establish a royal College alluded to, ii. 199; protects Luigi Alamanni, ib.; encourages learned and scientific men to settle in France, ii. 200; is dissuaded by Duprat from founding the College, ii. 203; the jealousy of the King is excited by the progress of the Reformation, ib.; abandons the cause of the reformers, more from policy than religious scruples, ii. 206; his superstition, ii. 207; he persecutes the Lutherans, ib., ii. 208; cruelty of the King to the reformers, ii. 209–10; indignation of Francis at the treaties entered into by the Emperor with the Pope, ii. 212–13; is anxious to avoid hostilities with Spain, ii. 214; death of his mother, ib.; liberates the Low Countries with the treasures left by Louise de Savoie, ii. 216; the King endeavours to annex Brittany to the crown of France, ii. 219; visits the Count de Châteaubriand, ii. 221; erects new palaces, ii. 222; erects the Château of Madrid, ii. 223–4; concludes a treaty of mutual defence with Henry VIII, ii. 224; advises Henry VIII. to marry Anna Boleyn in defiance of the Church, ii. 225; reply of, to the Protestant princes of Germany, ii. 227; the King of Hungary sends ambassadors to the

Francis I. continued.

French court, ib.; policy of Francis, ib.; proceeds to Boulogne to meet Henry VIII, ii. 228; his interview with Henry VIII, ib.; invests the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk with the collar of St. Michael, ii. 229; concludes a treaty with Henry VIII. against the Turks, ib.; complains to Henry VIII. of the exactions of the prothonotaries of Rome, ii. 231; summoned by Charles V. to send an army against the Turks, ib.; his refusal, ii. 232; his bad faith to Henry VIII. alluded to, ii. 233; offers the hand of the Duke of Orleans to Catherine de' Medici, ib.; sends two French Bishops to threaten the Pope, ii. 234; a meeting is arranged between the Pope and Francis, ii. 241; indignation of Francis at the execution of his agent at Milan, ii. 246; dismisses the envoy of the Duke of Milan with ignominy, ii. 248; meets the Pope at Marseilles, ii. 252; homage of Francis to the Pope, ii. 253; advises the Pope to sanction the divorce of Henry VIII, ii. 254; invests four papal dignitaries with the order of St. Michael, ii. 258; the Court returns to Amboise, ii. 259; his female Court described, ii. 263-4-5-6; his household, how composed, ii. 267-8-9; his profligacy, ii. 270; reorganizes his army, ii. 276-7; Francis is accused of sympathising with the Turks, ii. 278; his barbarity towards the Reformists, ii. 279; burns six Reformists, ii. 280; abolishes printing throughout France, ii. 284; the league of the Smalkalden declare against Francis, ib.; invites Melancthon to France, ib.; declares war against Savoy, ii. 285; his interview with Diana of Poitiers respecting the melancholy of the Duke d'Angoulême, ii. 291-2-3; refuses to banish Diana of Poitiers from Court, ii. 298; Charles offers the duchy of Milan to the Duke d'Angoulême, ii. 299; the King demands Milan for Duke d'Orleans, ii. 300; the negotiations with the Emperor respecting the Milanese is renewed, ii. 301; accused by the Emperor before the

Francis I. continued.

Conclave at Rome, ii. 302; moderation of Francis at the accusations of the Emperor, ii. 306; directs the Cardinal of Lorraine to demand the duchy of Milan of Charles, ib.; accused by the Emperor of cruelty towards the German Protestants, ii. 308; sends Guillaume du Bellay to Germany to explain to the Germans the fallacy of the accusation, ib.; disarms the army of Savoy, ii. 309; fortifies his frontier, ii. 309-11; proceeds to Lyons to resist the attempt of the Emperor to invade Provence, ib.; prepares for an invasion, ii. 311; intrusts Fossano to the Marquis de Saluzzo, ii. 315; his grief at the death of the Dauphin, ii. 319; orders his Court to be present at the execution of the murderer of the Dauphin, ii. 323-4; accuses the Imperial generals of instigating the murder, ii. 324; his instructions to the Duke of Orleans on joining the camp of Montmorenci, ii. 327; determines to head the army in person, ii. 329-30; joins the camp at Avignon, ib.; seconds the efforts of the Italian princes to form a league against Charles V, ii. 337; proceeds to Marseilles and strengthens Provence, ii. 342; meets James V. of Scotland at Lyons, ii. 343; gives James V. his daughter in marriage, ii. 344; rival factions at the Court of, ii. 346-7; disunion in the royal family, ii. 347; his declining health alluded to, ii. 348; lays claim to Flanders, Artois, and Charlerois, ii. 349-50; convokes a parliament thereon, and cites the Emperor to appear before the French tribunal, ii. 351; marches troops into Artois, and takes Hesdin, ib.; a truce is effected between France, Picardy, and the Low Countries, ii. 356; avows his alliance with the Sultan, ib.; appoints M. d'Humières to the command in Italy, ii. 357; proceeds to Lyons, after providing for the safety of France during his absence, ii. 358-9; commences the campaign by forcing the Pas-de-Suze, ib.; the King resolves to take the field in person, ii. 361; jealous of the success of his son,

Francis I. continued.

ib.; terminates the war by negotiation, ib.; disbands his army, ii. 363; objects to the terms proposed by the Emperor for a general peace, ii. 364; the Pope arranges an interview between Francis and the Emperor, ii. 369; the Pope mediates between the two potentates, ii. 372; concludes a truce for ten years with the Emperor, ii. 373; returns to Avignon, ib.; meeting of the French King and the Emperor at Aigues-Mortes, ii. 374; confidence of, ib.; meets the Emperor, ii. 375; returns to Paris, and plunges into dissipation, ii. 376; his intrigue with La Belle Ferroniere, ii. 377; illness of, ii. 379; refuses the allegiance of the Ghentese, ii. 381; gives permission to Charles V. to traverse France on his visit to the Low Countries, ii. 383; his interview with the Duchess d'Etampes thereon, ii. 384-5; advised by the Duchess to arrest Charles V. ii. 386; his magnanimity, ii. 387; his adventure with the enamelled gold chain intended for the Connétable Montmorenci, ii. 389; his hatred to the Connétable, ii. 390; meets the Emperor at Châtellerault, ii. 394; hospitality of, towards Charles V, ii. 396; his anger at the Court perfumer, ii. 397; the King informs the Emperor of the advice of Madame d'Etampes, ii. 399; becomes suspicious of his counselors, ii. 403; arrests Chabot, ii. 403-4; pardons Chabot, ii. 406-7; refuses the hand of Philip of Spain for the Princess of Navarre, and of the Princess of Spain for the Duke of Orleans, ii. 410-11; offers the hand of the Princess of Navarre to the Duke of Cleves, ii. 413; orders the Connétable to leave Court, ii. 414; changed aspect of his Court alluded to, ii. 425; his anger at the treaty between the Venetians and the Turks, ii. 427; summons the Emperor to make reparation for the murder of his two ambassadors, ii. 431; arrests the Archbishop of Valence, the natural son of the Emperor, ib.; resolves to declare war against the Emperor, ii. 435; his army attacks the Low Countries, ib.; his dislike to the Connétable de Montmorenci, ii. 441; his illness increased by the growing enmity of his two sons, ii. 442; influence of Catherine de' Medici over the King, ii. 443-4-5; increases the salt tax, ii. 446; revolt of the inhabitants of La Rochelle, ib.; visits Rochelle, suppresses the insurrection, and pardons the citizens, ii. 447-8; persecutes the Lutherans, ii. 453; sends an ambassador to the Sultan, ii. 454; marches his army northward, and opens the campaign of 1543, ii. 456; retires to Rheims, ii. 458; war with England alluded to, ii. 460; his inactivity permits the Emperor to reorganize his army, ib.; takes Luxembourg, ii. 463; fortifies Luxembourg, ii. 464; orders the Count d'Enghien to take command of the war-gallies at Marseilles, ii. 467; forms an alliance with the Turks, ib.; degrading concessions of the King to Barbarossa, ii. 470-1; indignation of the princes of Europe at his alliance with the Turks, ii. 473; exhausted state of his treasury, ii. 477; replenishes his treasury by the sale of judicial offices, ii. 478; raises a new army for the Count d'Enghien, ib.; permits the Count d'Enghien to give battle to the Imperialists, ii. 481-2-3-4; receives the jewelled watch of the Marquis del Guasto, ii. 492; France invaded by Charles V. and Henry VIII, ii. 493; his regret at the capitulation of St. Dizier, ii. 498-9; calms the fears of the citizens of Paris, ii. 499; his declining health alluded to, ii. 500; endeavours to appease the alarm of the citizens on the approach of the Imperialists, ii. 511; concludes a treaty with the Emperor, ib.; conditions of the treaty, ii. 512; orders the massacre of the Vaudois, ii. 518-24; his anger at the imprudence of the Dauphin, ii. 528; raises a fleet, and sends reinforcements to the Dowager-Queen of Scotland, ii. 529-30; visits his fleet, ii. 531; burning of the Caraquon, ii. 532;

Francis I. continued.

- Francis I. continued.
 arrives in the vicinity of Boulogne, ii. 541; his grief at the death of the Duke of Orleans, ib.; concludes a treaty of peace with England, ii. 543-4; strengthens his frontiers, ii. 545; refuses to assist the Protestant princes in their war with the Emperor, ii. 546-7; persecutes the Lutherans, ib., ii. 548; observations on his character, ii. 549; the death of Henry VIII. produces a fatal effect upon Francis, ii. 551; summons the Dauphin to his death-bed, ii. 552; death of, ii. 553; concluding remarks upon his reign, ii. 553-4; his burial, ii. 555.
- Franget, Captain, appointed to the command of Fontarabia, i. 459; see note ib.; his surrender of Fontarabia alluded to, i. 508.
- Frankfort, electors assemble at, i. 311; opinions of the electors of the conduct of Francis I. and Charles V, i. 325; electoral diet convened at, i. 329; deliberations opened at by the Archbishop of Mayence, i. 331; speech of the Archbishop of Treves, i. 332; Charles V proclaimed Emperor of Germany at, i. 333.
- Frederic, Duke de Saxe, one of the Electors of Germany, see note i. 299; refuses the Imperial crown of Germany, and recommends the Electors to elevate to the throne Charles V, i. 333; protects Luther, i. 336, 371.
- Fregosa, Ottavio, promises Francis I. to abdicate the throne of Genoa, and put himself under the protection of France, i. 157.
- Caesar, an ambassador from Francis I. to the Porte, ii. 427; murdered by order of the Marquis del Guasto, ii. 428.
- Fruntsberg joins the army of the Duke of Bourbon, ii. 117; his death by apoplexy alluded to, ii. 118.
- Furstemberg, Count Guillaume de, ordered by Francis I. to levy troops in Germany to invade the Milanese, ii. 285; defeated at Fontarabia by the Marquis de la Palice, i. 459; taken prisoner by the French, ii. 508-9.
- Gaillart, Louis, deprived of the bishopric of Tournay by Cardinal Wolsey, i. 288-9.
- Gattinara, Mercurio, endeavours to dissuade Charles V. from visiting the French King in prison, ii. 72.
- Genoa, revolt of, alluded to, i. 53; wanton cruelties of the Genoese, ib.; attacked by Louis XII, i. 54; surrenders to Louis XII, i. 55; terms of the surrender of, ib.; the revolt of the citizens of, and the election of one of the Fregosi as Doge alluded to, i. 83; attacked and pillaged by the Marquis de Pescara, i. 433-4.
- Genouilhac, Jacques Gaillot de, commands the French artillery at Pavia, ii. 24.
- Germany, Electors of, their views of the conduct of Charles V. and Francis I, i. 325.
- Germany, Protestant princes of, protest against the authority of Charles V, ii. 226; their remonstrances treated with contempt, ib.; apply to France and England for support, ii. 227; reply of Francis I, ib.; critical position of, under the rule of Maximilian, i. 303.
- Ghent, militia of, desert the Marquis de Finnes and retreat beyond the Lys, i. 468; revolt of the citizens of, ii. 380.
- Ghiberti, Juan Matteo, despatched by Clement VII. to Francis, to endeavour to establish a truce between France and Spain for five years, ii. 17.
- Gié, de, Maréchal, appointed governor of Francis I, i. 19; see note, ib.; rapid improvement of the Prince under his tuition, ib.; his attachment to Louise de Savoie, and its consequences, i. 20; the King visits him at Amboise, i. 21; interferes between Francis and Count de Montpensier, i. 29; detects M. de Vandenesse in an intrigue with Louise de Savoie, i. 30; his anger on hearing that the Queen had despatched her jewels and furniture to Nantes, in anticipation of the King's death, i. 32; endeavours to detain them in transitu, i. 33; cited before the King for lèse majesté, i. 34; his observation to Louise de Savoie, on her appearing against him, ib.; deprived of his titles, i. 35; his dignified retirement, ib.

- Gié, de, Maréchal, continued.
- Giustiniani, Demetrius, a Genoese general, execution of, in Corsica, i. 55.
- Gonsalvo di Cordova, admiration of Louis XII. for, i. 57.
- Gonzaga, Ferdinand, accused of promoting the death of the Dauphin by poison, ii. 322; see note, ib.; denies the accusation, ii. 324.
- Gouffier, Guillaume, Seigneur de Bonnavet, one of the suite of Louis XII, i. 23; see note, ib.; one of the companions of Francis at the Court of Amboise, i. 27; instigates Francis to quarrel with the Count de Montpensier, i. 29; created Admiral of the Fleet to Francis I, i. 141; his jealousy on witnessing the emotion of Marguerite de Valois on beholding the Constable de Bourbon, i. 164; his observation to the Count de Saint Vallier thereon, i. 165; his intrigue with the Countess de Châteaubriand, i. 258; his liaison with Countess de Châteaubriand, i. 278; sent on a mission to England, i. 287; secures the interest of Wolsey, i. 289; the embassy arrives at Greenwich, i. 290; his reception by Henry VIII, ib.; his success with Wolsey, i. 291–2–3; returns to France, i. 294; despatched to Frankfort, to secure the votes of the electors of the empire for Francis I, i. 303; arrives in France with the state chest from the diet of Frankfort, i. 334; excites the King to commence a war, i. 339; marches into Navarre to revenge the defeat of Marshal Lesparre, i. 381; his successes in Biscay at Fontarabia, i. 394; his intrigue with Marguerite de Valois alluded to, i. 418; dislike of the Constable Bourbon for, i. 419; ordered to establish himself at Suza with 6,000 men, i. 469; demands the sword of Jean de Poitiers, suspected of treason, i. 487; entrusted with the command of the army of Italy, i. 510; his inability, i. 511; amount of his army, i. 512; compels the Imperialists to retreat to Milan, 513; neglects to pursue his advantage,
- Gouffier, Guillaume, continued.
ib.; blockades Milan, i. 514; takes Monza, Lodi, and Cremona, ib.; his error in detaching the Chevalier Bayard to Vigevano, i. 515; raises the siege of Milan, and takes up winter quarters near Biagrasso, ib.; applies for reinforcements, i. 517; besieges Arona, but is repulsed, i. 517–18; detaches Bayard to Rebec to intercept supplies for Milan, i. 518; his interview with Bayard thereon, i. 519; his jealousy of Bayard alluded to, i. 520; accused of attempting to sacrifice Bayard, i. 522; attempts to provoke the Duke de Bourbon to an engagement, i. 523; determines to retreat to Navarra, ib.; pursued by the Duke de Bourbon and wounded, i. 524–5; enters France in confusion, ii. 3; assures Francis that his presence will ensure the subjugation of Milan, ii. 10; evil influence of his council upon the King, ii. 25–6; advises the King to fight the Imperialists at Pavia, ii. 27; death of, at Battle of Pavia, ii. 31.
- , Boisy, Artus de, tutor of Francis I, i. 18.
- Goujon, Jean, a famous sculptor, ii. 126; see note, ib.
- Grammont, Cardinal de, apprises Francis I. of the Pope's desire for a personal interview, ii. 230; despatched by the Kings of France and England to threaten the Pope, ii. 234.
- Grandvelle, Perenot de, ambassador from the Emperor Charles V. retires from France, ii. 177; his interview with Francis, ib.
- Gravelines, interview between the Emperor Charles V and Henry VIII. at, i. 366–7–8.
- Greiffenklau, Richard de, Archbishop of Treves, one of the Electors of Germany, see note, i. 299; his speech at the electoral diet in favour of Francis I, i. 332.
- Grignaud, M. de, the Duke de Valois warned by, against the consequences of an intimacy with the Queen, i. 130.
- Gritti, Andrea, retires within the Venetian territory, i. 433.
- Gros, Jean of Picardy, sends to Bayard for a bottle of wine, i. 392; its results, ib.

- Gruget, Claude, at the Court of Bearn, ii. 164.
- Guasto, Marquis del, his stratagem before Pavia, ii. 24; see note, ib.; at the Battle of Pavia, ii. 27–8; Francis requests his hospitality on being taken prisoner at the Battle of Pavia, ii. 37; retreats with the Imperial troops into the Milanese, ii. 333; successfully pursues the war in Piedmont, ii. 356; besieges Carmagnole, ii. 357; his cruelty, ii. 358; fortifies the Pas-de-Suze, ii. 359; raises the siege at Pignerol, and encamps at Moncalier, ii. 360; endeavours to prevent the Venetians from forming an alliance with Solyman, ii. 426; murders two French ambassadors, ii. 428; accused by Du Bellay, ii. 429; relieves Nice, ii. 471; besieges Mondori, ii. 472; his treachery, ib.; takes Carignano, ib.; endeavours to throw supplies into Carignano, ii. 479; military manoeuvres of, at Sommeriva, ii. 486; defeat of, at Carignano, ii. 488–9; wounded, ib.; refused admittance to Ast, ii. 490; taunted by the Milanese, ib.
- Gueldres, Maréchal de, position of in Brabant, ii. 436; see note, ib.; ravages the Low Countries, ii. 437.
- , Duke de, see Mark, Robert de la.
- Guinegatte, flight of gens'd'armes from the heights of, i. 102–3; designated as the Battle of the Spurs, i. 103.
- Guise, Claude, Duke de, joins the army for the recovery of the Milanese, i. 171; repulses the Germans from Franche-Comté, i. 508; disperses the insurrection of the German Reformers, ii. 54–5; at the interview between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 228; reinforces Peronne, ii. 339; appointed Lieutenant-General of Burgundy and Champagne, during the absence of Francis I, ii. 358; commands a division of the French army at Luxembourg, ii. 436; see note, ib.; retakes Montmedy, ii. 439.
- Gusman, Martin de, negotiates between the Emperor and Francis, ii. 506; see note, ib.
- Hallwin, Louis de, Lieut.-General in Picardy, i. 99; restrains the im-
- Hallwin, Louis de, continued.
petuosity of the Chevalier Bayard, i. 101; his misunderstanding with the Duke de Longueville alluded to, i. 111; taken prisoner at Téroouenne, ii. 354; see note, ib.
- Hampton Court, description of, ii. 174.
- Haye, Jean de la, at the Court of Bearn, ii. 165; President of the Parliament, deputed to present a remonstrance to Francis, on the forced presence of the Bastard of Savoy during the sitting of Parliament, i. 261.
- Henry VII. of England refused the hand of Marguerite de Valois, by the Grand Council, i. 39.
- VIII. of England, league made by him, with the Pope and Ferdinand of Spain, alluded to, i. 71; joins the cause of the Pope against France, i. 94; invades France and besieges Téroouenne, i. 99–100; his army attacked by Bayard, who captures a gun, ib.; joined by the Emperor Maximilian at Téroouenne, i. 101; his interview with the Chevalier Bayard, i. 107; demolishes Téroouenne and besieges Tournay, i. 112; embarks for England, i. 117; state of Europe in 1515, i. 152; enters into a treaty with Francis, i. 153–4; furnishes the Emperor Maximilian with money to recover the Milanese, i. 210; his efforts to induce Erasmus to reside in England alluded to, i. 273; persuaded by Wolsey, enters into a closer alliance with Francis, i. 292–3; enters into a treaty of marriage for the Princess Mary of England and the Dauphin, i. 293; withdraws from the contest for the Empire of Germany, i. 302–4; regrets declining the possession of Milan, offered to him by Maximilian, i. 305; his duplicity to Francis I. during his contest for the Imperial crown, i. 312; becomes sponsor to the second son of Francis I, i. 335; Francis I. endeavours to secure his alliance on commencing hostilities against Charles V, i. 339; consents to an interview with the French King, i. 341; the preparations for the King's interview with Francis, i. 343; visited by the Emperor

Henry VIII. continued.

Charles V. at Dover, i. 344; the Emperor weakens the interest of Francis I. with Henry, i. 345; preparations for the King's reception at Guisnes, i. 347; ceremony of the meeting of the King and Francis I. at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 349; his appearance at the meeting with the French King, i. 351-2; his courteous bearing to Francis described, i. 353-4; visited by Francis I. without attendants, i. 356; mutual pledge of friendship, i. 357; exchange of visits between the two kings, i. 358; distances all competitors at archery at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 359; the King of England thrown by the King of France in a wrestling match, ib.; gives a grand banquet to the French King, i. 360; departs for Gravelines, i. 362; his interview with the Emperor Charles V. at Gravelines, i. 366; festivities at Gravelines between the two Courts, i. 367; violates the pledges given to Francis I, ib.; the Emperor accompanies the King to Calais, ib.; returns to England, i. 368; appealed to by Francis I. and Charles V. to mediate between them, i. 380; his bad faith to Francis I, alluded to, i. 384; visited by Charles V. and ratifies the betrothal of the Princess Mary, and promises to land 40,000 men in France, i. 424; enters into a compact with the Constable of France to invade Normandy, i. 441-2; his interview with Charles V. at Dover, i. 461; invests his imperial guest with the Order of the Garter, ib.; his pretext for declaring war against France, i. 462; his letter to Francis I, alluded to, ib.; Charles V. confers the protectorate of the Low Countries upon, i. 464-5; declares war against France, ib.; his policy in reference to France before the battle of Pavia referred to, ii. 61; coolness of, towards Charles V, ib.; his demands upon the Emperor, respecting the French monarch, ii. 62; signs a new treaty with France, ib.; enters into a treaty known as the Holy League, ii. 99; its object, ii. 100; prepares to send an envoy to Spain to negotiate for the liberation of Clement VII, ii. 134; his treaty with Francis I. against Spain, explained, ii. 134-5; concludes a treaty of mutual defence with Francis I, ii. 224; called Defender of the Faith, ii. 225; his unpopularity, alluded to, ib.; proceeds to Calais to meet Francis I, ii. 228; his interview with Francis, ib.; concludes a treaty with Francis against the Turks, ii. 229; his indignation against the Pope, ii. 230; endeavours to persuade Francis I. not to submit to the degradation of kissing the Pope's toe, ib.; in conjunction with Francis I. he despatches two French Bishops to threaten the Pope, ii. 234; returns to England, ii. 235; despatches Bishop Bonner to the Pope, to announce that the King had appealed from the decision of His Holiness to that of a general council, ii. 255; his marriage with Anna Boleyn alluded to, ii. 274; he is excommunicated by the Pope, ii. 275; avows himself the head of the Reformers, ib.; persecution of the Romanists by, ib.; his jealousy at the marriage of James V. of Scotland with the Princess Marguerite, ii. 344; furnishes Charles V. with 10,000 men, ii. 460; invades France in conjunction with Charles V, ii. 492-3; plan of the campaign, ii. 494; his jealousy of Charles, ib.; his distrust of Charles V. prevents the co-operation of the allied forces, ii. 501-5; Boulogne taken by, ii. 510; abandoned by Charles V, retreats to Calais and embarks for England, ii. 513-14; his German levies, refused a passage through the territories of the Emperor, ii. 540; arrives at Portsmouth and witnesses the loss of the Mary Rose, ii. 534; concludes a treaty of peace with France, ii. 543-4; death of, ii. 550-1; its effect upon Francis I, ib.

Henry VIII. continued.

Hesdin, city of, taken by siege, ii. 351.

Hesse, Landgrave of, compelled to pay tribute to François de Seckingen, i. 317; see note, ib.

- Holy League, signed by Francis I, the Pope, Henry VIII, Francesco Sforza, and the Venetians, ii. 99; object of the, ii. 100.
- Hungary, King of, see Zapolski, John de.
- Isabella of Spain, her death alluded to, i. 43.
- Iscalin, Paulin, ambassador from Francis to the Sultan, ii. 454; see note, ib.; induces Solyman to co-operate with Francis, ii. 455.
- Italy, exhausted state of, during the wars between Charles V. and Francis I. alluded to, ii. 186; literature and art in, ii. 201.
- James IV. of Scotland, his death alluded to, at Flodden Field, i. 116.
- V. of Scotland, meets Francis I. at Lyons, ii. 343; marries the Princess Marguerite, ib.; his knight errantry, ii. 345; death of the Princess Marguerite, ib.; marries Mary of Guise, ii. 346; his death alluded to, ii. 459.
- Jamets, Seigneur de, son of Robert de la Mark, his services alluded to, i. 316.
- Jarbes, Bishop of, obtains permission from Francis for the Emperor to traverse the French territories, ii. 382.
- Jeanne la Folle, widow of the Archduke Philip, her miserable condition, i. 48; her jealousy of her dead husband, i. 49; helpless condition of her children, ib.
- de France, Queen of Louis XII, i. 6; personal appearance of, i. 7; intercedes with Charles VIII. for the release of her husband when Duke of Orleans, i. 11; her marriage with the King declared null and void by the Pope, i. 15; founds the convent of the Annunciation, i. 16; death of, ib.
- de Navarre, her marriage with the Duke of Cleves annulled, ii. 463; marries the Duke de Bourbon, ib.
- Julius II. determines on war, i. 49; character of, i. 50; his chagrin on finding that the treaty between himself and Louis XII. for the invasion of Venice had been annulled, i. 50; resolves to attack
- Julius II. continued.
Bologna, i. 51–2; establishes Republics at Perousa and Bologna, i. 53; avoids an interview with Louis XII, i. 57–8; endeavours to subjugate Venice, i. 61; hostility of, to France, i. 68; despatches an army into Romagna under the command of the Duke d'Urbino, i. 65; attacks Mirandola, i. 70; returns to Ravenna, ib.; enters into a league with Ferdinand and Henry VIII, i. 71; alarm of, at the success of the French in Italy, i. 81; persuaded by Giulio de' Medici not to offer terms to Louis XII, ib.; instructs Cardinal Sion to raise troops against the Milanese, i. 82; the vaunt of the Pope accomplished, i. 83; efforts of, to undermine the interests of France, i. 92; death of, i. 93.
- Katherine of Aragon, her death alluded to, ii. 275; her interview with the Queen of France at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 358–9.
- King of Navarre. See D'Albret, Henri.
- Lafayette, Admiral, his attack upon the Imperial flotilla at the siege of Marseilles alluded to, ii. 7; conveys the remnant of the French army from Civita Vecchia to Marseilles, ii. 54.
- Lalande, M. de, governor of the citadel of Luxembourg, ii. 464; see note, ib.; death of, ii. 498.
- Lambesc, François de, death of at the battle of Pavia, ii. 32.
- La Muette, chateau of, alluded to, ii. 222.
- Landrecies, taken by Annebaut, ii. 457; fortified by Francis, ii. 458.
- Languedoc, Francis I. levies a tax on the states of, for the purpose of repairing the fortifications of Narbonne and the fortresses of the Pyrenees, i. 424.
- Lannoy, Charles de, Viceroy of Naples, position of, on the commencement of the campaign of the French to recover the Milanese, i. 513; enters Milan, i. 516; engages to assist at the siege of Marseilles, ii. 4; his delay alluded to, ii. 7; surrenders Milan, ii. 13; refuses the Pope's mediation to establish a truce for five years between Spain and France, ii. 17; leaves Naples defenceless in order to strengthen his army in the Milanese, ii. 19; introduces supplies into Pavia by stratagem, ib.; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28; Francis I. surrenders his sword to, on being taken prisoner, ii. 38; forbids the Imperialist soldiers to approach the camp of Francis I. ii. 42; transfers the King to the citadel of Pizzighettona, ib.; persuades Francis I. to place confidence in Charles V. and remove to Madrid, ii. 66–8–9; conducts the King to Spain, ii. 69; makes his escape from the mutineers of the royal guard, ib.; Charles V. rewards him for his treachery, ii. 70; accused by the Duke of Bourbon and the Marquis de Pescara of perfidy and cowardice, ii. 73–4; introduced to the assembly convoked by Francis, to decide between the Emperor and himself, ii. 99; indignation of, at the non-fulfilment of the treaty, on the part of Francis I. with Charles V, ii. 100; returns to Spain, ib.

- Lannoy, Charles de, continued.
- Lansquenets, the, mercenary troops in the pay of France, i. 186; they give way before the attack of the Swiss at Marignano, i. 187.
- La Paix des Dames, conditions of, ii. 187.
- Lascaris, John, his services in oriental learning alluded to, i. 270.
- Lauffen, Wittemberg de, death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 32.
- Lautrec, Marshal de, see Foix, Adet de.
- Lenoncourt, Robert de, Archbishop of Paris, crowns Francis I. at Rheims, i. 136.
- Leo X, see Medici, de, Cardinal.
- Le Pere, Daniel, extract from, describing the burning of six Reformers by order of Francis I, ii. 279.
- Lescun, M. de, created a Maréchal of France, i. 284; receives temporary command of the army in Italy, i. 329; his interview with Francis, on the loss of Milan, i. 410; at Bicocca, i. 427–8–9; left in command in Italy during the absence of Marshal Lautrec, i. 431; invested in Cremona by
- Lescun, M. de, continued.
 Colonna, i. 432; undertakes to surrender, unless supplies arrive from France, ib.; evacuates Lombardy, i. 433; his advice to the King previous to the battle of Pavia, ii. 26; death of, at the battle of Pavia, alluded to, ii. 33; seeks for the body of Bonnavet, ii. 39; death of, ii. 40.
- Lesmondi, his description of the burning of the Reformists by order of Francis I, ii. 280.
- Lesparre, Marquis de, appointed to the command of the army in Navarre to recover the territories of Henri d'Albret, i. 377; takes Pampeluna, i. 378; his imprudence, i. 379; defeated and taken prisoner, ib.
- Leyva, Antonia da, General, defends Pavia against the French, ii. 15; see note, ib.; introduces supplies into Pavia by stratagem, ii. 19–21; robs the churches to pay his troops, ii. 20; his evasion with the priests, ii. 21; harasses the French troops, ii. 23; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28–33; overhears his meditated assassination by Morone, ii. 77; arrests Morone, ib.; governor of Milan, ii. 249; besieges Turin, ii. 315; attacks Foscano, ii. 316; accused of promoting the death of the Dauphin by poison, ii. 322; denies the accusation, ii. 324; death of, ii. 328.
- Lisle, Lord, his government of Boulogne alluded to, ii. 531.
- Literature, progress of, i. 269–70–1.
- Livry, hermit of, a Lutheran, burnt by order of Louise de Savoie, in front of Nôtre Dame, ii. 56.
- Logrogno, siege of, alluded to, i. 379.
- London, Bishop of, attends upon Cardinal Wolsey on his mission to France, ii. 136.
- Longueville, Francis, Duke de, commands the rear-guard of Louis XII.'s army against the Venetians, i. 62; his quarrel with the Duke de Bourbon alluded to, i. 85; see note, ib.; gallant attempt of, to throw provisions into the town of Têrouenne, i. 101; a prisoner to the English, i. 103; his quarrel with Louis de Hallwin alluded to, i. 111; wins 50,000 crowns from Henry VIII. at tennis, with which

- Longueville, Duke de, continued.
 he purchases his liberty, i. 121;
 negotiates for the hand of the Princess Mary of England, ib.; represents the King of France
 at the marriage of the Princess Mary, i. 125.
- Lorges, Jacques de, Earl of Montgomery, despatched by Francis I.
 with troops to support the Dowager-Queen of Scotland, ii. 529; see note, ib.
- Lorraine, Duke de, his marriage with Mademoiselle de Bourbon alluded to, i. 146; one of the sponsors at the baptism of the Dauphin, i. 244; compelled to pay tribute to François de Seck-ingen, i. 317; ordered by Francis to harass the Imperialists, ii. 6;
 death of, at the battle of Pavia,
 ii. 40.
- Cardinal de, his profligacy alluded to, ii. 270; see note, ib.; directed by Francis I. to remind the Emperor Charles V. of his promise of ceding the duchy of Milan to the French prince, ii.
 306; informs the King that the Dauphin died from poison, ii. 321;
 exile of, ii. 422.
- Louis XI, his crafty policy towards the Dauphin, afterwards Charles VIII, alluded to, i. 8.
- XII, his misgivings respecting the ambition of his successor, Francis I, i. 3; called the father of his people, i. 4; his prudence, ib.; encourages learning, i. 5; discourages extravagance in his nobility, ib.; his courage alluded to, ib.; his magnanimous reply to his courtiers on dismissing General d'Alviano, i. 6; observations on his marriage with Jeanne de France, ib.; his romantic passion for Anne de Bretagne, i. 7; the love of Anne de France for, when Duke of Orleans, alluded to, i.
 10; warned by the Count de Dunois against the blandishments of Anne de France, ib.; claims the right of governing the kingdom during the minority of Charles, ib.; confined in the tower of Bourges, i. 11; released by order of the King, ib.; consoles Anne de Bretagne on the death of her husband, Charles VIII, i. 15;
 marries Anne de Bretagne, widow of Charles VIII, i. 16; calls Louise de Savoie to Court, i. 18; its consequences, ib.; indisposition of the King at Amboise, i. 24; influenced by the Queen, i. 25; remark of the King on Anne of Bretagne espousing the cause of Pope Julius II, i. 26; departs from Amboise, ib.; increasing illness of, i. 31;
 anxiety of the Queen, i. 32; determination of the King to bestow the hand of Marguerite de Valois upon Charles III, Duke d'Alençon,
 i. 39; his motives, i. 40; the King suffers a relapse, and at the instigation of Cardinal d'Amboise, executes a will, directing the Princess Claude to marry Francis Count d'Angoulême, i. 42; recovery of the King, ib.; marriage of his niece Germaine de Foix with Ferdinand of Castile, i. 43-4; applies himself to the internal economy of his kingdom, ib.; assembles the States-general, and stratagem of the King to procure a marriage between the Duke de Valois and the Princess Claude,
 i. 45-6; called the father of his people, ib.; his bad faith in violating a treaty of his daughter's marriage alluded to, i. 47; his liberality towards the sons of the Archduke Philip, i. 49; orders
 M. de Chaumont to march upon Bologna, i. 52; instigated by Cardinal d'Amboise, refuses assistance to Prince Bentivoglio, ib.; enraged at the cruelties of the Genoese, marches an army against Genoa, i. 53-4; entry of the King into Genoa, i. 56; hangs seventy-nine Genoese, ib.; condemns Genoa to pay a fine of 300,000 florins, disbands his army, and proceeds to Milan, ib.; entertained by the Marquis de Vige-vano, i. 56; proceeds to Savona, his respect for Gonsalvo de Cordova, i. 57; his desire for an interview with Pope Julius II. defeated, i. 58; the King re-enters Italy with a large army, i. 62;
 position of his forces, ib.; compelled to retreat before the Count Pitigliano, i. 63; wins the battle of Agnadello, ib.; success of the King's arms in Italy, i. 64; puts the citizens of Peschiera to death,

Louis XII. continued.

ib.; Brescia, Crema, Pizzighetona, and Cremona taken by, ib.; returns to France, i. 66; resides at Blois, i. 68; hostility of the Pope towards France, ib.; the Swiss troops desert the King, ib.; the instability of the Emperor Maximilian prevents him taking the field against the Pope, i. 69; calls a council of his own prelates at Tours, ib.; the council of prelates authorizes the King to resist the Pope, ib.; preparations of the King to resist the league of the Pope, Ferdinand of Spain, and Henry VIII. of England, i. 71; advises Gaston de Foix to bring the enemy to a speedy engagement, i. 72; his reply when congratulated upon the conquest of Ravenna, i. 78; the religious scruples of the Queen encourage Julius II. not to offer terms to, after the battle of Ravenna, i. 81-2; resolves to assist the King of Navarre, i. 85; invests the Duke of Valois with the command of his army, ib.; enters into a league with the Venetian states, i. 91; efforts of, to conciliate Leo X. ineffectual, i. 94; concludes a treaty of peace for twelve months with Spain and the Venetian states, ib.; the Swiss take up arms against him, ib.; again invades the Milanese, i. 95; captures their principal cities, ib.; battle of Vivergano, i. 96-7; his troops driven out of Italy, i. 98; mortgages part of his crown land, i. 99; conveyed to Amiens in a litter to oppose the advance of the English under Henry VIII, i. 99; at the siege of Téroouenne, i. 101; profiting by the supineness of Henry VIII. and Maximilian, withdraws his army into Picardy, i. 107; the divisions amongst his generals induce the King to appoint the Duke de Valois to the command of the army, i. 111; Burgundy revolts against the King, i. 112; refuses to ratify the treaty signed at Dijon between M. de Tremouille and the Swiss generals, i. 115; endeavours to conciliate the Swiss, i. 116; treaty of Orleans, granting a truce for twelve months, i. 117; the King

Louis XII. continued.

accedes to all the demands of the Pope, ib.; death of the Queen, and grief of the King, i. 118; urged to take a third wife, i. 119; Ferdinand of Spain offers the King the hand of Eleonora of Austria, i. 120; negotiates with Henry VIII. for the hand of the Princess Mary of England, i. 120-1; misunderstanding with the King of France, i. 122; conditions of the marriage treaty, i. 123; impatience of the King to see his bride, the Princess Mary, i. 125; fascinated with her beauty, i. 126; gorgeous ceremony of his nuptials at Abbeville, i. 127; symptoms of his approaching death appear before the festivities of his marriage terminate, i. 131; summons his successor, Francis, to his bedside, and expires, i. 132; his liberality alluded to, i. 142; his death alluded to, i. 3-6.

— Count Palatine of the Rhine, one of the Electors of Germany, i. 299; see note; protects Luther, i. 336.

— King of Bavaria, one of the Electors of Germany, i. 299; see note.

Louise de Savoie, see Savoie.

Louvre, the, commencement of, alluded to, ii. 222.

“Loyal Servant,” the, his description of the armies of Pope Julius II. and Ferdinand of Spain, previous to the battle of Ravenna, i. 73; description of the death of Gaston de Foix, i. 77; extracts from, on the capture of Villa Franca, i. 178; extract from, respecting the godmother of the Dauphin, i. 244; see note, ib.

Loyola, Ignatius, gallantry of, at Pampeluna, i. 378; wounded, ib.

Lunato, occupation of, by Marquis of Mantua alluded to, i. 65.

Luther, Martin, the extortions of Leo X. exposed by, i. 275-6-7; increase of his party, i. 336; protected by the Duke of Saxony and the Elector Palatine, ib.; excommunicated by Pope Leo X, i. 370; invited to the Diet at Worms by the Emperor Charles V, i. 371; protected by the Elector of Saxony, ib.; his death alluded to, ii. 545; see note, ib.

- Lutherans, persecution of the, ii. 207; burning of Jean le Clerc and Louis de Berguin, ii. 206–7–8; the Inquisition at Toulouse and Lyons, ii. 208; persecution of, by Francis I., ii. 453; massacre of, ii. 518–24; persecution of, in France, ii. 547–8–9.
- Luxembourg, Duke de, intended marriage of, with the Princess Claude, alluded to, i. 25–36.
- capture of, by Francis I., ii. 463; fortified, ii. 464; besieged by the Imperialists, ii. 464–5.
- Madrid, Château of, in the Bois de Boulogne, alluded to, ii. 222–3.
- Mailli, Antoine de, his death, ii. 351.
- Mantua, Marquis of, occupies Asola and Lunato, i. 65; the Papal army commanded by, i. 512.
- Maraviglia, his position at Milan, ii. 242; agent for Francis I., ib.; his vanity alluded to, ii. 243; the Emperor demands his dismissal from the Court of Milan, ib.; quarrel of one of his lacqueys with the Count Castiglione, ii. 244; trial of, and death, ii. 246.
- Marguerite de Valois, see Valois, Marguerite de.
- of Austria, betrothed to Charles VIII. of France, i. 7; see note; refusal of the King to perform the contract, i. 12; persuades Robert de la Mark and the Prince-Bishop of Liège to join the cause of her nephew, Charles V., i. 323; accompanies Charles V. to Gravelines, to meet Henry VIII, i. 366–7; her regret at the rupture between Charles V. and Robert de la Mark, i. 373; meets Louise de Savoie at Cambray, to arrange the conditions for the release of the French princes, ii. 186; her tact alluded to, ii. 187; concludes a peace, known as La Paix des Dames, ib.; protects the allies of the Emperor, ii. 189; her death alluded to, ii. 226.
- Marguerite, Princess, her marriage with James V. of Scotland, ii. 343; her death, ii. 345.
- Marignano, battle of, i. 186–94.
- Mark, Robert de la, Duke de Gueldres, one of the leaders in the army of Louis XII. against Venice, i. 62; desperate bravery of, at the battle of Vivegano, i. 97;
- Mark, Robert de la, continued.
see note, ib.; joins the army for the recovery of the Milanese, i. 171; withdraws from the army in Italy, to check the aggressions of the Brabanters, i. 181; joins Francis at Turin, with 6,000 lansquenets, i. 183; his services to Francis I. alluded to, i. 316; his intimacy with François de Seckingen, ib.; recommends François de Seckingen to Francis I., i. 317–18; disgraced by Francis, at the instigation of his mother, i. 320–1; his indignation on detecting the treachery of Madame d'Angoulême, i. 322; deserts the cause of Francis I., and joins Charles V, i. 323; ingratitude of the Emperor to, i. 372; quarrels with the Emperor, and returns his allegiance to Francis, i. 373; defies the Emperor at the Diet at Worms, i. 374; besieges Vireton, ib.; his territories ravaged by order of the Emperor, Charles V, i. 380–1; his interests abandoned by France, at the treaty of Cambray, ii. 188.
- , Evrard de la, Bishop of Liège, his government alluded to, i. 316; treacherous conduct of Madame d'Angoulême to, i. 321; joins the cause of Charles V, i. 323.
- Marot, Clement, the French poet, see i. 333, n.; valet-de-chambre to Marguerite de Valois, ii. 56; committed to prison for eating meat during Lent, and released by Marguerite de Valois, ii. 57; inconsistency of his conduct, during the progress of the Reformation, ii. 205.
- Marseilles, siege of, ii. 4; relieved by Lorenzo de Céri, ib.; noble defence of the citizens of, ii. 6–7; the ladies' trench, ib.; disappointment of the Duke de Bourbon, at the protracted defence of, ii. 7–8; the Imperialists retire from, ii. 8–9.
- Mary, Princess, of England, sister of Henry VIII. (Queen of Louis XII.), negotiations for her marriage with Louis XII, i. 120–1; conditions of the marriage treaty, i. 123; disparity of their ages, ib.; her love for Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, i. 124; her declaration previous to the ratification of her marriage, ib.; married by proxy at Greenwich, i. 125; her reception in France by the King, ib.; Anne Boleyn one of her maids of honour, i. 126; her extreme beauty, i. 127; gorgeous ceremony of her second marriage at Abbeville, i. 127; crowned at St. Denis, ib.; festivities on her entering Paris, i. 128; her love for Francis, Duke de Valois, i. 129-30; accused of attempting to impose a surreptitious heir upon the French nation, ib.; imprudence of, during her short reign as Queen of France alluded to, i. 131; interview with Francis I. previous to his coronation, i. 137; her marriage with the Duke of Suffolk, i. 138-9; returns to England, ib.

Mary, Princess, continued.

— Princess, of England, daughter of Henry VIII, betrothed to the Dauphin, i. 294, note; performs in several comedies for the amusement of the French courtiers, ii. 173.

— Queen of Scots, alluded to, ii. 459.

Maximilian, Emperor, indignation of, on the refusal of Charles VIII. to marry his daughter, the Princess Marguerite, i. 12; the treaty between Louis XII. and, alluded to, i. 50; the revolt of Genoa, attributed to the machinations of, i. 53; attacks Trevisa, i. 65; his weakness induces the Venetians to retake Padua, i. 66; applies to Louis XII. for assistance, ib.; flight of, i. 67; desertion of his Swiss troops, ib.; treacherous conduct towards Louis XII, i. 82; withdraws his forces from the French army, i. 83; consents to the marriage of the Princess Renée with the Prince Charles of Austria, provided the Princess is educated at his Court, i. 92; Leo X. obtains his co-operation against France, i. 95; joins the army of Henry VIII. at Têrouenne, i. 101; his interview with the Chevalier Bayard, i. 106-7; induces Henry VIII. to demolish Têrouenne, i. 112; his bad faith alluded to, i. 152-3; posture of political parties in Germany in 1515, ib.; his confederacy with Leo X. and the Swiss against Maximilian, Emperor, continued.

Francis I. alluded to, i. 168; raises a powerful army, and compels the French to shut themselves up in Milan, i. 211; threatens to raze Milan, i. 212; his Swiss mercenaries refuse to act, ib.; leaves his army, and flies to Germany, i. 213; his endeavours to extort money from Henry VIII. and Francis I. alluded to, i. 299; his anxiety to secure the empire of Germany for his grandson, ib.; demands the crown of Rome, i. 301; his imbecile rule alluded to, i. 303; death of, i. 304; its effect upon the affairs of Europe, ib.

Mayence, Archbishop of, see Brandenburg, Albert de.

Medici, family of the, ii. 240.

— Cardinal de', position of, in the army of Italy and Spain previous to the battle of Ravenna, i. 73; taken prisoner at the battle of Ravenna, i. 76; ascends the Papal throne as Leo X, i. 93; efforts of Louis XII. to conclude a peace with, i. 94; Ferdinand of Spain and Henry VIII. of England join his cause, i. 95; joy of, at the battle of Vivegano, and expulsion of the French from Italy, i. 98; disregards the caution of Ferdinand respecting the attitude assumed by Francis I. in Burgundy, i. 156-7; the King of France sends an embassy to, i. 159; its object, ib.; his confederacy with Maximilian and the Swiss against Francis I. alluded to, i. 168; alarm of, at the success of the French in Italy, i. 179; enters into a treaty with Francis at Viterbo, i. 203; his tergiversation, ib.; suspects Francis has designs upon Naples, i. 204; meets the French King at Bologna, ib.; his policy alluded to, i. 205; enters into a league with Francis I, i. 206; its conditions, ib.; induces Francis to abandon his designs upon Naples, i. 207; the question of the Pragmatic Sanction discussed by commissioners, i. 208; endeavours to induce Francis I. to undertake a crusade against the Turks, i. 209; sends Lorenzo de' Medici as his proxy at the baptism of the Dauphin, i. 244; his munificence to the Queen of France on the marriage of Lorenzo de' Medici with Madelaine de la Tour-d'Auvergne, i. 248; his efforts to retain Erasmus in Florence alluded to, i. 272; recruits his treasury by the sale of Indulgences, i. 274; his order to the mendicant monks of St. Dominic, ib.; Martin Luther exposes the extortions of the Pope, i. 275; his intrigues with Francis I. and Charles V. and the Emperor Maximilian, respecting the empire, i. 300-1; endeavours to persuade Francis from advancing his claim to the empire, i. 302; endeavours to undermine the interest of Francis I. and Charles V., and to secure the Imperial crown on some less powerful prince, i. 312; excommunicates Luther, i. 370; his crafty policy with Francis I. and the Emperor Charles V., i. 374-5; his bad faith to Francis alluded to, i. 382; declares war against France, i. 406; his anxiety undermines his health, i. 410; death of, supposed by poison, i. 411; his death a loss to the confederated sovereigns, i. 422.

- Medici, Cardinal de', continued.
- Giulio de', persuades the Pope Julius II. not to offer terms to Louis XII, i. 81.
- Lorenzo de', the Pope alarmed at the success of the French, orders him to halt his army within the frontiers of Modena, i. 179; attends at the baptism of the Dauphin as proxy for the Pope, i. 244; his marriage with Madelaine de la Tour-d'Auvergne, i. 247; its consequences alluded to, i. 248; departs for Italy, i. 244; his death, i. 250.
- Giovanni de', threatens the Maréchal de Foix to open the gates of Cremona to the enemy unless his troops are paid their arrears, i. 431-2; movements of, at the Ticino, i. 524.
- Alessandro de, reinstated in government of Florence, ii. 211; restored to the sovereignty of Florence by Charles V., ii. 287; see note, ib.
- Gian Giacomo de', takes the castle of Chiavenna, ii. 22; its consequences, ii. 23; wounded, ib.
- Melancthon, employed by the Reformists in writing the profession of their faith, ii. 226; invited to France by Francis I., ii. 284-5.
- Melfi, Prince de, appointed to the command of the city of Luxembourg, ii. 464; see note, ib.
- Metz, citizens of, tribute paid by, to François de Seckingen, i. 317.
- Meynier, Baron Jean, his efforts to cause the destruction of the Lutherans, ii. 519-20-1-2-3-4.
- Mézières, defended by the Chevalier Bayard, i. 384-5-7.
- Milan, revenues of increased, by Louis XII, i. 64; return of the French army to, with the body of Gaston de Foix, i. 78; entered by Francis I. after the battle of Marignano, i. 197; authorities of, take the oath of allegiance to Francis, i. 199; fauxbourgs of, destroyed by the Duke de Bourbon, i. 211; threat of the Emperor Maximilian to raze the city and strew its site with salt, i. 212; siege of, by the Emperor Maximilian, raised, i. 213; despair of the Milanese citizens at the devastation of the French soldiers, i. 399; able defence of the city of, by Prosper Colonna, i. 514; Bonnivert retires from, i. 515; again taken by the French, ii. 13; its impoverished condition alluded to, ib.; despair of the Milanese at the persecution of the Emperor's troops, ii. 15-16-17; Duchy of, offered to the Duke d'Angoulême by the Emperor, ii. 299-300-1-2; untoward event at, which delays the meeting of Francis I. and the Pope, ii. 241.
- Mirandola attacked by Pope Julius II. in person, i. 70.
- Molart, Seigneur de, one of the captains at the battle of Agnadello, i. 62.
- Monçada, Ugo de, Viceroy of Sicily, attacks and disperses some Turkish galleys, i. 326; see note, ib.; supplies the Imperialist army at the siege of Marseilles with provisions, ii. 4.
- Monselica, capture of, alluded to, i. 65.
- Montagnana, capture of, alluded to, i. 65.
- Montdori, inhabitants of, put to the sword by the Marquis del Guasto, ii. 472.

- Montecuculi, Count Sebastian de, suspected of poisoning the Dauphin, ii. 320; admits his guilt, ii. 322; execution of, ii. 323.
- Montignan, M. de, surprised and taken prisoner at Tourbes, ii. 317; see note, ib.; appointed Lieutenant-General of Piedmont, ii. 363; made a Marshal of France, ii. 365.
- Montluc, Blaise de, sent by Count d'Enghien to Francis I. to request permission to give battle to the Imperialists, ii. 480; see note, ib.; his eloquence persuades the King to give battle, ii. 481-2-3-4; his gallantry, ii. 487-8; bravery of, at Boulogne, ii. 515.
- Montmoreau, Seigneur de, surrenders Mouzon, i. 382; see note, ib.; volunteers with the Chevalier Bayard to defend the city of Mézières, i. 385.
- Montmorenci, Anne Seigneur de, affection of Francis I. for, alluded to, i. 145; see note, ib.; at the capture of Prosper Colonna, i. 175; one of the hostages delivered to Henry VIII, to secure the payment of 600,000 golden crowns, i. 294; joins the army in Italy with supplies, i. 425; wounded, i. 428; commissioned by Francis to raise 12,000 men in Switzerland, i. 469; enthusiastic counsel of, misleads the King, ii. 26; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28; takes command of Paris, ii. 53; despatched by Francis I. to Paris, as attendant upon the Dauphin, ii. 91; one of the witnesses to the secret protest of the King when a prisoner, ii. 92; appointed Grand Master and Governor of Languedoc, ii. 106; sent as Ambassador to Henry VIII, ii. 173; entertained at Hampton Court by Cardinal Wolsey, ii. 174; sent to the Spanish frontier to ransom the French princes, ii. 189; invested with the Order of the Garter by Henry VIII, ii. 229; conceives a passion for the Queen of France, ii. 270; declares it, and is repulsed, ii. 271-2; his singular compact with the Queen, ii. 273; his devotion to the Queen, ii. 274; fortifies the frontier of France against invasion, ii. 309-11; position of, in Provence, ii. 326; advised the King not to join the
- Montmorenci, Anne de, continued. main army, ii. 329-30; marches to Lyons, ii. 358; forces the Pas-de-Suze, ii. 360; commanded by Francis to suspend operations until his arrival at head quarters, ii. 361-2; created Connétable, ii. 364-5; offers protection to the Duke of Savoy, ii. 371; his offer to the Duke of Savoy refused, ii. 373; his increasing power during the illness of the King, ii. 379; persuades Francis to permit the Emperor to traverse France unconditionally, ii. 383; Madame d'Etampes plots his ruin, ii. 383-4; an enamelled chain sent by the Queen Eleonora to, ii. 388; its consequences, ii. 389; entertains Charles V. at Chantilly, ii. 401; accompanies the Emperor to Valenciennes, ib.; returns to France, ii. 402; exile of, ii. 413-14; cause of his disgrace, ib.; restored to Court by Henry II, ii. 555.
- Montpensier, Charles de, Duke of Bourbon, one of the suite of Louis XII, i. 23; see note, ib.; one of the companions of Francis at the Court of Amboise, i. 27; his attachment to Mademoiselle d'Angoulême, discovered by Gouffier, i. 28; its consequences, i. 29; challenged by Francis to single combat, ib.; retires from Amboise, i. 30; position of, in the army of Louis XII. against the Venetians, i. 62; his quarrel with the Duke de Longueville alluded to, i. 85; holds the Duke of Alba in check, at St. Jean Pied-deport, i. 86; made Constable of France by Francis I, i. 143; his marriage alluded to, ib.; his magnificent appearance, i. 163; appointed to the chief command of the army of Milan, ib.; his stateliness offends Francis, i. 165; at the battle of Marignano, i. 186; charges the Swiss column, i. 187; appointed Lieutenant-General of the Milanese, i. 210; disbands the Swiss troops, i. 212; his recall from Milan, occasioned by the intrigues of the Countess de Châteaubriand, i. 251-2-3-4-5-6; his affection for Marguerite de Valois, alluded to, i. 257; becomes enthralled with the

Montpensier, Charles de, continued.

Countess de Châteaubriand, i. 258; distaste of the King for, ib.; his attachment to Marguerite de Valois known to the King, i. 259; at the interview with Francis and Henry VIII. at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 350; at the banquet given by the Kings at Guisnes, i. 360; his indignation on being deprived of the command of the vanguard of the army, i. 395-6; retires to Paris, i. 415; unexpectedly summoned to the presence of Louise de Savoie, i. 416; rejects the hand of Louise de Savoie, i. 417; his hatred to Louise de Savoie how caused, i. 418; his dislike of Bonnivet, ib. i. 419; his magnificence at Moulins, i. 426; his lawsuits alluded to, ib.; demands the hand of the Princess Rénée, the sister of Queen Claude, i. 421; exposes the offer of Louise de Savoie to his friends, ib.; Louise de Savoie vows his ruin, ib.; Louise de Savoie urges her claims against, i. 437-8; parliament refuses to ratify the decision of the judges against, ib.; his estates are put under sequestration, i. 439; his violence against Louise de Savoie, ib.; induced by the overtures of Charles V. to rebel against Francis I, i. 439; negotiates with Wolsey for an invasion of France by England, i. 441-2; induces Francis I. to grant an interview with Marshal Lautrec, i. 448-9; his union with the Princess Rénée alluded to, i. 456-7; the King is informed of his treason, i. 460; surprised by Francis in the apartments of Queen Claude and accused of treason, i. 470; suffered by the King to escape, i. 471; expostulates with his friends on his wrongs, i. 472; visited by Francis at Moulins, i. 475; feigns sick and partially removes the suspicions of Francis, i. 476; watched by M. de Wartz by order of Francis, i. 477; deceives M. de Wartz, who returns to Court, i. 478; escapes to his fortress of Chantelle, ib.; offers to return to his allegiance, i. 488; flies from Chantelle on the approach of the royal troops, i. 489; ultimately escapes to Mantua, i. 490; his estates confiscated, i.

Montpensier, Charles de, continued.

491; fate of his adherents, i. 492; hatred of Louise de Savoie against the Constable causes a bias in the parliament in favour of his followers, i. 493; Francis makes overtures to him to return to his allegiance, i. 505; rejects the overtures of the King, i. 506; bad faith of Charles V. to, i. 507; declared guilty of lèse-majesté, ib.; his ability as a general contrasted with Bonnivet, i. 511; joins the Imperialists with 6,000 men, i. 516; weakens the army of Bonnivet by skirmishes, but declines a general action, i. 523; compels Bonnivet to retreat, i. 524; at the death of Bayard, i. 528; the good Knight's dying rebuke to, ib.; pursues the French army, ii. 3; proposes to Pescara to march into France, ii. 4; besieges Marseilles, ib.; critical position of, ii. 6; his disappointment at the protracted defence of Marseilles, ii. 7; taunted by the Marquis de Pescara, ii. 8; retreats from Marseilles, ii. 9; joins the Imperial army in Italy at the head of a German force, ii. 21; suggests an immediate attack upon the French before Pavia, ii. 22; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28-33; Francis I. refuses to surrender his sword to, ii. 36; the King refuses to receive the homage of, ii. 38; his observation over the dead body of Bonnivet on the battle-field of Pavia, ii. 40; tenders his services to Francis at dinner, ii. 42; his overtures to Henry VIII. alluded to, ii. 51; deceived by the Viceroy of Naples, consents to the departure of Francis I. to Genoa, ii. 69; his exasperation on discovering the treachery of the Viceroy, ii. 73; departs for Madrid, accuses the Viceroy of perfidy and cowardice, ii. 74; contempt of the Castilian nobility for, ib.; reply of the Marquis de Villana respecting, ib.; treated with indifference by the Emperor and contempt by Francis, ii. 75; reveals to Marguerite de Valois the designs of the Emperor towards Francis I, ii. 81; warns Marguerite de Valois that the Emperor meditates her arrest, ii. 87; appointed by the Emperor to command in Italy, ii. 101; marches to Milan with the main body of the Imperial army, ii. 115; exhortations of the Milanese to, on the excesses of the Emperor's troops, ii. 116; his vow to the citizens, ib.; joined by Frundsberg marches upon Rome, ii. 117-18; attacks the city, and is killed, ib.

- Montpensier, Charles de, continued.
- Montpezat, M. de; one of the hostages delivered to Henry VIII. by Francis I. to secure the payment of 600,000 crowns, i. 294; offers his services to Francis I. when a prisoner in the citadel of Pizzighettona, ii. 44; ransomed by the King, ii. 45; appointed ambassador at the English Court, ii. 235; exiled by order of the King for the loss of Perpignan, ii. 441.
- More, Sir Thomas, attends upon Cardinal Wolsey during his mission in France, ii. 136.
- Moreto, Count de; a Piedmontese peasant, in the service of the Count, conducts the army of Francis I. by a comparatively unknown path across the Alps, i. 171-2; at the capture of Prosper Colonna, i. 175.
- Morgante, Piero, taken prisoner at Villa Franca, i. 178.
- Morone, Jerômio, plans a secret league against Charles V, ii. 75; betrayed by Pescara to the Emperor, ii. 76; treachery of Pescara at a private interview, ii. 77; arrest of, ib.
- Mottino, ——— death of, i. 98.
- Moulin, Antoine de, at the Court of Bearn, ii. 164.
- Mouy, Charles de, one of the hostages delivered to Henry VIII. by Francis I. to secure the payment of 600,000 crowns, i. 294.
- Nancy, Christian de, his stolen interview with the Duchess d'Etampes, ii. 415-16-17-18; surprised by the King, ii. 419; clever stratagem of, ii. 420-1.
- Naples, besieged by Lautrec, ii. 184; plague at, ib.
- Napoli, Cesare du, intrusted to guard the Pas-de-Suze, ii. 359.
- Narbonne, Cardinal, joins in the Bransle at the feast given by the Marquis de Vigevano to Louis XII, i. 56.
- Nassau, Count Henry de, arrival of, in Paris on a mission from the Archduke Charles, i. 151; see note, ib.; marries Claudine de Challon, i. 152; ordered by the Emperor Charles V. to ravage the territories of the Duke de Gueldres, i. 381; takes Mouzon, i. 382; escapes from Francis I. between Cambray and Valenciennes, i. 386; summons Bayard to surrender the town of Mézières, i. 388; his quarrel with Seckingen, i. 390-1; disorganization of his army, ib.; raises the siege of Mézières, i. 393; his visit to the Court of Francis, ii. 276; intrusted by the Emperor with proposals of friendship to Francis, ib.; enters Picardy, attacks St. Rignier and Peronne, ii. 338-9; retreat of, ii. 340.
- Navarre, right of Henry II. to, alluded to, i. 341.
——— Princess of, her marriage with the Duke of Cleves, ii. 413; banquets in honour of her marriage, ii. 414-15; her marriage annulled, ib.; marries the Duke of Vendôme, ib.
- Navarro, Count Pietro da, Captain-General of the infantry in the combined armies of Pope Julius II. and Ferdinand of Spain at the battle of Ravenna, i. 74; see note, ib.; taken prisoner at Ravenna, i. 76; commands 6,000 men under Francis I, i. 158; his skill in overcoming the difficulties in conducting the army of Francis I. over the Alps alluded to, i. 173; joins the French army in Italy, i. 425; reinforces Genoa with 200 men, i. 433; enters the service of Francis I. and joins the combined fleets of the Pope and the Venetians, ii. 115; death of, ii. 185.
- Nemours, Duchess de, at the baptism of the second son of Francis I, i. 335.
- Neuville, Nicolas de, Seigneur de Villeray, exchanges the site of the Tuileries for Chanteloupe, near Monthéry, i. 337.
- Nevers, Duke de, commands at Châlons, ii. 507.
——— Duchess de, presents the jewelled watch of the Marquis del Guasto to the King, ii. 491; her wit, ii. 492; see note, ib.

- Nice, citizens of, refuse admission to the Pope, ii. 371–2; burnt and pillaged by Barbarossa, ii. 469–70.
- Norfolk, Duke of, commands an English army, which advances upon Paris, i. 508; joined by the Count of Beaufort, ib.; fearful of being enclosed between the armies of Tremouille and Vendôme, retires to Calais and sails for England, i. 510; at the interview between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 228; receives the Collar of St. Michael from Francis I, ii. 229.
- Novi, Paul de, elected Doge of Genoa, i. 53; evacuates Genoa when attacked by Louis XII, i. 55; execution of, in Corsica, ib.
- Noyon, conditions of the peace of, i. 220–1.
- Nuremberg, peace of, alluded to, ii. 250.
- Odet, Captain in the army of Louis XII. at the battle of Agnadello, i. 62.
- Olivier, François, despatched by Francis I. to the Emperor to engage him in a treaty in lieu of Crespy, ii. 544; see note, ib.
- Orange, Prince of, offended at his cold reception by Francis, offers his services to Charles V, i. 245; assumes the command of the Imperial army on the death of the Duke of Bourbon, ii. 119; takes the Pope and thirteen Cardinals prisoners in the Castle of St. Angelo, ib.; defeated by Martin Von Rossem, ii. 437; retires to Antwerp, ib.; commands the Emperor's army in the Duchy of Cleves, ii. 461; his death alluded to, ii. 498.
- Orleans, Duke of, sent as a hostage to Spain by Francis I. for the fulfilment of a treaty with Charles V, ii. 94–5; removed to Old Castile, ii. 101; return of, to France, ii. 189; his marriage with Catherine de' Medici alluded to, ii. 255; the marriage described, ii. 257–8; efforts of Diana of Poitiers to attract his notice, ii. 296–7; becomes Dauphin, ii. 327; joins the camp in Provence, ib.; marches to Lyons, ii. 358; appointed the King's Lieutenant-General, ib.; forces the Imperial general to retreat, and takes the city of Moncalier, ii. 361; position of in Orleans, Duke of, continued.
- Luxembourg, ii. 436; takes Luxembourg, ii. 438–9; his personal appearance, ii. 442; suppresses the revolt at La Rochelle, ii. 447; harasses the troops of the Emperor, ii. 505; critical position of, ii. 507; advises the recall of Montmorenci, ii. 508; prudent measures of, ii. 510; protests against the treaty between Francis and the Emperor, ii. 512–13; forces Henry VIII. to raise the siege of Montreuil and retire to England, ii. 513–14; makes a midnight attack upon Boulogne, ii. 515; imprudently appoints his officers of state previous to the King's death, ii. 526–7; anger of the King, ii. 528; succeeds to the throne as Henry II, ii. 555.
- Duchess of, see Catherine de' Medici.
- treaty signed at, its objects, i. 117.
- Osma, Bishop of, his conditions for restoring Francis I. to liberty not accepted by Charles V, ii. 63–4; see note, ib.
- Otranto, cession of to the King of Spain alluded to, i. 65.
- Padua, keys of, transferred to the Emperor Maximilian, i. 65; retaken and fortified by the Count Petigliano, i. 66.
- Palice, Marquis de la; see note, i. 23; one of the leaders in Louis XII's army against the Venetians, i. 62; ordered by Louis XII. to assist the Emperor Maximilian, i. 67; induces Bayard to accompany him against the Venetians, ib.; elected general of the army after the death of Gaston de Foix, i. 78; powerless position of, on the Emperor Maximilian withdrawing his forces from the French army, i. 83; joins the army under the Duke de Valois, i. 85; seizes the pass of the valley of Roncal, and conducts a division of the French army within two leagues of Pampeluna, i. 86; compelled to retreat beyond the Pyrenees, ib.; made Marshal of France, i. 145; at the capture of Prosper Colonna, i. 175; relieves Fontarabia, i. 458; taken prisoner by the English, i. 103; his advice to the King before the battle of

- Palice, Marquis de la, continued.
 Pavia overruled by Bonnavet, ii. 26; at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28; melancholy death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 29.
- Palissis, Bernard, see note, ii. 223.
- Pallavicini, Signor Christoforo, condemned to death by Marshal Lautrec, i. 405.
- Paluda, Marquis de la, taken prisoner at Ravenna, i. 76.
- Paris, University of, refuses to recognise the right of Francis I. to enter into a treaty, called the Concordat, with the Pope, i. 208; orders solemn services to be performed on the parliament registering the Concordat, i. 264; excesses of the soldiers in, i. 442; the plague in, ib.; excitement of the citizens of, on hearing the captivity of Francis I, ii. 52-3; disorderly state of, in 1527, ii. 129-30; influence of the alchemists and astrologers upon the citizens of, ib.; turbulence of the students alluded to, ii. 132-3; an effigy of the Virgin is desecrated in, ii. 206; alarm in, at the siege of Peronne, ii. 340; provisioned by Cardinal du Bellay, ii. 341; alarm of citizens of, at the capture of St. Dizier, and the march of Charles V. towards the capital, ii. 499; alarm of the citizens of, at the capture of Chateau Thierry by the Imperialists, ii. 510.
- Parliament of France refuses to sanction the acts of Francis I. to raise money, i. 168; refusal of, to register the ordinance of Francis to protect his forest rights, i. 216; the presentation of the Concordat openly opposed by M. A. Sièvre, i. 260; the Bastard of Savoy, the King's uncle, requested to retire from, i. 261; the president of, remonstrates with Francis on the illegality of the presence of M. de Savoy, ib.; decides not to register the Concordat, and convenes a national council, i. 262; Messrs. de Soyen and Verjus deputed by, to wait upon the King on the subject of the Concordat, i. 263; the deputies of, ordered to leave Amboise, i. 264; the King compels the, to register the Concordat, under a protest, ib.; refuses to ratify the decision of the judges against the estates and honours of the Duke de Bourbon, Constable of France, i. 438; proceed to the trial of the Bourbon conspirators, i. 492; sentence of, against the conspirators, ib.; anger of the King at the leniency of the judges, i. 493; requisition of, respecting the Lutherans, ii. 55; forbids the sale of Calvinistic works, ii. 454.
- Parliament of France, continued.
- Paul III, accession of, ii. 276; endeavours to pacify the French Ambassadors, at the negotiations between Charles V. and Francis, respecting the Duchy of Milan, ii. 304; reply of the French Envoys to, ii. 305; determines to preserve a strict neutrality between the Emperor and Francis, ii. 308; attempts the reconciliation of the Emperor and Francis I, ii. 369; refused admission into Nice, ii. 371-2; mediates between Francis and the Emperor, and concludes a truce between them for ten years, ii. 372-3; expostulates with the Emperor on his intended campaign against Solyman, ii. 432; his suspicions of the intentions of the Emperor, ii. 546.
- Pavaues, Jacques, a Lutheran, burnt by order of Louise de Savoie, in the Place de Grève, ii. 56.
- Pavia, defence of, by General Leyva, ii. 16; state of the garrison of, ii. 18; mutiny of the garrison, ib.; supplies introduced into the garrison of, by stratagem, ii. 19-20; battle of, ii. 26-35; loss of the French at the battle of, ii. 40; retaken by the Count de St.-Pol, ii. 183.
- Pechy, Sir John, one of the witnesses to the betrothal of the Dauphin to the Princess Mary of England, i. 294.
- Periers, Bonaventure des, at the Court of Bearn, ii. 164; see note, ib.
- Peronne, attacked by the Imperialists, ii. 338; defence of, ii. 339.
- Perpignan, loss of, alluded to, ii. 441.
- Pescara, Marquis de, one of the commanders in the combined army of the Pope Julius II. and Ferdinand of Spain, at the battle of Ravenna, i. 73; taken prisoner at Ravenna, i. 76; quarrels with Prosper Colonna about the command of the

- Pescara, Marquis de, continued.
 Imperial army, i. 406; its consequences, ib.; pursues Marshal Lautrec, i. 409; pillages Genoa, i. 433-4; his jealousy of the Duke de Bourbon alluded to, i. 508; departs for Valladolid, i. 513; enters Milan, i. 516; his dislike to the Duke de Bourbon, ib.; attacks Bayard at Rebec with a superior force, i. 521-2; visits the death-couch of Bayard, i. 527-8; pursues the French army, ii. 3; objects to the proposal of Bourbon to March into France, ii. 4; besieges Marseilles, ib.; taunts the Duke de Bourbon on his priest being killed at the altar by the shot from Marseilles, ii. 8; retreats from Marseilles, ii. 9; refuses to hazard an engagement with the French in Italy, ii. 19; attempts to effect an entrance into Mirabello, and to relieve the garrison of Pavia, ii. 24; his efforts to bring on a general engagement at the battle of Pavia, ii. 28-31; wounded, ii. 33; escorts Francis to Pavia, ii. 39; the King discusses the details of the battle of Pavia, with the, ii. 42-3; assures the French King of the clemency of Charles V, ii. 43; deceived by the Viceroy of Naples, consents to the departure of Francis I. to Madrid, ii. 69; his exasperation on discovering the treachery of the Viceroy, ii. 73; treated with indifference by Charles V, ii. 75; betrays Morone to the Emperor, ib.; his treachery and death, ii. 77-8.
- Peschiera, citizens of, put to the sword by Louis XII, i. 64.
- Petigliano, Count de, slain at the battle of Marignano, i. 193.
- Philip, Archduke, the, death of, i. 48; madness and jealousy of his widow Jeanne la Folle, i. 49; his death alluded to, i. 152.
- Dom, son of Charles V, appointed Duke of Milan, ii. 425.
- Pico, Countess Francesca, her defence of Mirandola alluded to, i. 70.
- Piennes, Seigneur de, see Hallwin, Louis de.
- Pierre, Albert de la, one of the leaders of the Swiss mercenaries, i. 180; joins the French army at Milan, i. 212; death of, i. 428.
- Pitigliano, Count, fortifies Padua, i. 66; compels Louis XII. to retreat, i. 63; opposes d'Alviano's wish to give battle to the French King, ib.
- Pizzighettona, fortress of, taken by Louis XII, i. 64.
- Plague, the, in Paris, i. 442-3.
- Plessis, Charles du, despatched by Francis I. to open negotiations with the Helvetic body, i. 223.
- Poitiers, Diana of, her birth, i. 495; her marriage, i. 494; her home, ib.; her extreme beauty alluded to, i. 496; hears of her father's sentence and determines to save him, i. 497; arrives at Court, i. 498; her audience with Francis I, i. 499, 500; saves the life of her father, ib.; her biographers alluded to, i. 501; banished from Court, ii. 57; received by her husband with a warm welcome, ii. 58; her power at the Court of Francis alluded to, ii. 150-1; her characteristics, ii. 152; her return to Court alluded to, ii. 267; becomes the friend of Catherine de' Medici, ib.; her interview with the King, on the melancholy of the Duke D'Angoulême, ii. 291-2-3; her appearance in her 31st year described, ii. 294; she resolves to attempt the conquest of the Duke of Orleans, ii. 295-6; extract of a poem of, ii. 296; excites the jealousy of the Duchess d'Etampes, ii. 297; the King refuses to banish her from Court, to appease the jealousy of the Duchess d'Etampes, ii. 298; feud between, and the Duchess d'Etampes, ii. 346-7; gives birth to a daughter, ib.; her hatred for the Duchess d'Etampes alluded to, ii. 442; position of, at the death of Francis I, ii. 555.
- Jean de, Count de St. Valier, observations of Bonnavet to, respecting the passion of Madame d'Angoulême and the Duchess d'Alençon for Charles de Bourbon, i. 165; endeavours to persuade the Constable of France to return to his allegiance, i. 471-2; see note ib.; his brief interview with M. de Pomperant, i. 484; his interview with the Duchess d'Alençon in the forest, i. 486; arrest of, i. 487; condemned to death, i. 492; relieved upon the scaffold, i. 500.

- Pole, Richard de la, banished to Metz in obedience to the wishes of Henry VIII, at the treaty for the marriage of the Princess Mary of England with Louis XII, i. 123; see note, ib.; engaged in the scheme to entrap the Duke d'Aerschott, i. 467; ordered by Francis I. to harass the Imperial army under the Duke de Bourbon, ii. 6; death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 29.
- Polésina de Rovigo, capture of, alluded to, i. 65.
- Policastro, Count de, taken prisoner at Villa Franca, i. 178.
- Pommeroye, M. de, arranges a meeting between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 228; the ambassador sent by Francis I. to announce to Henry VIII. the marriage of James V. of Scotland to the Princess Marguerite, ii. 344.
- Pompéran, M. de, reply of, to the Constable Bourbon, i. 395; his interview with the King at Amboise, i. 484; flies from Amboise to Chantelle, and joins the Constable of France in his revolt against the King, i. 485; protects Francis I. from violence after his capture at the Battle of Pavia, ii. 35-6; pardoned by Francis I. for his services at the Battle of Pavia, ii. 43.
- Pontbriant, M. de, Chamberlain to the Count d'Angoulême, i. 33; suggests to Anne de Bretagne, that the Maréchal de Gié should be subjected to the question, i. 35.
- Pontdormy, M. de, resolute charge of, at Bicocca, i. 429; see note, ib.
- Pope, the, see Leo X, Julius II, Adrian IV, and Paul III.
- Poucher, Etienne, Archbishop of Sens, see note, i. 270.
- Poyer, President, his ignorance of Latin alluded to, ii. 253.
- Poyet, Guillaume, appointed Chancellor, ii. 365; dislodges a billet of wood upon the head of Charles V, ii. 397; his cruel policy towards Maréchal Chabot, ii. 406; arrest of, ii. 409; deprived of his dignity of Chancellor, ii. 410; death of, ib.
- Pragmatic Sanction, the question discussed by commissioners, i. 208; Pragmatic Sanction, continued. the treaty receives the name of Concordat, ib.; the treaty gives offence to the University of Paris, ib. See Concordat, and Parliament.
- Prelates, Council of, convened at Tours by Louis XII. in opposition to Pope Julius II, i. 69.
- Prie, Aymar de, joins the French army at Blangy, i. 99; enters Genoa, and takes Alessandria and Tortona, i. 179; his arrest and trial alluded to, i. 490.
- Primaticcio, Francisco, his works alluded to, ii. 125; see note, ib.; summoned to France to complete the construction of the Palace of Chambord, ii. 126.
- Protestant Princes, conditions of the truce between the, and Charles V, ii. 433.
- Protestants, persecution of, ii. 279-80-3-4.
- Puy, Bishop of, his arrest and trial alluded to, i. 490; acquitted by the Parliament of Paris, i. 492.
- Queen-Dowager of Hungary, appeals to Francis I. and the Duke of Cleves on the Duke de Gueldres ravaging the Low Countries, ii. 437.
- Rabelais, François, his position during the progress of the Reformation alluded to, ii. 204-5; see note, ib.; see note, ii. 440.
- Ramassot, Captain, mentioned as a leader of 2,000 foot, at the battle of Ravenna, i. 73.
- Rangon, Count Guy de, appointed General of the forces of the Italian League, ii. 337.
- Ravenna, capture of, alluded to, i. 65; battle of, i. 74-5-6; city of, pillaged, i. 78; effects of the battle of, i. 81.
- Ravenstein, Sire de, despatched by Charles of Spain to France to terminate hostilities, i. 219.
- Reformation, the, progress of, alluded to, ii. 203-4-5-6-7-8.
- Réné, Princess, Francis I. refuses to bestow her hand on the English King, ii. 139.
- Rhodes, Isle of, attacked by Solyman, i. 446; gallant defence of, by Villiers de l'Isle Adam, the Grand Master of the Knights of St. John, ib.

- Richemont, Seigneur de, one of the Captains in Louis XII.'s army at the battle of Agnadello, i. 63.
- Richmond, Earl of, at the interview between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 228.
- Rimini taken by the Duke d'Urbino, i. 65.
- Rincon, Antoine, murdered by order of the Marquis du Guasto, ii. 427-8.
- Rochelle, revolt of the inhabitants of, in consequence of the increase of the Salt-tax, ii. 446-9.
- Rochfort, Gui de, his reply to the States' deputies on the subject of the marriage of Duke de Valois with the Princess Claude, i. 46; see note, ib.
- Rohan, Pierre de, see Gié, Maréchal de.
- Rome attacked by the Duke of Bourbon, ii. 118; sack of, ii. 119.
- Rossem, Martin Van, see Gueldres, Maréchal de.
- Rosso, Rosso del, executes the paintings and statues for the palace of Fontainebleau, ii. 200; see note, ib.
- Roussillon, Comte de, at the battle of Agnadello, i. 62.
- siege of, raised, in consequence of the treachery of the Duchess d'Etampes, ii. 438.
- Rovera, Francesco-Maria de la, see D'Urbino, Duke.
- St. Angelo, Marquis de, killed by Francis I. at the battle of Pavia, ii. 34.
- St. Bonnet, Count de, his arrest and trial alluded to, i. 490; acquitted by the parliament of Paris, i. 492.
- St. Dizier, siege of, described, ii. 495-6-7-8-9; effects of the defence of, ii. 505.
- St. Dominic, a mendicant order of monks, alluded to, i. 274.
- St. Germain, palace of, alluded to, ii. 222.
- St. John, Lord, one of the witnesses to the betrothal of the Dauphin to the Princess Mary of England, i. 294.
- of Jerusalem, Knights of, defend Rhodes against the Turks, i. 445-6; retire to Viterbo, ib.; finally settle at Malta, ib.
- St. Mesme, M. de, despatched by Francis I. to invite the Pope to become sponsor to the Dauphin, i. 244.
- Saint-Pol, Count de, Louis de Luxembourg, his treason alluded to, i. 143; see note, ib.
- St. Pol, Count de, accident to the French King occurs at the hotel of the, i. 369; appointed governor of Dauphiny, ii. 106; wounded at the battle of Pavia, ii. 40; his singular escape, ii. 41; retakes Pavia, ii. 183; his army totally routed in the Milanese, ii. 185; at the interview between Francis I. and Henry VIII, ii. 228; advises the King not to permit the Count d'Enghien to engage the Imperialists, ii. 481.
- invested by the Imperialists, ii. 352; capture of, ii. 353; fired by the Imperial general, ib.
- St. Rignier, heroism of the women of, ii. 338.
- St. Severin, Cardinal, joins in the Branle at the feast given by the Marquis de Vigevano to Louis XII, i. 56.
- St. Sévérino, Galeaz de, devotion of, to Francis I. and death at the battle of Pavia, ii. 32.
- Salerno, the Prince of, immobility of, at the battle of Carignano, ii. 489.
- Salt-tax, increased by Francis I, ii. 446; revolt of the inhabitants of La Rochelle, ii. 446-9.
- Saluzzo, Marquis de, his lands harried and laid waste by the forces of Prosper Colonna, i. 174; 4,000 Italians raised by, cut to pieces by the Imperialists, while crossing the Alessandrino, ii. 23; attempts to relieve Milan, ii. 115; his treachery alluded to, ii. 307; his treachery to Francis I. ii. 315-16; is appointed the emperor's Lieutenant beyond the Alps, ii. 317; assists at the siege of Carmagnole, and is killed, ii. 357.
- Sancerre, Count de, gallant defence of St. Dizier by, ii. 495-6-7.
- Sanga, Guan Baptista, despatched by the Italian states, to ascertain the cause of the indifference of Francis I. to their interests, ii. 114.
- Sanquin, Antoine, uncle of Made-moiselle de Helly, mistress to Francis I. made an abbot, a bishop, and a cardinal, ii. 193.
- Sansac, Baron de, taken prisoner, ii. 355; see note, ib.

Savoie, Louise de, mother of Francis I, i. 17; remarkable extract from her journal, ib.; see note; summoned to Court, her quarrel with the Queen of Louis XII, i. 18; its consequences, i. 19; exultation of, on the death of the infant sons of the Queen, i. 18; ordered by the King to reside at Amboise, i. 19; her conduct to M. de Gié, i. 20; her request to Louis XII. on his departure from Amboise, i. 26; her passion for M. de Vandenesse, i. 30; detected in an intrigue with M. de Vandenesse, and revenge of Maréchal de Gié, i. 31; the matrimonial prospects of her son and the Princess Claude alluded to, i. 36; her triumph on her son's betrothal to the daughter of Louis XII, i. 46; her conduct to her daughter-in-law, the Princess Claude, i. 129; warned by M. de Grignaud of the possible consequences of her son's intimacy with the Queen of France, i. 130; flatters the vanity of her son, Francis I, i. 141; created a duchess, and the palace of Amboise given to her by Francis I, i. 143; profligacy of her Court at Amboise, i. 147-8; her love for the Constable Bourbon described, i. 166; appointed Regent of France during the absence of Francis in Italy, i. 168; her talents for government considered, i. 169; the licentiousness of her Court alluded to, i. 227; welcomes the Countess de Châteaubriand to her Court, i. 238; her alarm at the increasing power of the Countess over the King, i. 250; takes an active share in the government, i. 273; her anxiety to secure the goodwill of Henry VIII, i. 296; her indignation at the recall of the Connétable of France from Milan, i. 256; opposes the return of Germaine de Foix, the Dowager-Queen of Spain, to the Court of Francis I, i. 313; her courtesy to François de Seckingen alluded to, i. 318; her dislike to the Duke de Gueldres, i. 320; persuades Francis I. to disgrace the Duke, i. 321; her treacherous conduct to the Bishop of Liège, ib., i. 322; induces Francis I. to purchase the Tuileries, i. 337; the differences between England and Scotland submitted to the arbitration of Cardinal Wolsey and, i. 365; effects a reconciliation between Robert de la Mark and Francis I, i. 372; undertakes to recruit the exhausted treasury of Francis, i. 401; her interview with M. de Semblançay, the finance minister, i. 402-3; importunes the King to order Lautrec to Milan, i. 404; her law-suit against the Constable of France alluded to, i. 415; summons the Constable to her presence, i. 416; offers him her hand, and is rejected, i. 417; her hatred to the Constable alluded to, i. 418; her offer to the Constable exposed, i. 421; vows his ruin, ib.; urges her law-suit against the Constable, i. 437; detected in appropriating 400,000 crowns intended for the army in Italy, i. 451-2-3-4; her faction described, i. 455; endeavours to ruin the finance minister, ib.; her hatred to the Constable of France alluded to, during the trial of the Bourbon conspirators, i. 493; the command of the army in Italy given to Bonnivet at the request of, i. 510-11; expostulates with the King on his renewed attempt to reconquer the Milanese, ii. 10; appointed Regent of France, ii. 11; her persecution of M. de Semblançay, ii. 12; anguish of, on hearing of the battle of Pavia, ii. 49; her vengeance against M. de Semblançay, ii. 50; her unpopularity, ii. 52; endeavours to regain the confidence of the citizens, ib.; denounced from the pulpit, ii. 53; secures the fidelity of the soldiers, ii. 54; persecutes the Lutherans, ii. 55; burns Jacques Pavanes and the Hermit of Livry to appease the parliament, ii. 56; banishes from Court the Countess de Châteaubriand and Diana of Poitiers, ii. 57; endeavours to conciliate the European powers, ii. 60; enters into a new treaty with Henry VIII. of England, ii. 62; concludes a truce for six months with Spain, ii. 63; betrays her allies to Charles V, to ingratiate herself with the Emperor, ii. 65; evasive reply of the Emperor to, ii. 76;

Savoie, Louise de, continued.

- Savoie, Louise de, continued.
 departs for Bayonne, accompanied by her grandsons as hostages to Charles V, ii. 94; meets the King at Bayonne, ii. 96; indignation of, on the arrival of Madame de Châteaubriand at Court, ii. 97; resolves to supplant Madame de Châteaubriand, ii. 102; introduces Anne de Pisseleu to the notice of the King, ii. 103; her instructions to her Maid of Honour, ii. 104; presents her to the King, ii. 108; urges the King to consent to the trial of M. de Semblançay, ii. 122-3; anger of, at the wit of the Duchess d'Uzeu, ii. 125; her tyrannical government alluded to, ii. 128-9; takes the celebrated Cornelius Agrippa into her service as physician and astrologer, ii. 130; entertains Cardinal Wolsey, ii. 137; meets Marguerite of Austria at Cambray, to arrange the conditions for the release of the French princes, ii. 186; concludes a peace known as La Paix des Dames, ii. 187; she abandons her allies, ii. 188; persecutes the Reformers, ii. 209; her failing health, and death, ii. 214; her burial, ii. 215; her avarice, ii. 216.
- Philiberte de, her hand promised to Giuliano de Medici, i. 209.
- Savoy, Bastard of, departure of, from Amboise to join the army against Milan, i. 166; see note, ib.; concludes a treaty of amity between the Swiss and the French, i. 223; his presence in the Parliament of Paris made the subject of a remonstrance to Francis, i. 260-1; joins the French army in Italy with supplies, i. 425; death of, alluded to, ii. 40.
- Duke of, refuses Francis I. a passage through Savoy for his army, ii. 285; his territories overrun by the French, applies to the Emperor for aid, ib.; instigates the Emperor to destroy Aix, ii. 326; returns to Nice, the victim of the Emperor and Francis, ii. 362-3; alarm of, at the proposed meeting of Charles and Francis at Nice, ii. 370; applies to the Emperor for advice, ii. 371; mistrusts the promises of his allies, and induces the citizens of Nice to refuse Savoy, Duke of, continued.
 admission of the Pope, ii. 371-2; his destitution, ii. 373-4.
- Saxony, Duke of, see Frederic.
- Scheiner, Matthew, persuades the Swiss troops to desert the cause of France, i. 68-9.
- Schomberg, Theodoric de, death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 32.
- Seckingen, François de, his intimacy with Robert de la Mark, i. 316; his energy and manners render him popular with many of the petty princes of Germany, ib.; attached to the pursuit of arms, i. 317; compels the Duke of Lorraine, the citizens of Metz, and the Landgrave of Hesse to pay him tribute, ib.; recommended by Robert de la Mark to Francis I, ib.; his interview with the French King at Amboise, i. 318; Francis I. gives offence to, by his want of confidence, i. 319-20; bold reply of, to Francis I, i. 324; joins Robert de la Mark and Charles V. against the interest of Francis, i. 325; his attempt to seize Bonnavet with the state chest alluded to, i. 334; at the siege of Mézières, i. 388; his quarrel with the Count de Nassau, i. 390-1; devastates Picardy, ib.
- Sedan, Sire de, commands 10,000 lansquenets, i. 157.
- Selim, Sultan, equips a naval force, i. 298; his views respecting Italy alluded to, ib.; his death, i. 299.
- Semblançay, M. de, his interview with Louise de Savoie, on raising the supplies for the war against the Milanese, i. 401-2-3; exposes the treachery of Louise de Savoie, i. 451-2-3-4; insists that commissioners be appointed to examine the public accounts, i. 454; enmity of Louise de Savoie against, i. 455; enmity of the Chancellor Duprat alluded to, ib.; persecuted by Louise de Savoie, ii. 12; refuses to advance a loan to the King, and is dismissed from Court, ii. 13; his protracted imprisonment alluded to, ii. 96; his trial, ii. 122; condemned and executed, ii. 123-4.
- Senéschale, Le Grande, see Poitiers, Diana of.
- Sforza, Ludovic Maria, see note i. 82.

- Sforza, Maximilian, enters Milan without opposition, i. 83; surrenders himself to Francis I. and receives a pension of 30,000 crowns, i. 198; death of, in Paris, i. 199.
- Francisco Maria, brother of Maximilian, Duke of Milan, referred to by Pope Leo X. in his treaty with the Emperor Charles V. as the future Duke of Milan, i. 375; see note. ib.; enters into a treaty known as the Holy League, ii. 99; its object, ii. 100; besieged in Milan, ii. 102; breach of faith of the French King to, ib.; the Milanese restored to, by the Emperor Charles V, ii. 212; his marriage with the Emperor's niece alluded to, ib.; death of, ii. 286.
- Lorenzo, his position at Milan alluded to, ii. 241; his hatred to Da Leyva, ii. 242; courts the friendship of Francis I, ib.; the Emperor demands the dismissal of Maraviglia from the Court of, ii. 243; his duplicity to Francis respecting the murder of Maraviglia, ii. 246-7; his envoy is dismissed from the Court of France, ii. 248; his marriage with Christina, the niece of the Emperor Charles V. alluded to, ii. 249; death of, ib.
- Shrewsbury, Earl of, Téroouenne besieged by, i. 99; anger of, at the timidity of the Earl of Abergavenny, at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 350.
- Sièvre, M. de, Advocate-General, opposes the registration of the Concordat, i. 260.
- Sion, Cardinal de, his relentless animosity to France alluded to, i. 155; animates the Swiss against the French, i. 181-2; harangues the Swiss, and exhorts them to engage the French, i. 184; revolt of the Swiss against the Cardinal, after the battle of Marignano, i. 197; fight of, with Francesco Sforza, ib.; persuades another body of Swiss mercenaries not to fight against their own countrymen, i. 212; his undying hatred to the French alluded to, i. 223; again induces the Swiss mercenaries to desert the cause of Francis I, i. 408; his efforts to induce the Swiss to desert France alluded to, i. 430.
- Smalkalden, League of, alluded to, ii. 226; declare against Francis I, ii. 284; the Emperor resolves to subjugate the League of, ii. 516.
- Solyman, Sultan of Turkey, attacks the Isle of Rhodes, i. 446; alliance of Francis I. with, alluded to, ii. 356; enters Albania, ib.; his power alluded to, ii. 362; menacing position of, alarms the Pope, ii. 369; power of, after the destruction of the fleet and army of the Emperor Charles V, ii. 435; orders his admiral to cooperate with the French fleet, ii. 455; takes Strigonia and Alba, ii. 466; sends a fleet under Barbarossa to the assistance of Francis, ii. 467.
- Sorbonne, College of, description of, ii. 131; the spies of, alluded to, ii. 132-3; its privileges, ib.
- Souliers, Charles de, one of the hostages delivered to Henry VIII. by Francis I, to secure the payment of 600,000 crowns, i. 294.
- Soyon, M. de, ordered by parliament to present a document to Francis I. respecting the registration of the Concordat, i. 262-3; the King threatens to throw him into the moat, i. 264.
- Spain, Queen Dowager of, see Foix, Germaine de.
- Spires, Charles V convenes a diet at, and enforces the observance of mass and other church ceremonies, ii. 225.
- Spurs, Battle of, why so called, i. 103.
- Squires, Battle of, alluded to, i. 379.
- Suffolk, Brandon, Duke of, espouses the cause of Louis XII. against Henry VIII, i. 100; love of the Princess Mary of England for, alluded to, i. 123-4; foster brother to Henry VIII, ib.; Ambassador at the Court of France, i. 128; warned by Francis I. not to peril his friendship with the King of England, by marrying the Dowager-Queen of France, i. 137; marries the Dowager-Queen, i. 138; reconciled to the King, i. 139; returns to England, ib.; commands 6,000 foot under Francis I, i. 157; his command in the French army alluded to, i. 469; his advice to the King before the battle of Pavia, ii. 26; death of at the battle of Pavia, ii. 40.

- Suffolk, Duke of, at the interview between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 228; receives the collar of St. Michael from Francis I, ii. 229.
- Surrey, Earl of, a commission of Spanish Admiral given to the Earl by the Emperor Charles V. i. 461; destroys several towns on the coasts of Normandy and Brittany, i. 465; joined by the Count de Buren, the Lieutenant-General of the Emperor Charles V. in the Low Countries, i. 466; besieges Hesdin, i. 468; compelled to retreat, i. 468; his wanton cruelties alluded to, i. 469.
- Swiss, the, determine to invade France, i. 112-13; enter into a treaty with the French General at Dijon, i. 114-15; Louis XII. endeavours to conciliate the, i. 116; contribute during the reigns of Louis XI. and Charles VIII. to the success of the French armies, i. 154; excite the indignation of Louis XII, who declines their services, i. 155; threaten Francis I. to invade Burgundy and Dauphiny, i. 156; the confederacy of Leo X. and the Emperor Maximilian against Francis I. alluded to, i. 168; anger of the Swiss troops on the non-arrival of their pay, i. 180; they rob the chest of the papal commissary, and retire to Verceil, ib.; Francis endeavours to conciliate them, but fails through the agency of the Cardinal of Sion, i. 181; attempt to seize the public chest at Buffaloro, i. 182; they evacuate Italy, ib.; inflamed by the eloquence of the Cardinal of Sion, they march upon Marignano to attack the French, i. 185; gallantry of, at battle of Marignano, i. 186-92; they retreat and enter Milan, i. 192; retire to their mountains pursued by D'Alviano, ib.; enormous loss of, ib.; they revolt against the Cardinal Sion after the battle of Marignano, i. 197; the payment of their claims alluded to, i. 210; refuse to act under Maximilian, i. 212; receive an order from the Diet to return home, i. 213; treaty of amity between Switzerland and France, i. 223; recognise the claim of Francis to the Milanese, ib.; desert Marshal Lautrec in Milan, i. 406-8; weary of the war in Italy, under Marshal Lautrec, demand to be led against the enemy, i. 426; disorderly charge of, i. 428; great slaughter of, ib.; desert Marshal Lautrec and escape to their mountains, i. 430; once more desert Francis in his hour of need, ii. 22.
- Talbot, Lord, besieges Têrouenne, i. 99.
- Talmont, Prince de, bravery of, at the battle of Marignano, i. 189; death of, i. 193.
- Tarbes, Bishop of, one of the witnesses to the treaty between Henry VIII. and Francis I. against Spain, ii. 134.
- Tauzannes, Montagnac, dresses himself in the clothes of the Duke de Bourbon, to aid the Duke's escape, i. 489.
- Tavannes, Maréchal de, suppresses the revolt at La Rochelle, ii. 446.
- Taverna, Francisco, envoy from Sforza, Duke of Milan, to Francis I, ii. 246; is dismissed from the French Court, ii. 248.
- Tay-du-Bastard, skirmish of, leads to the death of Gaston de Foix, i. 76.
- Téligny, François de, Sénéchal de Rovergné, defends Têrouenne against the Earl of Shrewsbury and Lord Talbot, i. 99.
- Tende, Count de, pursues the retreating army of Charles V, ii. 331; see note, ib.
- Têrouenne, siege of, alluded to, i. 99; famine in the city of, i. 101; gallantly relieved by the Albanian light-horse, i. 102; capitulates to Henry VIII, and is demolished, i. 112.
- Tonnerre, Count de, death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 33.
- Tortosa, Cardinal of, see Adrian, Bishop of Tortosa.
- Tour-d'Auvergne, Madelaine de la, her marriage with Lorenzo de' Medici, i. 247; see note, ib.; its consequences alluded to, i. 248; her marriage festivities alluded to, ib.; her death, i. 250.
- Tournay, besieged by the Emperor Maximilian and Henry VIII. of England, i. 112; taken by the

- Tournay, continued.
 English King, i. 117; its possession by the English alluded to, i. 288; impolitic measures of Francis I. to the citizens of, i. 314–15.
- Tournon, Cardinal, despatched by the Kings of France and England to threaten the Pope, ii. 234; advises the King to increase the salt-tax, ii. 446; consequences thereof, ib.
- Treaty of the 20th April, 1527, between Henry VIII. and Francis I, conditions of, ii. 134; modification of, ii. 135.
- Tremouille, M. de la, see note, i. 9; appointed to the command of the French armies in Italy, i. 92; captures the principal cities of the Milanese, i. 95; defeat of, at Vivignano, i. 96–7; wounded, ib.; enters into a treaty with the Swiss army at Dijon, i. 113–14; indignation of Louis XII. against, i. 115; reply of, to the Letter of the King, ib.; bravery of, at the battle of Marignano, i. 139; presents himself to the Chamber, and commands the members to register the Concordat, i. 264; in concert with the Duke de Vendôme, defeats the Imperialists near Paris, i. 491; advises the King to raise his camp and meet the Imperialists in the plain, ii. 26; death of, at the battle of Pavia, ii. 32.
- Treves, Archbishop of, see Greiffenklau, Richard de.
- Trevisa, attack of, by the Emperor Maximilian, alluded to, i. 65.
- Triboulet, buffoon to Francis, ii. 386; present at the interview between the King and Madame d'Etampes respecting the safe conduct of Charles through France, ii. 386–7.
- Trivulce, Jean Jacques, Marquis de Vigevano, entertains Louis XII. i. 56, see note, ib.; commands first division of the army of Louis XII. at Venice, i. 62; excites the animosity of Maréchal de Lautrec, and is declared a traitor, i. 281–2; demands an audience of the King, i. 283; the King refuses, and he dies broken-hearted, i. 284.
- Trivulzio, Maréchal de, see Trivulce Jean Jacques.
- Tuileries, origin of the palace of the, i. 337.
- Turanne, Viscount de, one of the witnesses to the treaty between Henry VIII. and Francis I, ii. 134.
- Turin, siege of, raised, ii. 337; exhausted state of the garrison of, alluded to, ii. 361.
- Valaisan, George de Supersax, one of the leaders of the Swiss mercenaries, i. 180.
- Valois, Duke de, see D'Angoulême, Francis, Comte.
 ——— Marguerite de, her birth and education, i. 27; her accomplishments, ib.; her affection for her brother, Francis I, ib.; her attachment for Count Charles de Montpensier, i. 29; her hand demanded in marriage by Henry VII. of England, i. 39; her attachment to Charles de Montpensier alluded to, i. 40; her adventure with Bonnivet alluded to, ib.; originates a singular custom between friends of opposite sexes, i. 41; her character alluded to, ib.; invested with the dignity of Madame by Francis I, i. 143; her creation of Duchess de Berri alluded to, ib.; her emotion on seeing the Constable Bourbon enter the courtyard at Amboise armed for war, i. 164; her love for the Constable Bourbon described, i. 166; her intrigue with Bonnivet alluded to, i. 418; attempts to reconcile Francis I. and the Countess de Châteaubriand, i. 482–3; her interview with Jean de Poitiers, in the forest of Bussy, i. 486; her affection for the Duke de Bourbon, i. 487; indignation of, at the cowardice of her husband, ii. 49; reproaches her husband, ii. 51; exerts herself in behalf of the persecuted Lutherans, ii. 56; obtains the release of Clement Marot, her valet-de-chambre, ib.; protects Guillaume Farel and Jacques Fabri from the Inquisitors, ii. 57; isolation of, at the Court of her mother, the Regent of France, ib.; her attachment to the Countess de Châteaubriand alluded to, ii. 58; her anguish during the captivity of the King, ii. 71; resolves to visit the King in prison, ii. 72; departs for Spain, ib.; lands at Barcelona, and proceeds to Madrid, ii. 78;

- Valois, Marguerite de, continued.
her interview with Francis, ii. 79; her efforts to obtain the release of the King, ii. 80; her love for the King of France alluded to, ib.; her audience with the Emperor, ib.; her spirited remonstrances to Charles, ii. 82-3-4; fails in effecting the release of the King, ii. 85; plans his escape, ib.; her plan betrayed to the Emperor, ii. 86; expostulates with Charles V. on the increased hardships inflicted on her brother, ii. 87; warned by Bourbon that Charles V. meditated her arrest, ib.; escapes to France, ii. 88; her meeting with the King at Bayonne, ii. 96; her person described, ii. 105-6; refuses the hand of Henry VIII, ii. 137-8; marries the King of Navarre, ii. 162; her dislike to the marriage, ii. 163; their issue, ib.; improves the condition of her people, ii. 164; her saloon the resort of talent, ib.; protects the Reformers, ii. 165; causes the Latin prayers of the Church to be translated into French, and is persecuted by the Sorbonne, ii. 166; her fidelity is suspected by the King, ii. 167-8; partially converts the King to Lutheranism, ib.; she is cited to Paris, at the instigation of Cardinals Armagnac and Grammont, on her secession from the Romish Church, ii. 169; her false position, ib.; her efforts to save the persecuted Lutherans alluded to, ii. 209; her influence on Francis misapplied, ii. 263-4; her Court-ladies, ii. 269; arrives at Amboise, ii. 288; tournament in honour of her visit, ib.; disappointed at the refusal of Francis I. to accept the hand of Philip of Spain for her daughter, the Princess of Navarre, ii. 411.
- Vandenesse, Count de, one of the suite of Louis XII, i. 23; see note, ib.; one of the companions of Francis at the Court of Amboise, i. 26; attracts the attention of Louise de Savoie, ib.; detected by the Maréchal de Gié in an intrigue with the mother of Francis, and ordered to quit Amboise, i. 30; takes General d'Alviano prisoner at the battle of Agnadello, i. 63; assumes the command of the French artillery, i. 525; death of, i. 526.
- Vandenesse, Count de, continued.
- Vatican, plundered by Cardinal Colonna, ii. 114.
- Vaudois, massacre of, ii. 518-24.
- Vauguyon, M. de, condemned to "the question," i. 492; ultimately banished to Orleans, i. 493.
- Vega, de la, Garcilasso, death of, ii. 332; see note, ib.
- Velly, Sire de, despatched by Francis to congratulate Charles V. on his victories in Africa, ii. 299; demands an audience of Charles V. on the affront offered by the Emperor to Francis, ii. 303; the Pope endeavours to pacify the envoy, ii. 304-5; reply of, to the Pope, ii. 305.
- Vendôme, Duke de, receives the Princess Mary of England on her landing at Boulogne, i. 125; appointed Governor of the Isle of France by Francis I, i. 144; appointed to the government of Picardy, i. 381; enters Artois and Hainault, i. 394; entrusted with command of the seat of war, i. 466; marches to relieve Têrouenne, i. 467; beats the Imperialists near Paris, i. 491; called to the defence of Paris, i. 508-9; compels the Duke of Norfolk to retreat from Paris, i. 510; his claims upon the throne supported by the people, ii. 52; appointed president of the Council, ib.; at the interview between Francis I. and Henry VIII, ii. 228; entrusted with the protection of the Flemish frontiers, ii. 436; his death alluded to, ii. 456.
- Venice, efforts of Pope Julius II. to subjugate, i. 61; the Venetians attempt to propitiate Germany and Spain, i. 62; despair of the citizens of, at the conquests of Louis XII, i. 64-5; the weakness of the Emperor Maximilian gives them hope, i. 66; the Venetians retake Padua, ib.; partial success of the Venetians against the French, i. 67; state of the territories of, after the peace of Noyon, i. 222; State of, declines to enter into a treaty with France, i. 432; the Venetian states enter into the European league against

- Venice, continued.
 France, i. 444-5; States of, send ambassadors to Henry VIII. on the necessity of preserving the balance of power in Europe, ii. 63; the Pope joins in the league, ib.; States of, enter into a treaty known as the Holy League, ii. 99; object of the League, ii. 100; new league entered into by the States of, with Charles V, alluded to, ii. 300; States of, conclude a treaty of peace with Solymán, ii. 426-7; condemns the assassins of Fregosa and Rincon, ii. 430.
- Verjus, M. de, ordered by Parliament to present a document to Francis I. respecting the registration of the Concordat, i. 262-3; the King threatens to throw him into the castle moat, i. 264.
- Verona, keys of, transferred to the Emperor Maximilian, i. 65; siege of, alluded to, i. 214.
- Vicenza, keys of, transferred to the Emperor Maximilian, i. 65.
- Vied, Hermand, Count de, Archbishop of Cologne, one of the Electors of Germany, see note, i. 299.
- Villa Franca, capture of, i. 178.
- Villalva, Col., alluded to, at St. Jean Pied-de-Port, i. 85.
- Villana, Marquis de, reply of, to Charles V. respecting the Duke de Bourbon, ii. 74.
- Villars, Coteret, alluded to, ii. 222.
- Marquis de, taken prisoner, ii. 355.
- Villebon, Seigneur de, defends St. Pol against the imperialists, ii. 352; see note, ib.; taken prisoner, ii. 353.
- Vinci, Leonardo da, his works in the palace of Chambord alluded to, ii. 127; invited by Francis I. to Court, i. 269; dies in the arms of Francis I, i. 330.
- Visconti, Anchiso, compels Renzo de Céri to raise the siege of Arona, i. 518.
- Vivegano, battle of, described, i. 95-6-7-8.
- Viverots, Sire de, death of, i. 77.
- Voland, Mademoiselle, throws sulphuric acid on her face to avoid the licentious advances of Francis I, i. 12.
- Wartz, Seigneur de, ordered by Francis to keep watch upon the actions of the Duke de Bourbon, i. 477; deceived by the Duke, i. 478.
- Watteville, Jacques de, heads 18,000 Swiss, and invades France, i. 113.
- Wingfield, Sir Richard, instructed by Francis I. to solicit Henry VIII. to stand sponsor to his second son, i. 335; entertains Cardinal Wolsey on his route to France, ii. 135.
- Wirtemburgh, Duke Ulrich de, invades France at the head of a Swiss army, i. 113; solicits the aid of Francis against the aggressions of the Emperor, ii. 249; establishes the reformed religion in his duchy, ii. 250.
- Wolsey, Cardinal, his negotiations respecting the marriage of the Princess Mary of England with Louis XII. alluded to, i. 122; his power alluded to by Francis I. in his instructions to his ambassador, Bonnivet, i. 288; causes himself to be appointed bishop of Tournay, ib.; accepts an annual pension of 12,000 livres in lieu of the bishopric of Tournay, i. 292; enters into a correspondence with Francis I, and advises Henry VIII. to accept the hand of the Dauphin for the Princess Mary, i. 293; his policy respecting Francis I. and Charles V, i. 340-1; his preparations for the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 343; seduced by the promises of Charles V, undertakes to negative the attempts of Francis to secure an alliance with Henry VIII, i. 346; his ostentation, i. 349; suspicious of, at the meeting of the Kings of England and France at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, i. 350; arranges mutual visits between the two Courts, i. 355; at the banquets given by the Kings at Guisnes, i. 360; performs a solemn mass before the Kings of France and England, i. 361; the differences between England and Scotland submitted to the arbitration of the Cardinal and Louise de Savoie, i. 365; the Cardinal appointed to the bishoprics of Bajadoz and Valencia, by Charles V, i. 366; the Cardinal arranges another interview with Henry and the Emperor of Germany, ib.; induces Henry VIII. to violate the pledges given to Francis I, i. 367; visits the Pope at Bruges, during the conference at Calais, i. 382-3; gives a secret pledge to assist the Emperor Charles with 40,000 men, ib.; presides at a second conference at Calais, i. 409; its consequences, i. 410; his crooked policy to secure the Popedom defeated, i. 422; his changed feelings towards Charles V. alluded to, i. 460; receives an assurance from the Emperor of his support on the death of the Pope, i. 461; receives a life pension from the Emperor of 9,000 golden crowns, ib.; defeated in his efforts for the Popedom, i. 516-17; loses faith in the promises of Charles V, ii. 61; his progress from Hampton Court to France described, ii. 135-6; entertained by the King and Louise de Savoie, ii. 137; demands the hand of Marguerite de Valois for Henry VIII, ib.; meets with a refusal, ii. 138; demands the hand of the Princess Rénée for Henry

Wolsey, Cardinal, continued.

Wolsey, Cardinal, continued.

VIII. and is refused, ii. 139; leaves France for England, ib.; entertains Anne de Montmorenci, ambassador from France, ii. 174; his arrest alluded to, ii. 225.
Worcester, Earl of, despatched by Henry VIII. to witness the ceremony of the betrothal of the Dauphin to the Princess Mary of England, and to surrender up the city of Tournay, i. 294-5; his reluctance to deliver up the city of Tournay, i. 295-6; festivities at Paris in honour of, ib.
Worms, Diet at, convoked by the Emperor Charles V. to suppress the doctrines of Luther, i. 370.

Ximénes, Cardinal, Archbishop of Toledo, see note, i. 218; appointed Regent of Spain, i. 219; jealousy of M. de Chièvres of the power of, ib.; his able government alluded to, i. 310; his death, ib.

Zapolski, John de, ambassadors sent by, to Francis I, ii. 227; policy of Francis respecting, alluded to, ib.

The stamped Design used on the cover of this work is copied from a cut in Dibdin's Bibliographical Decameron, where it is given as a specimen of the skill in this kind of ornament possessed by the celebrated Diana of Poitiers,—“in which she has contrived to interweave her initials with those of her royal lover, as well as to introduce the insignia of the heathen goddess whose name she bore.”

THE END.

R. CLAY, PRINTER, BREAD STREET HILL.