

INDEX.

- ABSURDITY is importunate and foolish, N. 168.
 ——— wherein it resembles impudence, ibid.
Action, a necessary qualification in an orator, ibid.
Actors, the consequence of considering their talents, N. 182.
 ——— their chief perfection, N. 167.
Æneas, his descent into, and adventures in, the empire of Death, N. 154.
Æsop, a fable of his applied on the receipt of a letter,
 N. 115.
Afflictions, imaginary, often the most insupportable, N. 146.
Agamemnon, his invective against women, N. 152.
Age, the glory of the present, in regard to England, N. 130.
Album Græcum, prescribed to a sick lap-dog, N. 121.
Aldebrandini, description of a Grecian picture in that palace,
 N. 184.
Allegory, application of one in Homer, N. 146.
Ambition, middle age of man most addicted to it, N. 120.
 ——— in the good becomes true honour, ibid.
Angelo Michael, his picture of the last judgment censured,
 N. 156.
Anger, a tragical instance of surprise in, N. 172.
 ——— its ill consequences, ibid.
Animals, cruelty towards them condemned, N. 134.
Anne, queen, eulogium on her government, N. 130.
Anticyra, an island assigned by the Romans to madmen,
 N. 125.
 ——— compared to Montpelier, ibid.
 ——— its product, ibid.
Aristeus, the character of a man who has the mastery of himself, N. 176.
Arthur, king, the first who sat down to a whole roasted ox,
 N. 148.
Athenians, a remarkable instance of their public spirit and virtue, N. 122.
Avarice, effects of Bickerstaff's discourse thereon, N. 124.
 ——— its region, temple, attendants, adherents, and officers, described, N. 123.

INDEX.

- Avarice, what age of man most devoted to it, N. 120.
 Audience at a play, their general behaviour, N. 122.
 Autumn, lady, her behaviour at church, N. 140.
- BACON, lord, his legacy to his countrymen and foreigners,
 N. 133.
 Bagpipe, a club of them, N. 153.
 ——— to what sort of persons applicable in conversation, ibid.
 Ballance, merchant, his treatment of one who attempted to debauch his wife, N. 136,
 Barbarity, an attendant on tyranny, N. 161.
 Barnes, Joshua, his edition of Homer recommended, N. 143.
 Bats-viols exposed to sale by lottery, N. 166.
 ——— to what sort of persons applied in conversation,
 N. 153.
 ——— where to be found, ibid.
 ——— with what instrument matched, N. 157.
 Bawbles, by whom brought to perfection, N. 142.
 Bear-garden diversions condemned, N. 134.
 Bedlam, distribution of the apartments there, N. 174.
 ——— for whom designed, ibid.
 ——— project for erecting a new one, N. 125.
 Beef, the breakfast of queen Elizabeth's maids of honour,
 N. 148.
 ——— the food of our robust ancestors, ibid.
 Beef-eaters, the order of, ibid.
 Belvidera, a woman of good sense without affectation,
 N. 126.
 Betterton, Mr. the player, an invitation to his benefit play,
 N. 157.
 ——— his death and character, N. 167.
 Bickerstaff, Mr. an adept in astronomical observations,
 N. 124.
 ——— entertained at the house of a friend who eats well, N. 148.
 ——— his amours, N. 117.
 ——— purchases a ticket in the lottery, N. 124.
 ——— received at the play-house with extraordinary civility and distinction, N. 122.
 ——— Margery, methods made use of to divert her from marriage, N. 158.
 ——— Samuel, his advice to his son and daughter,
 N. 189.

INDEX.

- Black Horse ordinary in Holborn, an adventure there, N. 135.
 Bladder and string, modern music, applied, N. 153.
 Bourignon, madame de, founders of the Pietists, her extraordinary gift or talent, N. 126.
 Bribery, a solicitor in the temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 Brutes, cruelty towards them condemned, N. 134.
 Bullock and Penkethman, parallel drawn between them, N. 188.
- CARDARQUE, meaning of that word, N. 171.
 ————— to whom applied, by the emperor of the Mohocks, ibid.
 Cambray, archbishop of, his Telemachus formed in the true spirit of Homer, with a tincture of christianity, N. 156.
 Canes different in the price according to the purchaser's estate, N. 142.
 Careless Husband, a comedy, born within the theatre, N. 182.
 Castabella, an eminent prude, N. 126.
 Cebes, table of, a beautiful allegory, N. 161.
 Cenfor, an officer of that kind very necessary, N. 144.
 ————— Roman and British compared, N. 162.
 Censurers, punished severely after death, N. 156.
 Cervantes, Michael, author of Don Quixot, his exquisite genius and discerning spirit, N. 178.
 Cestus of Venus described, N. 147.
 Chanticleer, Job, his petition, N. 134.
 Charles, the toyman, his great genius, N. 142.
 ————— nice judge of canes, ibid.
 ————— publishes a new edition of his snuff-boxes, ibid.
 Chicken, a modern diet, N. 148.
 Church, indecent and irregular behaviour there, reprov'd, N. 140.
 Cibber, Colley, a celebrated comedian, his talents, N. 182.
 Cicero, his letters to his wife, N. 159.
 City politicians reprov'd, N. 155.
 Coaches, the expence and affectation of them expos'd, N. 144.
 ————— what ones ought to be call'd in, ibid.
 ————— why they should be tax'd, ibid.
 Coach-painting, a method to make it useful, ibid.
 Cobbler on Ludgate-hill, his contrivance to gratify his pride, N. 127.
 Colchester, corporation of, their offers to Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 118.

INDEX.

- Comma, Mrs. a subtle casuist, N. 166.
 Command of temper, the greatest of human perfections,
 N. 176.
 Commerce, a goddess in the region of liberty, N. 161.
 Commonwealth, genius of, described, ibid.
 Competency, a guide in the temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 Complacency, a guide in the temple of Hymen, N. 120.
 Complainers, their importunity, N. 146.
 Complaisance, reciprocal, very necessary in the married state,
 N. 149.
 Confort, female, described, N. 157.
 Contention, a guide in the temple of Hymen, described,
 N. 120.
 Contradiction, an occasion of it, N. 171.
 ————— more odious than calumny, ibid.
 Coquettes, compared to kits, N. 157.
 ————— to prudes, N. 126.
 ————— labyrinth of, N. 120.
 ————— story of a coquette widow, N. 126.
 ————— the most mischievous sect, ibid.
 Corruption, an officer in the temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 Country, the modern entertainments and diversions of it,
 N. 169.
 Country-gentleman, character of a true one, ibid.
 Country-life, the true pleasures thereof, ibid.
 Courant, in what it differs from other newspapers, N. 178.
 Credit, how obtained in the city, N. 176.
 Critics, a description of them, N. 165.
 ————— always bad poets, ibid.
 Cruelty to animals censured, N. 134.
 Cupid, a lady's lap-dog, dangerously ill, N. 121.

 DANCING shoes, to be carried in a stage coach, gratis,
 N. 180.
 Daniel, the historian, account of what provisions were taxed
 in his time, N. 148.
 David, St. his day, why observed by Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 140.
 Daws, honest Icabod, the news-writer, his style of writing,
 N. 154.
 Dead men, account of them, N. 118.
 ————— dressed in lace, &c. contrary to the act, ibid.
 ————— one resuscitated, ibid.
 Dedications, difference between ancient and modern ones,
 N. 177.

INDEX.

- Dedications, nature and abuse of them, N. 177.
 Degeneracy of the age, N. 183.
 Delicates, false, pernicious, N. 148.
 Demosthenes, his speech to the Athenians, N. 183.
 Destinies, their speech and present to Jupiter, N. 146.
 Diet, difference between ancient and modern, N. 164.
 Dimple, lady, her good breeding, N. 166.
 Discourse, different talents in it, N. 153.
 Discretion, a guard to one of Hymen's gates, N. 120.
 Distaff, Jenny, Mr. Bickerstaff's half-sister, sets up an equipage, N. 143.
 Dodwell, Mr. some account of his epistolary discourse, from Pasquin, N. 187.
 Doggett, Mr. the comedian, a letter from him to Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 120.
 ——— his civilities to him at the theatre, N. 122.
 Dog, recipe for a lady's lap-dog, N. 126.
 Dorchester stage coach, advertisement about it, N. 143.
 Dover-cliff described by Shakespear, N. 117.
 Dream of Jupiter, and the destinies, N. 146.
 ——— the band of lovers, N. 120.
 ——— the region of liberty, N. 161.
 ——— the temple of virtue, N. 123.
 Drinking, the vice of the country, N. 169.
 Drum, who may be so called in conversation, and with what other musical instrument matched, N. 153, 157.
 Dulcimer, who to be so accounted, and with what other musical instrument joined, N. 157.
 Dutch, their manner of expressing their wit, N. 129.
- EASTCOURT, Dick, the comedian, Mr. Bickerstaff's apothecary, his benefit play, N. 130.
 Education, regulations therein proposed, N. 189.
 ——— various errors therein, ibid.
 Elpenor, a warning to drunkards, N. 152.
 Elysium joys, described by the author of Telemachus, N. 156.
 England, the glorious figure it made in 1709, N. 130.
 Envy causes distraction, N. 174.
 ——— the wonderful effects of it, ibid.
 Equanimity of temper, the greatest of human perfections,
 N. 176.
 Esquires, why enemies to Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 115.
 Esteem, how distinguished from credit, N. 176.
 Eucrates, effects of the natural softness of his temper, ibid.

INDEX.

- Eustace, Mr. a melancholy instance of heat and passion, N. 172.
 Eutrapelus, mischievous in his presents, N. 151.
 Extortion, office of, in the temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 Eye, language of the, N. 145.
- FARDINGALE, the use of it allowed for a time, N. 121.
 Fashion, by whom accounted the only liberal science, N. 166.
 Female consort, the music of it described, N. 157.
 Fidget, lady, a general visitant, the occasion of her madness, N. 174.
 Flageolet, an instrument in the female consort, how esteemed by that sex, N. 157.
 Flattery, an instance of the ill consequence of flattering women, N. 139.
 Flavia, a coquette, her interview with Myrtillo, the ogler, at the play, N. 145.
 Flea, skeleton of one, N. 119.
 Flute has extraordinary effects in a female consort, N. 157.
 —, with what other instrument matched, ibid.
 Folio, Tom, a broker in learning, account of him and his visit, N. 158.
 ——— his criticism on a passage in Virgil, ibid.
 ——— letter from him, N. 160.
 Footman free from avarice, N. 124.
 Fortitude, remarkable instance of it in a Roman soldier, N. 177.
 ——— when most conspicuous, N. 176.
 Fortune, Bickerstaff's address to her, N. 170.
 ——— emblem of her at the lottery office, ibid.
 ——— way to be above her, ibid.
 Fraud, an officer in the temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 Freethinkers, distinction between ancient and modern, N. 135.
 Friendship, a necessary ingredient in the marriage-state, N. 172.
 ——— the tenderness thereof, ibid.
 Funerals, behaviour at them discovers the state of the mind, N. 184.
 Future-state, Platonic notions concerning the happiness and torments thereof, described by Homer, Virgil, and the author of Telemachus, N. 152, 154, 156.
 Futurity, benefits arising from the prospect of it, N. 156.

INDEX.

- GASCON, adventure of one with a widow, of whose favours he had boasted, N. 126.
 Ghosts, of Anticlea, Ulysses's mother, N. 152.
 ——— of beauties, ibid.
 ——— of heroes, ibid.
 ——— of lovers, N. 154.
 ——— of the damned, N. 152.
 Glory, true, inseparable from true merit, N. 177.
 Gotham petition, N. 141.
 Grandeur, wherein it truly consists, N. 170.
 Green-house, a magnificent one described, N. 179.
 ——— criticisms on its plan, N. 188.
 Grief, the benefit of it, N. 181.
 Gyges, his invisible ring allegorically applied, N. 138.
- HAMMOND, John, recovered his watch, N. 124.
 Handkerchief, religious, much worn in England, N. 187.
 Hannibal, the Carthaginian, his speech upon being called out of Italy, ibid.
 ——— fir, his death, funeral, character, and escutcheon, N. 115.
 Harpichord, the excellency of its music applied to discourse, N. 153.
 ——— with what instrument joined, N. 157.
 Hart, the player, an observation of his on the players, N. 138.
 Hautboy, in a female consort, N. 157.
 ——— matched with the harpichord, ibid.
 History, the usefulness and variety of it, N. 117.
 Homer's description of a future state, N. 152.
 Horace's excellencies considered under different views, N. 173.
 Hornpipe, Lancashire, its part in a female consort, N. 157.
 ——— with what instrument matched, ibid.
 Husband, an ill one a private tyrant, and the greatest affliction that can happen to a woman, N. 149.
 ——— fullen one as bad as a foolish one, ibid.
 ——— what makes an ill one, N. 150.
 Hymen, the god of marriage, a guard at the temple of virtuous love, his habit described, N. 120.
 Hymn to the supreme Being, what, 119.
- JAMBEE, the best sort of canes, N. 142.
 Janglings, matrimonial, N. 149.
 Idolatry, in what manner inverted, N. 127.
- VOL. III. K k

INDEX.

- Jealousy, her garments, complexion, and office, N. 120.
 Jesuits, account of their discipline, N. 168.
 Imperceptibles, natural history of them, N. 119.
 Impudence compared with absurdity, N. 168.
 Incumbent distinguished from a landlord, N. 169.
 Indian kings, their return to the civilities of their landlord,
 N. 171.
 Infipids, who to be accounted of that order, N. 166.
 Juno, her method to regain Jupiter's affection, N. 147.
- KETTLE-DRUM, an instrument in a female concert, N. 157.
 ————— how matched, ibid.
- Kings, wicked, how punished in a future state, N. 156.
 Kit, an instrument in a female consort, N. 157.
 ————— how matched, ibid.
- LAMB, a modern diet, N. 148.
 Landlord distinguished from an incumbent, N. 169.
 Langham, doctor, the astrologer, his peculiar generosity,
 N. 174.
 Letter from an upholsterer to Bickerstaff, N. 160.
 ————— Cicero to Terentia, N. 159.
 ————— corporal W. B. to his wife, N. 164.
 ————— Humdrum to Bickerstaff, N. 153.
 ————— Paquin of Rome to Isaac Bickerstaff of Great Britain, N. 129.
 ————— Pliny to Calphurnia, N. 159.
- Levity, her post in the temple of Hymen, N. 120.
 Libels, panegyrics may be turned into them, N. 177.
 Liberty, its region described, N. 161.
 Life, human, how to be considered, N. 120.
 Lightning, in operas, of what it must be made, N. 137.
 ————— true perfume, where sold, ibid.
- Long, major, advertises his wine vaults, N. 147.
 Lottery, a bad viol to be disposed of by way of, N. 166.
 ————— reflections thereon, N. 124.
- Love, the effects of disappointment therein, N. 185.
 Love-letters, directions for writing them, N. 139.
 Lovemore, a happy husband described, N. 150.
 Lovers, the band of, N. 120.
 Lust, in whom virtuous love, ibid.
- Lute, the part it bears in a consort or conversation, N. 153.
 ————— with what instrument matched, N. 157.
- Lydia, the character of a finished coquette, N. 126.

INDEX.

- MACHIAVEL, an office suited to him in a vision, N. 123.
 ——— author of a mischievous sect, N. 186.
 Madmen, an edifice intended for their reception and cure,
 N. 125.
 ——— who, and whither sent by the Romans, ibid.
 Madnefs, the first symptoms thereof, N. 174.
 Maids of honour, their allowance of beef for breakfast in queen Elizabeth's time, N. 148.
 Marlborough, John, duke of, his merit, N. 131, 137.
 Marriage, an account of it from experience, N. 150.
 ——— table of, N. 157.
 ——— unhappy, from what proceeding, N. 188.
 Marrowbone and cleaver, modern musical instruments,
 N. 153.
 Masquerade, a lady in danger of her life from being left out of one, N. 146.
 Matchlock, major, a member of the Trumpet club in Sheer-lane, N. 132.
 Mechanics in learning, who, N. 173.
 Microscopes, their use, N. 119.
 Minucio, his spirit of contradiction, N. 171.
 Mirtillo, the ogler, has an interview with Flavia at the opera,
 N. 145.
 Modely, Tom, head of the order of insipids, N. 166.
 ——— his knowledge of the fashion, ibid.
 Monarchy, the genius thereof described, N. 161.
 Montpellier, compared to Anticyra, N. 125.
 Mopfa, her good fortune in the lottery prognosticated, N. 124.
 Mourning, a proper dress for a beautiful lady, N. 151.
 Mutton the food of our hardy ancestors, N. 148.

 NATURE, the prevalency of it, N. 172.
 Newspapers hurtful to weak heads, N. 178.
 Nicolini, signior, his excellencies on the stage, N. 115.
 Northern parts fruitful in bagpipes, N. 153.
 Notch, sir Jeffery, a member of the Trumpet club, N. 132.
 Novelists, effects of their writings, N. 178.

 OGLERS complained of by the ladies, N. 145.
 Oppression, an attendant on tyranny, N. 161.
 Orangery described, N. 179.
 Orator, in a night-gown and laced cap, N. 186.
 Ox roasted whole, who first practised it, N. 148.

INDEX.

- PANEGYRIC may be turned into a libel, N. 177.
 Parsimony, a favourite in the temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 Partridge, a letter from him, intimating some hints of refusal, N. 118.
 Pasquin, account of him to prevent mistakes, N. 130.
 — his letters to Bickerstaff, N. 129, 187.
 Passion, a tragical instance of surprize therein, N. 172.
 Paffing-bell, who to be accounted such in conversation, N. 153.
 Pedants, in what light to be considered, N. 158.
 — of several classes, ibid.
 Pedantry in learning compared to hypocrisy in religion, N. 165.
 Penkethman the comedian compared with Bullock, N. 188.
 Persecution an attendant on tyranny, N. 161.
 Petticoat, its cause tried, N. 116.
 Philosophers, minute, an account of some, N. 135.
 Philosophy, not inconsistent with courts and riches, N. 170.
 — the business, use, and excellency of it, ibid.
 — wherein consists its greatest eminence, ibid.
 Picture, ancient one of a wedding described, N. 184.
 — walking one at an auction described, N. 167.
 Plato, his notion of the human soul, N. 154.
 Platonists, their opinions, ibid.
 Players must forget they are before an audience, N. 138.
 — parallels between them, N. 182, 188.
 — why they should be esteemed, N. 182.
 Plenty, a goddess in the region of liberty, N. 161.
 Pliny, his compliment and advice to Trajan, N. 130.
 — his letters to his wife, N. 149.
 Pluto, his palace and throne described, N. 156.
 Politicians, city, reproved, N. 155.
 Pope, his modesty overcome in relation to the Neapolitan horse, N. 129.
 — sick of the tooth-ach, ibid.
 Postman, the extraordinary talent of the author of that paper, N. 178.
 Powell, jun. disputes between him and Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 115.
 — why he locked up the legs of his company, N. 143.
 Present of wine to Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 147.
 Pride makes men odious, and creates envy, N. 186.
 — remarkable instance of it in a cobbler, N. 127.

INDEX.

- Pride, the cause and consequences thereof, N. 127.
 — the chief introduction to madness, ibid.
 Prim, Penelope, the clear-starcher, her petition, N. 118.
 Prize-fighting, and other bear-garden diversions, a reproach to the English nation, N. 134.
 Protestants superior in numbers to the papists, N. 155.
 Prudence in women the same as wisdom in men, N. 172.
 Prudes distinguished from coquettes, N. 126.
 — what part they bear in a female consort, N. 157.
 Public spirit, a great instance of it in Regulus, N. 183.
 Puppets, Mr. Powell's, whence taken, N. 115.
 Purgatory believed by the Platonists, N. 154.
 Puzzlepoft, Ned, how improved in writing, N. 142.
- QUALITY, the weaknesses of persons of, N. 180.
 Quixot, Don, the first symptoms of his madness, N. 178.
- RAGOUTS prejudicial to the stomach, N. 148.
 Rakes, midnight, advice to them, N. 143.
 Rapin, his observations on the English theatre, N. 134.
 Rapine, an attendant on licentiousness, N. 161.
 Rattle-snake, artifice of that animal, N. 145.
 Read, fir William, an eminent oculist, ibid.
 Reading, the exercise of the mind, N. 147.
 Regulus, a great instance of public spirit, N. 183.
 Religious war discussed, N. 155.
 Reptile, Dick, a member of the Sheer-lane club, his character, ibid.
 — his reflections on the abuse of speech, N. 137.
 Reputation, the only just means of obtaining and establishing it, N. 186.
 Respect only to be procured by obligations, N. 180.
 Revenge of two French ladies on a Gascon, N. 126.
 Ring, invifible, N. 138, 139.
 Romans, an instance of their general virtue, N. 122.
 Ruffs recommended to be worn with the fardingale, N. 118.
 — wherein necessary, ibid.
 Rural wits, hunting horns in a male conversation, N. 153.
- SANDFORD the player, what parts he acted well, N. 134.
 Scævola, his great fortitude imitated by a slave on the stage, N. 177.
 Scandal, an universal thirst after it, N. 164.

INDEX.

- Scotland, simplicity in drefs and manners declining there,
 N. 148.
 Scotus, his way of distinguishing mankind, N. 174.
 Screens, why so called, N. 171.
 Seity, what, N. 174.
 Seneca, moderate in great fortune, N. 170.
 Sexes in souls, N. 172.
 — the comparative perfections of them, ibid.
 Shallow, fir Timothy, a customer to Charles Bubbleboy the toyman, N. 142.
 Sheep-biter, why a term of reproach, N. 148.
 Shrove-Tuesday, persecution of cocks on that day condemned,
 N. 134.
 Silence, instances of its significancy, N. 133.
 Slippers, wrought, great eye-fores, N. 143.
 Snuff-box, a new edition of them by Charles Bubbleboy,
 N. 142.
 Socrates, his behaviour at the Athenian theatre, N. 122.
 — what doctrine he laboured to inculcate, N. 135.
 Softly, Ned, a very pretty poet, N. 163.
 — sonnet by him, ibid.
 Speech, reflections on the abuse of it, N. 137.
 Stage, or theatre, the convenience, use, and advantage of one, when under proper regulation, N. 182.
 Statira, account of her distrefs, N. 128.
 Stocking, the custom of throwing it at weddings condemned,
 N. 184.
 Story-tellers, their employment in Mr. Bickerstaff's Bedlam,
 N. 174.
 — why accounted bagpipes in conversation, N. 153.
 Summer-house described, N. 179.
 — the plan of one criticised, N. 188.
 Swearing, a folly without temptation, N. 137.

 TABLE, who keeps the best, N. 148.
 Tea, not used in the time of queen Elizabeth, ibid.
 Telemachus, his discoveries in the regions of Death, N. 156.
 Temper, command of it, the greatest human perfection,
 N. 176.
 Temple of Avarice, N. 123.
 — Honour, ibid.
 — Hymen, N. 120.
 — Luft, ibid.

INDEX.

- Temple of Vanity, N. 123.
 Virtue, ibid.
 Theatres, English, censured, N. 134.
 Timoleon, his discourse concerning honour, and titles, N. 171.
 Tintoret, Tom, the vintner, instances of his art in colouring liquors, N. 131.
 Tiptoe, Mr. a stage-coach to his dancing-school advertised,
 N. 180.
 Tiresias, his advice to Ulysses, N. 152.
 Titles, the significancy and abuse of them, N. 171.
 Tittle, sir Timothy, the proud critic, his indignation at, and discourse with, his mistress, concerning a new play, N. 165.
 Toasts, a new religious order in England, N. 129.
 Tories, a new religious order in England, ibid.
 Toys, by whom brought into fashion, N. 142.
 Trumpet, who to be accounted such in conversation, N. 153.
 Trumpet-club in Sheer-lane, characterized, N. 132.
 Tweezer-cafes, incomparable, where sold, N. 142.

 VARNISH, Tom, his adventure with a merchant's wife,
 N. 136.
 Veal, a modern diet, N. 148.
 Verses by Boileau, N. 158.
 — from Dryden, N. 133.
 — Milton, N. 149.
 — Shakespear, N. 117, 137, 167, 188.
 — on Dover cliff, by Shakespear, N. 117.
 — to Mira, from Ned Softly, with remarks, N. 163.
 Vicissitudes of human life considered, N. 170.
 Violins, who to be accounted such in conversation, N. 153.
 — with what instrument matched, N. 157.
 Virgil, his beautiful allegories founded on the Platonic philosophy, N. 154.
 Virginal, who so accounted in female conversation, N. 157.
 — with what instrument matched, ibid.
 Visits, when unseasonable, N. 160.
 Ulysses, his adventures in the regions of the dead, N. 152.
 Upholders company, their civility to Mr. Bickerstaff, N. 122.
 Upholsterer, Mr. Bickerstaff's neighbour, the great newf-monger, N. 155.
 — carried to Bedlam, N. 178.
 — his conversation in the park, N. 155.
 — his early visit, N. 160.

INDEX.

- Upholsterer, letter of news from him, N. 160.
 ——— much esteemed in alley coffee-houses, N. 178.
- WAGS, the lowest pretenders to wit, N. 184.
 Waiting-maids, a petition from them, N. 136.
 War, religious, discussed, N. 155.
 Welch-harp, an instrument in a female consort, N. 157.
 ——— matched with a trumpet, ibid.
 Whetters reproved, N. 138.
 Whigs, a new religious order in England, N. 129.
 Wine, mischiefs attending the adulterating of it, N. 131.
 ——— presented to Mr. Bickerstaff, and the reason of it,
 N. 147.
 Wine-brewers, a request to them, N. 131.
 ——— the fraternity tried, ibid.
 Winter-gardens described and recommended, N. 179.
 Women, have ill fancies in their dress, N. 151.
 ——— instructions to unmarried ones, N. 184.
 ——— the happiness or misfortunes of mankind depend on their education, N. 141.

END OF THE THIRD VOLUME.